Racine, Wis.—Independent theatres in this city, like those in other towns in Wisconsin, are fighting to tide themselves over the warm summer months in the hope that business will pick up with the fall. Many houses in the state are playing in the red at the present time, but they are confident that with the advent of cooler weather, business will pick up.

A number of the Racine houses are offering special inducements to draw in business. The Uptown, operated by the Racine Amusement Co., is offering reduced prices between 6:15 and 7 p. m. and advertising "All Can Afford 'Movies' Now."

The Capitol, operated by the same concern, offers a free ticket in its newspaper advertising, which is good for one admission with one paid admission on Monday nights.

The Crown and Granada, independent houses, are making similar offers on other nights during the week besides Monday. In addition they are giving free glassware and free dishes on other nights during the week. The Douglas, another independent house, has been offering similar concessions.

Milwaukee Showmen Wait Standard Time Return

Milwaukee—RKO's Palace-Orpheum has dropped its prices affecting all performances. Prices have been reduced 10 to 25 cents, with a bottom price of 25 and a top of 50 cents. RKO's Riverside here has the same top and bottom prices.

L. K. Brin's Garden and Majestic are the two other houses in downtown Milwaukee to cut their prices several months ago. About 15 neighborhood theatres of the smaller class are now charging 10 cents for all performances, with some asking 15 or 20 cents on special pictures.

According to Henry A. Staab, executive secretary of the Wisconsin association, Milwaukee theatres are waiting for the return to standard time, which will take place Sept. 1. Daylight saving time in Milwaukee has affected the box-office receipts, Staab stated, and four neighborhood houses have closed because receipts were too low to warrant continuing, but these theatres will reopen in September.

Hones' Vigilance Wins Delay on New Fire Laws

Seattle—Vigilance of James M. Hone, executive secretary of Allied Amusement of the Northwest, saved local theatre operators from added "grief" last week. Hone's close interest in activities at the Seattle city hall brought to light some sections in a proposed amendment to the city fire code that would have been extremely detrimental to local theatre interests. Through Hone's speedy action, passage of the new code was delayed for the present, and the theatre men are to have a hearing before the city council prior to that body's final vote on the matter.

Australia Increases Duty

Sydney, Australia—The government grab on overseas remittances has long been in the air and was expected. The increased duty and primage came as an unpleasant shock more especially to independents who are affected not only by the added cost the industry has been called upon to bear, but also because new wage taxes will necessarily limit the spending power of the public. There is this point to be considered as well. Although there are almost 850 silent houses running in Australia, distributors have long maintained that it doesn't pay to import silent prints owing to heavy duty, overhead and small returns. The latest political poultice or footage will obviously curtail the supply of silent versions leading the smaller showmen who haven't yet wired to believe that their existence is seriously threatened.

Encouragement of Scenarists Needed?

Hollywood—Sponsors of good literature and admirers of real artistic endeavor offer worth while prize inducements for the purpose of promoting better drama, and the same steps should be taken to give scenario writers incentive for greater things in the field of screen writing. This opinion was voiced by Wallace Smith, author and scenarist, who believes that "the author who independently tries to write high-class screen stories needs encouragement similar to that extended to playwrights if the plane of screen writing is to be elevated to a better standard.

"One might say that the emolument he receives from the producer should suffice, but there is a tremendous amount of incentive for him in the opportunity to earn wide recognition which comes with the special and honorary selection of his work by these awards. The cinema is now developing standards by which scenarios can be judged as to their artistic and technical merit and this development would be greatly accelerated by the establishment of some fund for a special award each year," concluded Smith.

Indiana Warner Firm

Indianapolis—Articles of incorporation have been filed with the secretary of state by the Warner Brothers Theatres, having a principal place of business in this city. The corporation has an initial capital stock of 200 shares having no declared par value and is formed to do a general theatrical management business. The first board of directors is composed of J. S. White, Edward J. Boleman and Eileen M. Scanlon.

Seeking "Daddy Long Legs"

Hollywood—Phil Goldstone is trying to obtain the rights to "Daddy Long Legs," which he will make in talker form with Anita Louise, 15-year-old miss signed recently by Tiffany, in the featured spot. The youthful played is said to look very much like Mary Pickford.

Capital Fighting Union Demands; Contracts Expire

Washington—Musicless picture theatres in the capital will be more the rule than the exception after midnight of Aug. 31. At that time the agreement between the theatres and the unions will expire and, aside from Loew's Palace and the Fox theatres, no effort will be made to provide for the present employment of orchestras.

The present agreement has been in effect for three years and contains a number of provisions distasteful to the exhibitors in view of the present condition of business. The Fox orchestra numbers about 35 members and that of the Palace about 20.

Union Refuses Contract

The union officials have refused to negotiate a new contract with the managers' association, as such, unless it is stated by the latter who are to handle the matter and who will employ orchestras. The managers thus far have demanded the abrogation of this rule and of that which sets forth the minimum number of men that may be employed in any house. The flat scale is $75 per week with additional payments for all sorts of extras. These rates the musicians want retained.

Two weeks' notice of the abrogation of an existing contract with the stage hands also has been served on that union by some of the theatres. That will necessitate the making of a new trade pact which will be conditioned on a new set of terms.

Houses dispensing with music will employ orchestras, with such numbers of members as they deem desirable, and stage hands in similar manner whenever putting on stage shows.

Censorship Farce Is Continued by Anzacs

Sydney—The censorship farce continues. After banning "Lummox" last week and overriding the commonwealth, authorities by so doing the N. S. W. censorship body, consisting of a police officer and another public servant, has called in 17 productions for review. Most likely film to go by the board is "Ship from Shanghai," which has already been released in about 70 city and suburban shows.

Acting Minister for Customs Frank Forde, in conference with the exhibitors' secretary and member of the state censorship advisory committee, W. J. Howe, heard strong recommendations for alterations to the existing system of censorship, in particular the appointment of an appeal board, with both distributor and exhibitor representatives.

"Lummox" was given strong praise by the commonwealth appeal board in defending its action.

Australian "Labs" Boom

Sydney—Action of the government in raising the duty on foreign films has brought about unprecedented activity in Australian studios. Several expect to expand considerably.

Out of Game, but Still Kicking!

Chicago—Hal Young is sponsoring the Port of Missing Exhibitors, designed to furnish information concerning the whereabouts and activities of exhibitors who have disappeared from the local scene. Here's some help:

John Bobeng, former manager of the Armitage, now selling Fords for a West Side agency, Clyde Elliott, former manager of the Evanston, now managing novelty acts. (His most recent was the Hunter Bros., endurance flyers.) Joe Friedman, manager of the celebrated Players' Exchange here at one time, now selling securities on La Salle St. A. F. Gregory, formerly of Gregory and Bernasek Theatre Corp. building apartments in the west suburbs. Frank Evans, former manager of the La Grange, selling lobby acts on the West Coast.

Taylor Presides at "U" District Meet

Chicago—A district sales meeting of Universal branch managers was held here Saturday. Representatives from St. Louis, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Des Moines, Kansas City, Denver, Detroit, Indianapolis and Chicago were in attendance at the meeting, which was presided over by Harry Taylor, western sales director. Sales policies affecting the company's new product were discussed.

Morris Stein Appointed To Toronto District Post

Toronto—First shakeup of managers of the Famous Canadian Corp. chain since its absorption by Paramount Publix, affect the Tivoli and Imperial here. Morris Stein of the latter has been named supervisor of theatres in the Toronto district and is succeeded by Thomas Daley, for years in charge of the Tivoli. James Lynch, manager of the Runnymede and formerly of Regina, is new manager of the Tivoli, while W. G. Griffiths has succeeded him at the Runnymede.

Postpone Productions

Hollywood—Since the introduction of talkers, there has been a great increase in the number of pictures abandoned while still in script form. M-G-M has laid aside plans to re-make "Never the Twain Shall Meet" until satisfactory script can be secured, and Director Lionel Barrymore will be given another assignment. A few months ago, this company also shelved the story on "Oliver Twist." First National has discontinued preparations for the re-make of "Captain Blood."

High and Low On Music Row

THE predictions of the boys who were left behind when most of their co-writers were signed to go to the Coast have proved to be more than merely a case of "sour grapes." The songsters who have returned to what is left of tin pan alley include Al Bryan, M. K. Jerome, Ed G. Nelson, J. Russel Robinson, Pete Wendling, the Washington, Magidson & Cleary trio, Con Conrad, Max Rich and Abner Silver. And with Warners having bought out several contracts, it looks like there will be another grand homecoming of the prodigal songsters.

According to Sam Serwer, energetic impresario for Warner music subsidiaries, there is a Mardi Gras spirit prevailing among the Witmark fold due to the fact that Witmark will publish the songs from the new Al Jolson picture, "Big Boy." The songs are: "Tomorrow Is Another Day," "Liza Lee," "Little Sunshine" and "Hooray for Baby and Me," written by the two teams of Mitchell, Gottler & Meyer and Green & Stept. "Dancing With Tears in My Eyes," no doubt, is another cause for gaiety for the Witmark disciples.

A merger of two famous "tin alleys" has been consummated in the establishing of the new music publishing firm of Green & Green (John and Mac), who incidentally are brothers of Buddy Green. Johnny Green, who was formerly a strong contender for the bantamweight championship of the world, has forsaken "tin ear alley" for "tin pan alley" and already has a hit song in his firm's initial venture, "Oh, How I Cried the Morning After," written by Will Gould, newspaper cartoonist.

She may not be one of the big buyers of sheet music, but Nancy Carroll sure does love the song, "Exactly Like You," written by Dorothy Fields and Jimmy McHugh and published by Shapiro-Bernstein. How do we know? Well, during the filming of Miss Carroll's latest picture at the Paramount New York studio she was heard to sing nothin' else but.

Jean Herbert, popular song writer and for the past year special material writer for all DeSylva, Brown & Henderson songs, has terminated his contract and may join the staff of a new low-priced music concern headed by Arthur Carter. Jean's writings have filled three volumes.

They say Quaint

WITH interviews, lecture engagements and luncheons, the Russian movie director, Sergei Eisenstein, is being welcomed to the country. Mr. Eisenstein has been loaned by the Soviet Government to that old radical group, Paramount, and he had hardly set foot on our Republican soil before he was spanned for banquets and speeches and toured around the town in Rolls-Royces by the local proletariat. The Amtorg Trading Company, the Amkino Movie Company and even their government may be suffering under the delusion that this sudden dancing in the street over Russian art is merely a prelude to a local revolution, but if they have followed our enthusiasm during the post-war period they may discover that we have passed rapidly from Mah Jong and the promotion of Negro art into a Soviet trance without danger to the Republican party, and Mr. Eisenstein would do well to sell short while the market is high.

While I do not share the local opinion that Eisenstein is the messiah of the infant industry, his work has been so little distributed over the country it deserves praise. His latest production, "Old and New," is by far the best thing he has done. It is admittedly propaganda, a lecture to the slow-witted habitats of the steppes on the blessings of co-operative farming. Eisenstein makes it palatable as possible by grouping faces and figures against setting suns, decayed hovels; and it is this knack of design and photography that has brought him deserving fame. His method is simple—his characters are used as dummies, pigments in his color scheme. However, Murnau used practically the same method in "Sunrise"; and Chaplin, with old-fashioned equipment, was seeking this effect in "A Woman of Paris." If the best directors in Hollywood were given carte blanche, allowed to pick their cast from the population of the entire country as the Soviet allows its number one director, there is little doubt that Lubitsch, Vidor, and a half dozen men could give the Russians real competition at their own game.

While Eisenstein does not possess a startling new technique, the present Russian hysteria has so affected the producers they will let him work unhindered on the Gold Coast, and whatever he does will be worth seeing. To me the sight of hundreds of International Harvesters turned over to millions of farmers producing crops co-operatively was more significant than the beautiful designs of Eisenstein, and if you want a good tip on the next war to end competition, try to see "Old and New."—Judge.

A young couple, entertaining a prim and slightly absent-minded maiden aunt from Nebraska, were astonished and aghast the other night when, some one mentioning speakeasies, the dear old lady brightened and was suddenly all interest. I understand," she continued, and allowed her hearers to relax, "they're so much better than the old silent movies."—New Yorker.

ONE of the things that the producer and agents should work out is some of the existing contracts between actors and agents which are causing certain artists to lose work because their agents are not in the "In Good" class with the studios.

Some artists have been out of work for almost a year, and have asked for their release from their agents, and have been refused. This, we feel, is a restraint of trade, and should be stopped if there is to be a more mutual understanding between all concerned.

Chiseling agents who have too many artists on their lists, should free themselves of some of these contracts, before they hit back at them and drag them down into the category of "in-bad agents," with both studios and artists.

Actors are entitled to make a living, and if an agent or representative finds him or herself in-bad, and they can't help their artists, they ought to be big enough to pass them along to some one else, or at least split the commissions with the agents who can put over the deals.—Filmograph, Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD is fast becoming the literati center of the world if the number of writers gathered there means anything. F. J. Rembusch has broken into the limelight again by charging that Calvin Coolidge, while President, was responsible, "that the country is divided into two classes, of millionaire and billionaire lords and poverty-stricken paupers." He also takes a shot at the Hays organization, charging that it has become in a sense a bandit monopoly and that it has driven the independent producer from the field.

Rembush has been more or less notorious in the industry for a score of years. He has been on every side of every question that has arisen and he has the proud distinction of never having stayed put on any. He has never shown any of the qualities of leadership, rather those of the common scold, the fellow that can always suggest a way of pulling down, but never building up. . . .

After some 18 years, I am still wondering why some exhibitors and their divisional superiors fail to differentiate between a picture deserving of exploitation and increased advertising and those which are not.

Repeatedly, in the past and in the present, I have seen high-pressure tactics employed to put over a picture which was below average. Stunts and tie-ups which should have been saved for a superior product have been wasted upon weak programs; true, they may have netted newspaper space, and brought a few hundred people to the box office. But, if you ask me, they were merely a few hundred more to be disappointed.

Chain executives, seeking the reason for red entries, mighty study the appropriations for newspaper advertising. To splurge on weak sisters is as suicidal as to use uniform space for good, bad and indifferent pictures. The fixed advertising appropriation is a curse.—Bahn in Syracuse Herald.

Charlie Chaplin's favorite amusement is playing tennis. He has been known to let production go hang for an indefinite period while shooting a picture just to get in some extra hours on the courts. But he thoroughly despises losing. In tennis as in the making of comedies he can not bear to have another name before his own.

The fact is that Charlie doesn't play a bangup game, hence his opponents have to be hand-picked. There are three Hollywood Japanese who are his favorite antagonists. IN adapting the play, "Let Us Be Gay," to the screen, the producers followed the law of the movies and sacrificed subtlety in an earnest effort to produce a box-office hit for theatre owners in the great open spaces where men are men and comedy is a kick in the pants. Mr. Charles Chaplin will be delighted that, in spite of the infrequency of his films, it is evident that people still remember him.—London Opinion.

DO you remember the good old days, years and years and years ago, it seems, when Broadway was lined with picture houses that played the old-fashioned silent "movies"; when theatre orchestras were orchestras and not tinny, honking machines, and when the silent captions expressed gentle platitudes which no up-to-date "talkies" actor would dare murmur to a sound-recording machine? The days of Mary Pickford and of Charlie Chaplin and of Valentino; the days when the horsemen rode across the plains limned against a Western sky too perfect for life and much too remote for any sound accompaniment? Sure, we all remember them, and David Belasco says the good old days are coming back.

Mr. Belasco, in fact, says that the talking pictures are going out. We doubt that. The "talkies" are still in their infancy, and it is a little early to predict what they may be when they grow up. All we are sure of is that some of us welcome the occasional opportunities to see the old silent films and that the producers may well discover that their sudden, hysterical decision to cut out all the "mutes" and devote themselves exclusively to talking pictures was a mistake. "If I were younger and had plenty of money," says Mr. Belasco, "I would go into the production of silent pictures. That is the great field for the right man today. . . . The silent picture was one of the most interesting developments in the field of entertainment. It has deteriorated from an art to a nuisance with the introduction of the 'squawker'." There seem still to be some thousands who rush nightly to listen to the "nuisances"; but Mr. Belasco is surely right that the novelty of sound has worn off and that there is a public for good, straight "movies." Within a year or two, we have little doubt, some of the Hollywood producers will believe it, too, and try it out. And the public which will respond will not be merely the public which always responds to the call of curious, oldtime stuff—it will include also a vast public that was awakening to a new film art.

The most curious thing about it is that those good old days before the "talkies," the days of the early American era on the screen, were still with us less than two years ago.—N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

THE

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

A.C. Current and Voltage—According to the representation of D.C. current and voltage, any value, whatever it may be remains constant. Hence, if some device is arranged whereby the magnitude of current of voltage may be measured, it will indicate a steady reading. If it is a device which employs a needle or pointer which deflects according to the intensity of the voltage or the value of the current that deflection will remain steady because the voltage is steady.

A comparison between the voltage and current curves, if we may call them by that name, of the D.C. and the A.C. system is very apt to raise the issue relating to A.C. current. According to the wave form, the current or voltage, whichever is being considered, is steady but for an instant. It is continually varying between zero and maximum. The fact that the direction of flow reverses can be classed as secondary at this time. We can appreciate that a steady amount of current will do a certain amount of work, cause a certain amount of heat in a wire. But what about a varying current; a current which remains constant at one value but for a moment? If we so choose we can also include the possible effect of a current which is continually changing its direction of flow. Hence two questions arise. First, the means of determining the work done and second, the effect of the current reversal.

We know that A.C. does work. We see that every day in various forms. This is accomplished despite the fact that during each cycle of current starting at zero, we have two points of maximum potential and three points of zero potential. There must be some value of voltage or current which would be the effective value or the value recognized as representing that which causes work to be done or does work. The method of arriving at a definite numerical basis for a certain value of current or voltage is to consider the heat generated by the current flowing through a resistance. The reason for this is the same which allows the designation of the potential values and which allows a comparison between D.C. and A.C. In words it is:

The heat produced in a resistance is independent of the direction of the current flow. This is known in Joule's law. It clears up the question caused by the reversal of the current. According to the above, the heat generated in a resistance is not influenced by the direction of the flow of the current through that resistance. This, of course, means that it is not influenced by the way the potential is applied to that resistance, whether one end is positive or negative. No matter what the direction of the current, the heat generated remains the same assuming that a definite value of current is being considered.

Now, one need not be an engineer to appreciate that if a source which is causing heat varies in a definite manner in a definite period of time, the heat generated will likewise vary. If a source of alternating current causing current such as that shown in figure 43 is connected to a resistance and, if we grant that heat is generated, the degree of heat will naturally vary. If any one amount of current will cause a certain amount of heat, variation in current will cause variation in heat or temperature. If this temperature is interpreted to signify illumination of a lamp filament, variation in current will cause variation and heat and concurrent will cause variation in heat and consequents variation in temperature of the fila-relatively simple to comprehend that two other items must be considered in this phenomenon.

First, the device or structure being heated, and second, the periodicity of the variation. If the structure being heated is such that once heated it retains its heat for a long time, instantaneous variations in temperature will have very little effect. This is so because once heated the structure retains its heat during the period that the current is decreasing. Such is evident in the normal electric iron operated from the A.C. mains.

As to lamps, there is an instantaneous variation in temperature, but because of the very short period between the increase and decrease of current upon 60 cycle lines the eye does not discern a fluctuation. Such fluctuation, however, is evident when lights are operated upon 25 cycle lines. Operation of lights upon such lines results in a definite and annoying flicker.

Based upon the relation between heat generated and current flow it is possible to compare A.C. with D.C. In other words, a constant value D.C. current will produce a certain definite amount of heat in a specified resistance. If alternating current of a certain peak or maximum value will cause the same amount of heat in a certain resistance, it is possible to decide upon the effective value of that current by comparing it with the magnitude of D.C. The value of alternating current will naturally lie between zero and maximum. It cannot be the latter because the current is at that value for but an instant. Since the A.C. current produces the same heat as a definite amount of D.C., the magnitude of the D.C. current in question can be applied as being the effective value of the alternating current. Thus,

An alternating current is said to have an effective value of 1 ampere if it produces the same heating effect as 1 ampere of direct current.

Now, we can make several statements based upon the above law of comparison. First, that the effective value represents work. Second, that there is a definite relation between the peak and the effective values, since one represents the moment of maximum current and heat and the other represents a value which includes all the moments. This value is not the average value of current.

The aforementioned law is also related to another, that,

The heat generated in a resistance is proportional to the square of the current. From this we can solve for the effective value of current and also show the relation between the peak and the effective value. While these two quantities are allied, the peak value is of little consequence when working with current, for reasons which will be stated, but the relation between peak and effective values of voltage is of greater consequence. The peak value of voltage has great destructive powers.

Let us now combine the law relative to heat and direction of current flow and the relation between heat and current. We show in Figure 44 a cycle of alternating current. Im is the maximum, or peak value of current. If this current is caused to flow through a resistance R as in Figure 44A, the power in R at the point Im will be

$$Im^2R$$

At some other instance, say I', the power will be

$$I'^2R$$

If we select another point, say I'', then the power in R will be

$$I''^2R$$

This power is, of course, converted into heat, and by virtue of the law previously stated we can draw a curve to show the power in the circuit or for that matter the heat in R during the complete cycle. This is shown in Figure 45 as the heavy line always above the zero line. The reason for this is that the power or the heat in R is not influenced by the direction of the current. Suppose that we now subdivide an alternation into say 60 divisions of 3 degrees each, there being 180 degrees in each alternation. If we call these values i_1, i_2, i_3, i_4..... etc., the average rate at which power is converted into heat would then be the average or i_1^2R, i_2^2R, i_3^2R, i_4^2R, etc. . This is the same as the average of $(i_1^2+i_2^2+i_3^2+i_4^2) \times R$. Then

$$I^2R = \text{average } (i_1^2+i_2^2+i_3^2+i_4^2) \times R \quad (40)$$

and

$$I = \sqrt{\text{average } (i_1^2+i_2^2+i_3^2+i_4^2)} \quad (41)$$

This value of I is the effective value of current; or the effective value of current is equal to the square root of the mean of the squares of the instantaneous values of current. Let us see just what this means. With a definite maximum value for I, the value of i is

$$i = I_m \sin \phi \quad (42)$$

and if we mark off five values for ϕ, say 15°, 30°, 45°, 60° and 75° and know the value of I_m we can determine the effective value of current. As is evident in equation (42) the instantaneous values of current vary with respect to I_m as the sin of the angle. Let us say that the maximum current I_m is 1 ampere. (This is not the equivalent of 1 ampere D.C. as far as heating effect is concerned). According to a table of sines and cosines (contained in all mathematical and engineering handbooks) sin 15° = .2588, sin 30° = .50, sin 45° = .707, sin 60° = .866 and sin 75° = .9659 and since the instantaneous value of current for i at ϕ = 15° is

$$i = I_m \sin \phi$$

THE

By John F. Rider

and, according to the same method of calculation and substituting the sin of the various angles into equation 42, the instantaneous values of current for the degrees stated, with a maximum of 1 ampere are

$i_3 = .707$
$i_4 = .855$
$i_5 = .9659$

To solve for the effective value we must determine the mean of the squares of the instantaneous values of current. Hence, we must square the values of i_1, i_2, i_3,....etc. We do this and the following are the quantities

$i_2^2 = .25$
$i_3^2 = .499$
$i_4^2 = .75$
$i_5^2 = .94$

and the sum of the squares is 2.506, which we may say is 2.50. It now is necessary to determine the arithmetical mean or simple average of the sum of the squares. We selected five points along the curve in one alternation. Hence, we divide the total by 5 or

$2.50 / 5 = .5$

The effective value of current is equal to the square root of the mean of the squares of the instantaneous values, or

$= .707$ ampere.

(If one attempts to check the above computations he will find a slight discrepancy in the values selected as the squares of the instantaneous values. In order to arrive at the exact value it is necessary to compute the instantaneous values of current for very minute variations or fractions of a degree. The above, however, is sufficient for our purpose.)

Accordingly, it is possible to state that

$$I \text{ eff} = I_m \times .707 \qquad (43)$$

The solution completed in equation 43 is the most important consideration, that is the .707 relation. Hence, alternating current with a maximum or peak value of 1 ampere will produce the same heat in a resistance as .707 amperes D.C. or the effective value of that current is .707 ampere. The above relation may be expressed in another manner without solving for the squares of the instantaneous values or

$$= 0.707\ I_m$$

Whatever the expression, the multiplying factor .707 applies only to a sin wave, and, by virtue of the design of modern indicating instruments, is the value shown upon the meter. In other words, an alternating current meter indicates effective values of current. If a meter indicates .5 ampere, that value is the effective value of current. The maximum or peak value would be higher, but of no consequence. While the multiplying factor .707 applies only to a sine wave, the meter indicates the effective value no matter what the shape of the wave. This matter of complex waveform will be dealt with later in the course.

Knowing the effective value of current, as indicated upon a meter it is a simple matter to compute the peak or maximum value. It is

$$I_m = I \text{ eff} \times \sqrt{2} = I \text{ eff} \times 1.414 \qquad (45)$$

Thus, an effective value of 1 ampere means a peak or maximum value of $1 \times 1.414 = 1.414$ ampere.

The relation between peak and effective values of alternating current exists when voltage is involved, and

$$E_{eff} = E_m / \sqrt{2} = E_m \times .707 \qquad (46a)$$

$$E_m = E_{eff} \times \sqrt{2} = E \text{ eff} \times 1.414 \qquad (47)$$

Thus, a maximum voltage of 1,000 volts A.C. means an effective voltage of 707 volts, the value which would be indicated upon an A.C. voltmeter.

While current heats a conductor, the effective value is the important item. In voltage considerations, however, we are obliged to consider both the peak and the effective values. To distinguish between the two we can say that the effective value is the quantity representative of the work being accomplished, but the peak value can do harm unless recognized. Potential has the power of breaking down insulation, arcing across an open space, etc., and one must recognize the fact that the peak or maximum value of potential can rupture insulation just as easily as the effective value. It is, therefore, imperative to remember when working with devices subject to injury by potential that the maximum potential in the circuit is greater than that indicated upon the voltmeter. Thus devices subject to potential must be selected to withstand the peak potential and not the effective value. Such devices are vacuum tubes, condensers, insulation, etc.

It might be well at this time to elaborate a bit upon the relation between peak and effective values of potential and potential operated devices. One can readily realize that every device which carries current is at the same time subjected to potential strains. But if the operation of the device depends upon the heating property of the peak, value of voltage is of little consequence. This is true because the peak value of voltage applied to that device causes the flow of a peak value of current, but it is the effective value of current which does the work, hence the peak value of voltage is automatically discounted.

If, however, the effective value of voltage is so great that it causes an excessive effective value of current to flow through the conductor, damage due to excessive heating because of the high current will result. As an example we can consider an ordinary amplifying tube filament operated at 2.25 volts and 1.75 amperes. These are the effective or root mean square (r.m.s) values. The term root mean square is another expression for effective value based upon the method of deriving at the effective value; viz, the square root of the mean of the squares of the instantaneous values.

Referring again to the filament mentioned, the current rating of 1.75 amperes is based upon the selection of the filament that its current carrying capacity and the correct temperature at this value of current flow. The voltage is, of course, due to the resistance of the filament and the pressure required to cause the correct value of current flow through the filament. The peak value of current in this circuit is

$I_m = 1.75 \times 1.414$

and the peak or maximum value of potential is according to equation 47

$E_m = 2.25 \times 1.414$
$= 3.18$ volts

If the effective value of voltage is increased to say 5 volts, the current through the filament will be increased to such an extent that the excessive heat will burn out the filament. The high voltage causes the high current flow, but the damage is due to the excessive heat generated in the filament and not to the disruptive powers of the voltage.

On the other hand, let us consider a voltage applied between two points which are separated by means of a later or rubber or linen paper, the insulation between two wires in a cable, as shown in Figures 46 and 46A. The latter figure shows a cross-section view of the paper surrounding the two wires. As was stated in one of the early lessons devoted to matter, the insulation property of a material is due to the electronic affinity of the atom. The electron in the atom is moved or displaced but the affinity is so great that the electron cannot move from atom to atom. That is, unless the potential is so great as to break down that structure.

The potential found across the wires 1 and 2 separated by the insulation 3 and 4 causes a displacement of the electrons in that insulator. This value of potential is, of course, the limit allowed by the design of the wire cable. Not so much the current carrying capacity of the wires themselves but the insulating properties or dielectric properties of the separating mediums 3 and 4. Suppose that the voltage rating is 600 volts r.m.s. This means that the peak value of voltage in the circuit according to equation 47 will be 848.8 volts.

Rating the cable at 600 volts r.m.s. automatically includes the peak voltage of 848.8 volts. If we now increase the effective value to say, 850 volts, the peak or maximum voltage increases to approximately 1,200 volts. The fact that the voltage has been increased does not necessarily mean that the current will likewise be increased. Some device may be connected to that cable which consumes less current than the original device operated at 600 volts r.m.s., but the fact that the potential has been increased to 850 volts r.m.s. and the peak value is 1,200 volts would rupture the insulation.

The cable, because of the 600 volt r.m.s. specification, can withstand 850 volts peak, but the new peak of 1,200 volts is in excess of the rating and damage is probable. Hence the rupturing influence of the peak voltage. Other examples of the above in connection with vacuum tubes will be quoted later.

Abraham Lincoln

(United Artists)

A Real Document

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

D. W. GRIFFITH has made a real picture out of the life of Abe Lincoln. He gauged it on the basis of the anecdotes and the human interest of "Lincoln, the Man." A great story it is, ably acted by Walter Huston, who chalks up a personal triumph.

Una Merkel, new screen player, deserves worlds of credit for her fine work in this picture. Her role of Ann Rutledge is a classic. She rates plenty of praise and the part should make her as a player of the Lillian Gish type.

But to get back to Huston. He gives the role all the Lincoln resolution, all of the humor of the part. He is a human Lincoln, who will appeal to all classes. There are many of the old Lincoln anecdotes and a number of thrilling incidents.

The story details the career of Lincoln from his birth to Civil War days. All of the pathos and humor are brought in with a typical Griffith touch, and the result is a picture of pathos and sweep, which gives it a highly favorable comparison with other Griffith pictures.

This one's success depends upon its presentation. With class audiences, it should be 100 per cent. It's a $2 picture and, presented that way, it will prove a big hit.

With regular picture-goers the appeal is doubtful, for they probably will be mislead by the title and theme. However, once in they should be big boosters for the picture, for few red-blooded Americans can resist its appeal.

The picture is episodic, but it carries along the story of the rail splitter who became president when the country was going through its worst crisis. A feminine slant is injected by the playing up of Mary Todd as an ambitious woman who helped Lincoln in his march to the presidency.

There is strong appeal to the south in the characterization of the war time president whose conciliatory attitude toward the "rebels" presaged a satisfactory settlement of the slavery issue. His insistence that Gen. Robert E. Lee and Jefferson Davis should escape execution undoubtedly will find a welcoming echo in the South. So, too, the fine portrayal of Lee by Hobart Bosworth should meet with strong southern response.

A fine perception of symbolic incidentals, which help carry along the action, and a real Griffith finish, which will bring tears to even the most-hardened film-goers, give this a great send-off. Because of this, it should build in its various runs throughout the country. Accordingly, exhibitors should give unusual thought and attention to the film's opening. Dispel the thought that it is an educational or a straight biography and sell it on the basis of entertainment. Some of the direction touches injected by Griffith are breath-taking.

A musical short will round out a fine bill.

The Storm

(Universal)

Disappointing

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

PRESUMABLY a yarn of the great open spaces and primitive passions, "The Storm" peters out into pretty mild stuff before the inevitable and expected fade-out. Describing it as of program calibre is the best this reviewer can give it.

Pictorially beautiful and often noteworthy in the effectiveness of its sound storm effects, dramatically what might have easily proven to be a forceful yarn of conflict in emotions isn't there. Perhaps William Wyler caught the essentials in his direction. Maybe the cutting room floor is the place to turn for the real yarn of how this went wrong. The screen hasn't got it.

The central situation finds Lupe Velez, French-Canadian and primitive, snowed in for the Northwoods winter with Paul Cavanagh and William Boyd. It's the old stuff about the man—in this case, men—and the woman. You know at every turn what's going to happen.

It does. Both chaps, good friends, fall for the girl. Cavanagh is English and city bred and wants the girl as a plaything. Boyd, the strong silent type of fellow, is willing to marry her. The girl is attracted to both, but really loves Boyd. But when on one stormy night Cavanagh crosses the deadline chalked across Lupe Velez's door by Boyd the trouble begins. Because Lupe loves Boyd and is afraid he will kill Cavanagh she yields to the latter only to be discovered by Boyd who proceeds to leave at the height of the storm. Cavanagh lies his way through, is made to realize by Lupe what a rotter he is and starts out after his friend. He does something or other out where the snowflakes fly and brings Boyd back. Presumably he has rescued him but how and from what the spectator has one tough time trying to dope out. The director piled the snow stuff on so heavily that keeping the action of the two figures apart proves impossible.

There are occasional flashes of nice comedy relief, but the vital situation wherein the conflict assumes form in the minds of the two men is handled only sketchily and without conviction. It's exactly there that the director lost out.

Miss Velez does her usual work and that isn't throwing any surplus laurel wreaths in her direction. Cavanagh gives the best performance of the troupe, while Boyd does only moderately well in a part that called for fine delineations in character blending. The storm effects are excellent and the camera work exquisite.

Needs plenty and strong short subject support. Fast-moving comedy will help appreciably.

Good Western

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

GIVE a big hand to the producers of this independent western talker. It's the most human "cow opera" we've seen in many months, the conventional story has been developed with so many new twists that it seems almost logical, the director has eliminated any semblance of padding and imparted an air of naturalness to every sequence, real humor has been injected into it, the cast at no time overacts and the recording is exceptionally good.

This picture should prove a welcome relief to the addicts of western pictures who have grown weary of seeing the same old plot dished out in the same old way week after week. The customary chases across the mesa which eat up most of the footage in the ordinary outdoor opus are held down to a minimum here, but the picture's chief characteristic is its casual tempo. Director Harry Webb has not attempted to set a frantic pace to justify any blurbs about "packed with action." He achieves the same end by fading out sequences quickly and the story moves along without jerkiness.

The recording imparts a further touch of realism. No cocoanut-shell effects are dubbed in when horsemen appear on the horizon. The beat of the hoofs is not heard until the riders are actually within earshot. It's a western without theatrics.

The story itself is of the cattle-rustling type, and Buffalo Bill, Jr., and Wally Wales carry their roles without posing. Yakima Canutt nets a number of real laughs and Betty Baker fills the feminine lead acceptably. She is easy to look at, although in need of more experience before the camera.

The picture's appeal should be wider than that of the run-of-the-mine western.

Outside the Law

(Universal)

Sluggish

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THIS talker, a remake of a silent picture by the same name, starts out slowly and continues at a sluggish rate throughout. The silent version, as the talker, was directed by Tod Browning, who for some reason or other fails to get the piece moving at a tempo fast enough to make the picture entertaining. Perhaps the fault lies in the dialogue, which is so profuse that it holds up action in almost every scene.

The story is laid in a coast city where Owen Moore and Mary Nolan, a couple of crooks, are making plans to pull a bank robbery. Moore has a job at the bank playing the part of a dummy which operates in the window as an advertising gag. Mary is employed in a cheap honky tonk.

Edward G. Robinson, the gang leader, sees Moore in the bank and asks him to call and see him. He tells Moore he is wise to the game and that Moore will have to split with him or he will squeal. Moore refuses. Robinson has also been making a play for Miss Nolan, but she gives him the air.

One night Moore by "mistake" is locked in the bank. He robs the safe of $500,000 and escapes with Mary's help. How in this day of time-locks and alarms a huge bank vault is robbed without tools is a mystery the audience alone must solve.

Moore and Miss Nolan hide in an apartment until time for a getaway is ripe. Robinson, searching for their hiding place, finally discovers it and makes a call. As he tries to enter the place he is discovered by one of the persons who lives in the apartment, a police captain. Robinson shoots the officer and is wounded. He breaks into the place and tries to find the money. Moore, in the meantime, has discovered the policeman is the father of a youngster to whom he has become attached. Moore, to avenge the kid's day, beats up Robinson and then, disregarding a possible escape, calls a doctor and awaits the arrival of police.

Miss Nolan, softened by her interest in the child, stays with Moore and when the police come they surrender. When brought to trial they are given a light sentence because they stood by the wounded policeman, and the fade-out finds them in each other's arms ready to go straight when they are freed from prison.

Moore and Robinson give the best portrayals. Miss Nolan's work is spotty. At times she is very good and other times she over-acts greatly. The child, Delmar Watson, is outstanding and steals every scene he is in. Several very absurd bits of acting are to be found in the picture, but they may be cut out before final release. Cutting may also speed up the action in spots, which is most necessary. DeWitt Jennings and Rockcliffe Fellowes do good work in the cast. Okay for pop price runs and split week spots, but needs heavy plugging.

It's a Pleasure

British and Dominion Film comes through with a clever farce in "One Embarassing Night," the film adaptation of "Rookery Nook." The picture is a good example of what British producers can do, and should find a ready reception with American exhibitors. There are some good comedy twists and a fine cast to put this over.

Captain Applejack

(Warners)

Amusing

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

THIS former stage play and silent picture has been made into a talker that rates as average fare. It has a goodly number of laughs and humorous situations as well as some moments that are dramatic. Except for one sequence, filmed aboard a pirate ship, the picture is a photographed stage play. This sequence aboard the vessel is, by the way, the most amusing part of the talker.

Will stack up about average in the seven-day runs and is good for split-week bookings. Having been made before as a picture and taken from a stage play, the piece will undoubtedly have some drawing power aside from the cast, which has only Mary Brian and John Halliday with name appeal.

Halliday takes the part of a wealthy man whose life has been entirely devoid of romance and excitement. Various circumstances cause him to realize this and he decides to embark upon a romantic career. He tells his lawyer, Claude Allister, to sell the ancestral home and prepares to leave on his quest for romance and adventure. Allister, in order to get buyers for the mansion which is old and out of style, plants some spurious documents telling of pirate treasure about the place. He then advertises, saying that a fortune is thought to have been hidden in the house.

Several people who are more interested in finding a possible fortune than in buying the house call to look it over. One of them, Kay Strozzi, a crook, arranges to spend the night there. While she is there the other members of her gang appear and also another band of crooks. They decide to divide the spoils rather than be exposed by one another. Halliday, in the meantime, falls asleep and dreams that he is the pirate, Captain Applejack. This dream is acted out in a separate sequence and forms a clever bit of entertainment. Halliday is awakened when his ward, Mary Brian, hears the crooks. Upon investigating the noise, Halliday is held up and told that if he does not tell where the money is hidden in ten minutes he will be killed. As the thugs leave, Allister appears and tells what he has done to get buyers. However, upon examining one of the fake documents, they discover directions for finding a treasure in the house. Upon searching, a secret room filled with treasure is found. Halliday sends Allister for aid and faces the crooks as they return for his answer. By a clever ruse he outwits them and they leave thinking help has arrived. Halliday, after all this excitement, gives up the idea of being an adventurer and decides to go on living in the same old way.

A light love story is woven into the picture by Miss Brian and Halliday, with pleasing effect. The comedy touches are capably put over by Halliday, who carries the piece by his fine work. Kay Strozzi, Arthur Edmund Carew, Alec B. Francis, Claude Allister and Louise Glosser Hale are well cast and enact their roles ably. Mary Brian is most appealing and, in the pirate sequence, shows a decided flair for comedy.

The production moves at a fast tempo, but is very ragged in spots. At times it is very episodic and the line between serious drama and comedy is not always differentiated. The story is weak in some places and, as a result, many highly improbable situations arise. Hobart Henley, the director, was handicapped by the story material apparently.

Thoroughbred

(Tiffany)

Just Another Picture

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

INTENDED to fill the needs of neighborhood second and third runs as a program attraction, "Thoroughbred" would have reached a higher plane as a hokum purveyor if some one other than Wesley Barry had been selected for the feature spot. Wesley, once a juvenile ace, is only beginning his career in the adult class, a field entirely different from kid parts, and a fact which the casting director apparently lost sight of. Like Coogan and a few other very popular youngsters, Barry's past successes are far in the background, but, nevertheless, he has something to live up to—and it isn't easy. Sloppy overacting in the first part of his new vehicle and a spineless performance in the concluding sequences give conclusive proof that a thorough grooming for Wes is needed before he can be depended upon to give sufficient strength to a yarn of light hokum in order to carry it above the depths of mediocrity.

To Robert Homans and Walter Perry go what little honors there are for effectively injecting light comedy into the drab story. Others in the cast had plenty to do, but their support was weak and they helped Barry but little.

Horses and jockeys, the framed boy who must either throw the race or go to jail for gambling with money which he didn't own, a little love interest, the big race, an incidental colored quartet, the final clinch and a life-long feud between competitive trainers are all brought into play. These ingredients, while not convincingly mixed, should spell box-office for the average neighborhood audience, but we suggest that you take a look at this one before giving it a play. With strong short subject support it may get by.

Sound and camera work are excellent, and direction only fair.

Use a cartoon, a short musical revue and your usual newsreel.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany. Screen play by John Francis Natteford. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Photographed by Max DuPont. Edited by Clarence Kolster. Release date, Aug. 10. Running time, 50 minutes. Length, 5,425 feet.

Opinions On Pictures

Eyes of the World

(United Artists)

Well Acted; Interesting

(Reviewed by Sherwin A. Kane)

"EYES OF THE WORLD" is a well acted edition of Harold Bell Wright's preachment against hypocrisy. The story is melodramatic in conception, crystallizing, on occasions, into tense situations which are effective enough to pack something of a wallop. Ample action serves to sustain interest, although the introduction is somewhat involved, which results in plenty of footage being unreeled before the audience is sure of what it's all about. Once the background for the story is laid, however, it moves at a fairly good pace.

This marks the screen debut of Una Merkel, a capable and attractive stage player, with a pleasing southern drawl. She should win quite a following by her work in this.

Harold Bell Wright's name should give this strong box office pull, for the novel is reputed to have been read by some 15,000,000 persons.

Lagrange, a novelist, at work on a serial concerning an acquaintance of his, is employed as the instrument for detailing the background of the picture. He is writing of a woman who is confronted by her husband's legal wife shortly after a baby has been born to the second union. In a fit of rage, the legal wife dashes acid at the baby lying in its crib. The mother, protecting it, is seared about the face, while the infant girl is marked by the acid about the shoulders. The mother leaves the child and father and seeks seclusion in the West, where she becomes acquainted with Lagrange, the novelist, who learns her story. It is this story he is writing—thirty years later. This much is told in the picture through the medium of Lagrange's writing.

When the story opens the daughter who had been acid burned in infancy is the wife of a wealthy, elderly man. She is engaged in a flirtation with Aaron King, an artist whom she has engaged to do her portrait. King accompanies the family when it leaves for a camping interlude in the West; the site chosen for it being one in the vicinity of the disfigured mother's hideout.

On an early morning fishing jaunt, King meets the daughter of the novelist (played by Una Merkel), an unsophisticated girl, and is struck by her innocence and charm. Noting the attachment which develops, the woman invites the girl to her home for an evening, believing that King's attentions to her will divert the suspicions of her husband from her own flirtation with King. The girl deceives her father and accepts the invitation. At her hostess' home, however, she hears King accused of an intrigue by the woman's husband, and, outraged, leaves for her own home, escorted by the hostess' half-brother. They are followed by King.

In the meantime, Lagrange has been appraised of her daughter's deception and leaves to bring her back. When the girl arrives at her home, the place is deserted. Availing himself of this opportunity, her escort follows her into the house and forces his attentions on her. He is confronted by the recluse mother of his half-sister who is about to shoot him when King arrives. Apprised of the man's guilt, King, enraged, beats him. At this juncture, the flirtatious wife arrives. She is confronted by her recluse mother, who reveals her identity, and, shocked and shamed, she undergoes a change of heart. She confesses to Una Merkel that her flirtation with King had been innocent, thus affecting a reconciliation between the two.

The unquestionable ability of the cast saves this one from being cheap melodrama. Each turns in a good performance. Una Merkel, splendidly cast in the innocent young girl's part, is outstanding. Her unprofessional performance is replete with the charm and simplicity required to make the part plausible.

Direction has been well handled, but in fairness to a capable cast it must be said that, let alone, their combined ability would be sufficient to put across any picture. Photography and sound are splendid; numerous outdoor sequences offering opportunities to achieve interesting effects in both.

Good cartoons and musical shorts will do with this.

Produced by Inspiration Pictures. Released through United Artists. Based on the novel of the same name by Harold Bell Wright. Directed by Henry King. Adapted by Clarke Silvernail and Brewster Morse. Photographed by Ray June. Length, 7,272 feet. Running time, 88 minutes. Release date, August 30.

Night Work

(Pathe)

Good Programmer

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THERE'S not a great deal to this talker, but it stacks up as being good program stuff and will go well in the smaller cities and towns. The kids will enjoy this one as it has a lot of good clean gags and some slap-stick comedy that helps put it over.

Eddie Quillan is the outstanding member of the cast while Sally Starr is attractive as his girl friend. Eddie is the assistant window trimmer in a department store and invests his money in oil stock expecting big returns. He visits a home for orphans where he meets Sally who talks him into supporting an orphan, thinking him to be rich. Eddie agrees to support the child, Douglas Scott, and in order to do so gets another job working in a night club. This leaves him only three hours of sleep and his endeavors to take a nap in between jobs forms plenty of amusement.

When Eddie and Sally are on the verge of matrimony and about to adopt the child, Charles Clary, a rich man finds out that the baby is apparently his son's child by a divorced wife. The son, George Duryea, does not know he is a father until an anonymous leter is sent him. Then he investigates. Clary then plans to adopt the boy. Eddie and Sally are about to break up over the matter when the real identity of Duryea's son is discovered and he and Clary drop the matter. Eddie then finds that he has been promoted to head window dresser and that he is making enough to get married and adopt the child.

This story is rather flimsy, but serves to get over a considerable amount of humorous touches and some pathos, especially where Sally and Eddie are about to lose the child. This is well played and packs a punch. There are many characters in the story who appear for a few scenes and then are seen no more. Just what they are there for and what they are supposed to do is not explained.

Among those who are notable in the cast beside Quillan and Sally Starr, are George Duryea, Ben Bard, Francis Upton, Douglas Scott, Ruth Allenby, Babe Kane, Martha Mattox and Tempe Pigott.

Produced and distributed by Pathe. Directed by Russell Mack. From the story by Walter DeLeon. Dialogue by Walter DeLeon. Edited by Joseph Kane. Photographed by John Mescall. Running time, 1 hour and 35 minutes. Length, 8,394 ft. Release date, August 3.

Going Wild

(First National)

Aerial Farce

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THIS talker, under the disguise of another cast, slight story changes and with some musical numbers interspersed in the action, is almost identical with "The Aviator," a talker which Warners made not very long ago, with Edward Everett Horton in the starring role.

This time Joe E. Brown takes the lead and does his best to help keep the piece moving at the fast tempo required. Despite Brown's valiant efforts, the talker lacks the pep and snap that featured "Top Speed" and only at times does "Going Wild" go wild. It is satisfactory for the week run houses and split-week bookings. Where Brown is a draw the business will probably go above average.

As in "Top Speed," a case of mistaken identity causes Brown to assume the role he carries through the picture. This time he is mistaken for a novelist whose book on exploits in the flying service during the world war make him popular.

Brown and Lawrence Gray, his "manager," are welcomed to the town where the real author had planned to spend his vacation. Arthur Hoyt, the real author, decided not to stop off when he saw the crowd awaiting him, as he wanted a quiet rest and from appearances would get anything but that if he stopped. Brown, however, upon stepping from the train is thought to be the writer and takes it all big.

The boys enjoy the hospitality offered and everything goes fine until Brown is asked to fly in a contest against a former war ace, Walter Pidgeon. He tries to evade the challenge, but Laura Lee, his girl friend, persuades him to take the challenge. Gray's fiancee, Ona Munson, is also instrumental in getting Brown to fly in the contest.

The day of the contest arrives and Brown, who has never been up before, plans to take along a "passenger"—a real flyer, who will handle the controls when they are off the ground.

The planes take off and Brown discovers his passenger is none other than Laura Lee, who has tricked the pilot out of going. As neither she nor Brown can operate the plane it goes through all sorts of antics and forces Pidgeon down. Brown, having won a $25,000 wager cannot land the plane and as a last resort takes to the parachute with Miss Lee in his arms. They float gently to earth for the final fadeout.

Highspots in the talker are Brown's frantic endeavor to learn how to operate a plane by sitting on top of a folding bed, with an electric carpet sweeper in his hands and an electric fan blowing him in the face, and the wild flight, which runs the gamut of possible and trick flying stunts.

Director William A. Seiter could have speeded up the action more by leaving out the song numbers, which are superfluous. A stronger story was also needed to carry the production. Those who liked "The Aviator" will, no doubt, enjoy this talker despite the marked similarity.

Use musicals and good dramatic shorts here.

Leather Pushers

(Universal)

Chapter I, "Kid Roberts"

Plenty Fast

UNIVERSAL gave its new featured player, Kane Richmond, an ideal vehicle in which to make his screen debut. Richmond, following the footsteps of Reginald Denny in the "Leather Pushers," is an admirable physical type with a polished poise so necessary for Witwer's well known character. He has personality, an easy manner, is fairly good looking and gives a convincing performance.

Made many times before, the "Leather Pushers" now appears in talking form. Needless to say, the material is just the thing for sound. Universal apparently realized this and gave considerable thought to the "mike."

Albert Kelley is to be commended for his directorial job. He has turned out a fast-moving short nicely balanced with thrills, comedy and love interest. Running time, each about 19 minutes.

Snappy action to offset a slow-moving feature.

The Hot Air Merchant

(Paramount)

Good Short

CHARLES RUGGLES in the skit he used in vaudeville. He is the soap-box orator, intent upon saving men from matrimonially-crazed women. It has a running story, punctuated by Ruggles' sarcastic remarks. A young man is shown falling for a designing blonde and Ruggles carries it through to the pacing-the-floor-with-the-baby era. Running time, 15 minutes.

Good with musical or feature lacking comedy.

The Cactus Kid

(Mickey Mouse—Columbia)

Good Cartoon

MICKEY is a cowboy in this and rides to a saloon to make love to a rodent senorita. The villain enters and there is considerable fun. It averages well with others of this popular series, and has a sufficient number of laughs to please most audiences. Running time, 9 minutes.

Use where musical-comedy balance is needed.

Satan's Fury

(Pathe—Vagabond Adventure)

Good

THE "Vagabond Director," Tom Terriss, invades volcanic peaks in New Zealand for this issue of the Vagabond Adventure series, and he is not only the star and director, but delivers a synchronized lecture. The latter is more thrilling than the actual scenes, for his voice takes on a ludicrous touch of excitement as he is shown darting about the steaming ground, eluding geysers of steam and boiling pools, and as he stresses the tremendous dangers in which he found himself one wonders how the cameraman managed to keep on grinding. However, the setting is unusual and it will be enjoyed by the average audience. Running time, 10 minutes.

Good as balance for a light bill.

Hello, Television

(Educational—Comedy)

Clicks

ANDY CLYDE'S spontaneous humor is always good for a laugh. In this one he's at his best, which is saying plenty for any two-reeler. His droll patter and funny capers, helped a lot by a well executed plot and intelligent direction, go hand in hand to make a well rounded comedy reel. A marriage by television which upsets the plans of the girl's father is a new wrinkle. Running time, about 18 minutes.

Nice stuff to balance a dramatic feature. Use a newsreel, too.

Short Subjects

The Imperial City

(FitzPatrick—Traveltalk)

Very Interesting

JAMES FITZPATRICK, who started the travelogue lecture cycle, takes the audience to Peiping, China, in this entertaining subject. Peiping is the imperial city of China, formerly called Pekin, and in this FitzPatrick includes many points of interest. It's well done, as are all of this producer's shorts. Running time, 8 minutes.

Good on comedy bill.

The Story Book Paradise

(Paramount)

Very Good

THIS SHOWS up a number of the kid shorts which have been made, for it boasts a troupe of kids of real ability. It's a dream affair, the kids dreaming they are in Mother Goose land. There are a number of novel turns and some excellent kid chorus work. Running time, 10 minutes.

Stress this for kid trade.

Girl Shock

(M-G-M)

Silly

THIS is a wild comedy in which Charley Chase is cast as a girl-shy youth who gets goofy every time he touches a girl's hand. It's silly stuff, but has the redeeming feature of action and some low comedy gags which get laugh. Chase rates better vehicles than this. Running time, 20 minutes.

Needs strong feature support.

Average Husband

Pretty Good

THE story, as the Educational dialogue writer would say it, "came over in the boat before the Mayflower." The antiquated plot, however, is redeemed by able handling and a few modern twists and settings which bring it right up to date. There are enough laughs to warrant a fair spot on your bill. Running time, about 17 minutes.

Best with an ace-high dramatic feature.

Thank You, Doctor

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1026)

Clever and Funny

AN ingenious woman crook furnishes the theme of this clever short. She goes to a jeweler and asks that a pearl necklace be sent on approval to her uncle, a brain specialist who conducts a "nut" house. Then she asks the doctor to examine her brother whose delusion she says is that he has lost a string of pearls. So when the jewel salesman arrives, he is taken for a lunatic, with some interesting and funny complications. Running time, 9 minutes.

Good for any bill.

All for Mabel

(Pathe)

Feeble

THE less said about this "comedy" the better. If your audiences have any intelligence at all they'll groan in agony at the dialogue. It's probably the worst we've ever heard; the creator of the many bad puns in it should be exiled to Siberia. The story is almost as bad. It centers about the attempts of a freshman to get the athletic hero's girl. Don't show this in college towns. Directed by Harry Delmar. Running time, 18 minutes.

Surround it with an exceptionally strong bill.

Monkey Meat

(Educational—Cartoon)

Makes a Nice Dish

THE usual plot, that of animal antics set to music, but done this time in a most pleasing manner. Chiefly because of the originality in gags used, this is a welcome relief from the cut-and-dried cartoon material predominating in majority of current-day cartoons. Orchestral work is above the average, sending entertainment value skyward. Running time, about 6 minutes. Produced by Audio-Cinema for Paul Terry-Toon series.

There's plenty of snap in this one; spot it where a feature is in need of light cartoon-comedy relief.

Railroad Follies

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 4209)

Novel Short

THE railroad companies might well capitalize the novel suggestion which forms the basis of this entertaining short. The gag is to entertain the customers on trains by means of a master of ceremonies presenting a varied program. This has a couple of dance acts, chorus, spieler and a turn by an alleged Houdini, who can't get out of a strait-jacket and keeps asking the m. c. to "Stall, pal." It's a good subject which will get some laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.

Will fit any bill.

The Indians Are Coming

(Universal)

Serial, 15 Episodes, 2 Reels Each

Great for Youngsters

COWBOYS and Indians done in the modern style, running leaps and bounds ahead of outdoor serials of the earlier days, and greatly enhanced by clever sound work, able direction and thrilly action. Photography is splendid.

In houses where this type of material is liked, the audience will give it warm reception. The twists injected by Director Henry MacRea are not the usual sloppy affairs, but bear indication of having been well planned. The cast is commendable. Running time, each about 19 minutes.

Feature comedy will go with this.

Laundry Blues

(Pathe—Aesop Sound Fable)

Dandy

THE creators of this cartoon used plenty of imagination and as a result they've turned out a short that's packed with laughs and a decided relief from the current similarity of cartoons. The setting is a Chinese laundry, with a quartette of Celestial manglers putting on a song act. A Jewish customer, with almond eyes, tries to retrieve his shirt with a kosher ticket, but the "no tickee, no washee" rule holds. Then one of the laundrymen, using a caricature of Rudy Vallee for his inspiration, commits murder on a saxophone. Lots of fresh gags in it. Running time, 10 minutes.

Will bolster up a weak bill.

Audio Review, No. 34

(Pathe)

Passable

TERRY RAMSAYE apparently dug deeply into the library to get out this issue of his weekly. Most of it consists of shots of various parts of the globe, under the heading, "Around the World in Eighty Looks," and while the selected shots are interesting they are too brief. The tour starts at New York and ends at San Francisco, and takes in many of the romantic spots of the earth. The issue is rounded out with views of three bear cubs being fed from a bottle. Their antics are decidedly amusing. Running time, 8 minutes.

Okay to round out a diversified program.

Neighborhoods in Chicago Hurt by Booking Circuits

Chicago—Lack of variety in bookings is hurting neighborhood business, many Chicago exhibitors contend. Double featuring and the growth of booking circuits in the city get the blame.

This new complaint is substantiated by a study of neighborhood programs in any section of the city. In one neighborhood last week the same feature picture was playing simultaneously in seven theatres within a radius of one mile. In three of the houses the feature was part of a double bill. Four of the theatres were subscribers to booking circuits.

In a west side neighborhood, one feature was playing simultaneously in three neighboring houses. The situation is duplicated week after week, according to exhibitors who have suffered from this situation more than once. Patrons of the neighborhoods, confronted with this situation, are acquiring the habit of either going to the Loop houses or to distant neighborhoods for their film fare, rather than chance being disappointed by identical programs which they have viewed before, playing in a succession of three or more neighborhood spots.

Use Corner Store To Sell Theatre, Says Hollander

Chicago—"Let the corner store sell your theatre to patrons," is the suggestion made by W. K. Hollander to stimulate interest in houses of the Publix circuit here. Hollander's plan is favorably regarded by home office executives, who have recommended it to Publix theatre managers throughout the country.

"Visit the individual merchants in your community or neighborhood regularly," Hollander advises theatre managers. "Gain their confidence and friendship; impress them with the importance to the community of your theatre, and they will talk about it to their customers. This cannot help but develop plenty of community interest in your theatre."

Hollander pointed out that the managers must also show a sincere interest in the merchants' business and problems in order to make the plan effective.

"I feel that if the average housewife were to go into any neighborhood store and there hear the community theatre spoken of favorably she could not help but be impressed," he said. "She herself would be inclined to spread this discussion among her friends and neighbors. This cumulative advertising is bound to serve an excellent purpose."

Going Up!

Chicago—This, children, is the gentleman who has been responsible for the rise and fall of more Chicago film personalities than any home office factor. He has watched—nay, has been responsible—for the ascendancy of most of them. Moreover, he has taken them down, once they were firmly at the top. They get on Art's bandwagon as office boys and branch managers, office workers and salesmen; and they get off the same way. This, kiddies, is Art Reaum, elevator conductor in the Universal exchange building.

Women Prefer "Common Clay"

Chicago—"Anybody's War" (Paramount) is set to follow "Common Clay" (Fox) into the Roosevelt. The latter picture, according to a B. & K. statistician, has broken all Chicago records for female attendance with the picture's closing still a week off.

The "Kelly" Smile

Chicago—Mrs. Madelon Anderson, "Kelly" to nine-tenths of Film Row, has a history in the trade that is in direct contradiction to her youthfulness. Cashier for M-G-M here for the past five years, her film business associations date back four additional years. Through it all, she has maintained a disposition that would be the envy of those nationally famous climate experts who comprise the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. That smile has wrung checks from exhibitors who haven't been able to afford a highball for twelve days.

Schoenstadt to Solve Europe's Film Problems

Herman Schoenstadt, 75-year-old chain theatre operator of this city, back from a sojourn on the continent, where he viewed with utmost distaste the antiquated film houses of foreign capitals, announces that he will go back to Europe presently to inaugurate a theatre chain of American type, de luxe houses in Germany, Austria and France. Schoenstadt films, he plans, will play the Schoenstadt houses in Europe, though production of the foreign lingo talkies would be slated for Hollywood, he said.

"The European film business is ten years behind us, and I'm going back and show those foreign producers how we do it," declared Schoenstadt as he stepped from the Century one morning this week. Waiting near the end of the station ramp were six large floral arches, held aloft by twelve regally uniformed ushers—one from the staff of each of Schoenstadt's Chicago theatres. Under the canopy of roses walked Mr. Schoenstadt into the arms of waiting relatives and friends.

"On the continent I saw only one good movie theatre, and that was the Paramount in Paris," he said. "Very few European theatres are equipped for sound. They are just beginning to catch onto the idea. Their theatres are wretched, unventilated, with old seats, poor screens, no good service and altogether uninviting. What they need is some palatial, comfortable houses like ours.

To Produce Also

"What I want to do," continued, "is produce my own German talking pictures in Hollywood and then show them in the cities and resort places of Germany and Austria where I intend to build theatres. The truth is that the talkie business in Europe is still an open field, with everyone starting almost at scratch in the race to get control. America has an excellent chance to retain the major hold won in the silent movie days.

"In London they are crazy about our American talkies. They understand them and like them better than the English productions," he said. "American pictures are still far and away predominant. I think our producers will be able successfully to make German and French talkies in this country and ship them abroad and outbid the European talkie men. They are beginning to make some talkies in Europe, mostly in Germany and England, but on a small scale."

Remorse

Chicago—What exchange man (Independent) who got the breaks from the censor board through a drag with the now defunct police administration, is wishing he hadn't bought a certain picture because the censors have held up the permit and he can't do anything about it with a new commissioner and police secretary in?

Neil Rewarded

Chicago—Harry Neil went to his reward this week. It awaited him at the Warner home office from which he returned recently with word of his appointment as branch manager of the Warner Indianapolis office. Harry, in addition to directing Warner city sales here, was also instrumental in organizing the Chicago Warner Club this spring and was named its first president. Tom Gilham, vice-president, will administer club affairs for the balance of the season.

Competition? It's Nothing But for Chicago Showmen

Chicago—Miniature golf is only a minor worry to exhibitors here. More serious competition is found among the following summer choices of Chicagoans:

The beaches, that draw a good 500,000 normally. Plenty of them at night, and when they get there they stay there.

Ravinia summer opera. "Chi's opera under the stars" has been adding to its draw annually. Plays to capacity even on the hottest nights.

Roadhouses. Good times or bad, Chicago's multitudinous night birds will crowd the highways getting out to the gyp joints any night of the week. They're on every highway and easy to find.

The circus. Only a two-week stand in Grant Park, but how they go for it here. With the film fare what it is as far as the kids are concerned, parents are only too happy to get them under the canvas for an afternoon or night.

Wisconsin beer. Plenty of it and most of it good. The lakeside dance pavillions where it's sold look like bargain counters after the holidays.

Lake excursions. Anywhere you want to go and plenty of them do, whether they sail their own or buy a ticket.

Civic offerings. The Navy (Municipal) Pier gets plenty throughout the week. Adler Planetarium and Shedd Aquarium (both new) count them by the thousands. Parks, playgrounds and pools are jammed.

Racetracks. Draw anywhere from 20,000 to 100,000 daily, depending on the track and the day's feature.

Automobiles. One to every four persons in the county, but on the torrid nights the odd three borrow one and everybody goes out together.

Probe Eller's Check

Chicago—Emmanuel Eller, attorney for the Illinois Independent Theatre Owners, has been called on to explain how a check bearing his name happened to be among the possessions found in the safety-deposit box of Jack Zuta, slain business manager for the Moran-Aiello mob. Eller, a former Municipal and Superior court judge, was but one of several prominent politicians thus embarrassed.

Secret Changes Evolved in Chi Protection Plan

Chicago—Chicago distributors evolved changes in the present protection system here after two weeks of secret sessions at the Film Board offices. The meetings resulted from the failure of local distributor and exhibitor groups to agree on re-zoning after two months of conferences, and were accomplished without representation of exhibitors.

The nature of the changes in the old protection system was not revealed, but, it is understood, they are minor in scope and will be appended to a draft which will incorporate major features of the familiar protection schedule in effect here.

The draft of the Chicago protection plan, together with the new recommendations of the distributors' committee, has been forwarded to the Hays office for scrutiny where, it is expected, C. C. Pettijohn will pass on its legality. If this confirmation is accorded it, the draft will then be submitted to home office executives of those circuits whose properties are represented here.

Chicago exhibitors may find a new protection system on the books without previous knowledge of it in the near future. In the event home office approval is given it in New York, some circuit representatives here will be obliged to "go along" whether it meets with their approval or not. What attitude the independents may take in such an eventuality is not difficult to assume, but how effective it may prove is open to question.

Warners Lease Theatre At Cost of $533,333

Chicago—Terms of the lease by which Warners acquired the Symphony theatre here were made public this week. Warners will pay an aggregate rental of $533,333 during a term of twenty years. The house, which has a seating capacity of 1,700, will be occupied rent free for the first four months of the period beginning August 1. Rental for the next twenty months will total $33,000, with the annual rental for the following eight years set at $25,000, and at $30,000 for the next ten years.

One clause of the lease stipulates that admission for adults shall not be less than 20 cents, and for children not less than 10 cents.

Revive Exchange Project

Chicago—Attempts are being made to refinance the organization which backed the proposed film exchange building at 13th St. and Wabash Ave.

Windy

Chicago—A pleased film exchange office manager met a couple of stenos at the office door arriving on time for once.

"Hah," he greeted them, "Early birds this morning, heh?"

"Yeah," they freshed him, "an' now we meet the worm."

Stampede to L. A. Due When O'Hara "Spills the Beans"

Thousands of New York's six million souls are expected to start the trek westward almost any day now. Studios in Hollywood will soon post armed guards about the lot to handle the army of new actors and actresses who will storm the gates in search of work.

The rumpus was started a few days ago, when Near O'Hara, New York World columnist, "believing that the movie producers are clamoring for talent," published "full instructions" on "How to Break Into the Movies."

And here's how, according to O'Hara:

If one is to be a successful film star, it is essential to know that the talkies are made in New York and Hollywood. Owing to three hours' difference in time between these cities, the work is much harder in Hollywood. For when the talkie actors are finishing the day in New York, they are just getting started on the afternoon's work in Hollywood. They get no overtime for this, either.

Accordingly, the beginner should bear this in mind: that when it is night time in Italy it is only Tuesday in Hollywood. Your watch should be set back one hour at Toledo, O.; Dodge City, Kan., and Flagstaff, Ariz.

Once you have mastered these facts, you are on your way to screen fame. Now let us have a brief resume of what we have learned thus far. First of all, talking pictures are made in New York and Hollywood. Of course, they are also made in Lima, O., when there is an Elks' parade there, or in Wichita, Kan., when the annual apple carnival is held. But the news weeklies pay practically nothing for their talent, if they pay that much. You could appear in fifty-two consecutive releases of the Pathe Weekly and still starve to death.

No, it is New York or Hollywood if you are to gain fame. So let us examine the best way to get a start.

First of all, it is presumed you have taken part in school plays, church socials, or the like, and scores of friends have told you you ought to be in the movies. The chances are that they are right. It is easy enough to hoodwink enemies and strangers, but you cannot fool your friends. Accordingly, you have now surmounted the first obstacle when you feel, in common with your acquaintances, that you should be in the movies.

The next move is to write a letter to Mr. Zukor, President of Paramount Pictures. Also send a duplicate to Mr. Lasky, the Vice President, so his feelings won't be hurt in case Mr. Zukor brings up your letter in his presence.

Another big man to write to is Mr. Metro, the senior partner of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Tell both Mr. Zukor and Mr. Metro what your friends have told you. State that you are willing to start in at the bottom and work up unless you are a stunt expert, such as a parachute jumper, in which case you will start at the top and work down. Thus you have made your first big impression on the film magnates.

Now if your name is Hormidas McGuirk or something like that, it would be well to select a professional name under which you will act. Don't let this matter give you any trouble, however, as practically any name you pick out will be better than Hormidas McGuirk.

Having posted your letter to the film magnates, you have now got a foothold in the movies. The best, if not the only thing you can do then, is to wait and keep on waiting. By the time a reply is received to your letter, you will be ready to play old character parts without using a white wig.

Trick Stuff?

Columbus, O.—A picture originally passed by the censor board under the two titles, "The Battle of Chateau Thiery," and "All Quiet on the Battle Front," is confusing local theatre patrons. It is reported that it was shown at suburban theatres at the same time that "All Quiet on the Western Front" played its downtown first-run engagement. The similarity of titles was sufficient to confuse the public and this confusion was augmented by the advertising, which, it is stated, carried the word "Battle" in very small print, with the rest of the title in heavy large print.

Child Labor Law As Proposed Said To Show Progress

Washington—The Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, after a study of the proposed uniform child labor law adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, finds the instrument embodies a number of advances made in progressive states during the past 15 years, but does not set as high standards as are already found in some states.

The draft of the uniform act, which was under consideration for more than four years, prohibits employment of minors under 14 years of age in any gainful employment, regulates their employment between 14 and 18, and prescribes certain occupations in which persons of 21 and under may not be engaged.

Exhibitors in many sections of the country have ridden into jams with municipal authorities over appearances of minors in stage shows and at juvenile performances, while authorities at Hollywood and New York keep an eagle eye on studios using children in production.

Reciprocal Deal Between Canada, England Sought

Toronto—A sidelight on the British agitation to have their films shown in Canada is provided in the presence in England of G. E. Patten, director of the Ontario Government Bureau, one of the largest non-commercial distributors.

For years Patten has been trying to get English scenic shorts, silent. There was a big demand for them. Finally, the premier told him he would find steamship tickets waiting to take his own cameramen across the Atlantic and shoot what he wanted himself. This he is now doing; also trying to arrange an exchange system on non-commercials between England and his territory.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

Team Work Counts

THE value of real team work has been brought to the fore, particularly by reason of chain theatre growth, and despite the many unkind things that may be said about working for chain theatre circuits; it has been demonstrated beyond all possible argument that team work pays.

Now what I'm wondering is, have you showmen, as individual theatre managers, realized the tremendous value of this team work and tried to instil it into every man on your staff?

If it is a subject which you have passed up as being unimportant, why not credit the idea with containing enough sense to risk a trial? After all, what are you risking? Certainly nothing sufficient to overrule the suggestion. So again we say, why not try it?

Start a regular weekly meeting idea with every one on the payroll in attendance. While such attendance need not be compulsory, you can immediately get an idea what certain people on your staff think of you and your theatre should they pass up coming to these meetings.

Which constitutes advantage number one.

Make the meetings a friendly open discussion. Tell them of your desire to keep YOUR house among the leaders, both from operation efficiency and profits. Show them, in a nice, friendly way, just how important each and everyone of them is to the proper and profitable operation of the theatre. Point out how friction hurts both the operation as well as the profits.

These topics can all be brought out with enough tact and good judgment so that the effect should be a staff, all anxious and ready to help each other and help you in particular.

And there you certainly have advantage number two.

Does it not stand to reason, that when the staff begins to recognize the fact that the manager is placing plenty of responsibility on them, they will work all the harder; not only because they want to show that hey can function properly, but also in order to receive recognition at the weekly staff meetings?

They begin to feel that it is worth thinking up new and original ideas for their theatre and their manager. They get away from that humdrum feeling that they are just an usher, or doorman, or projectionist. They are a part of the theatre and the way it is being operated. Praise from the "higher-ups" or the bosses in the home office is as much theirs and anyone else's.

Are we right? Is the logic good? You pass judgment on it yourself.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

A Couple Of These Ideas Used By Sid May Help You Too

If Sid Lawrence, manager of Schine's Ohio Theatre in Lima, Ohio, keeps his gags in scrap books he must need a couple of storehouses to tuck them away in; for, it seems to us that all he does is spring one stunt after another on the natives of Lima, and he springs them so fast that he keeps them coming steadily to the theatre.

One of his latest was the mailing of a post card upon the back of which was imprinted: "I. O. U. 70 Minutes of thrilling entertainment payable upon demand. Call at Schine's Ohio Theatre (Playdate) (signed) Czar of Broadway." The back of the card resembled an I. O. U. The novelty of this gag alone was enough to command attention from the readers and they payed plenty of attention to it.

Through another of his tie-ups with the local Postal Telegraph blanks he framed a bunch of telegrams which carried copy addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Lima, reading "Lon Chaney Talks! This information comes to you after his repeated denial that he would not talk in pictures. Stop. He comes Sunday to the (theatre) in 'The Unholy Three,' one of the year's most outstanding talking pictures." The telegrams were signed by Sid and delivered by uniformed Postal messengers to nearly every one in Lima.

He, too, was confronted with the problem of a Tom Thumb golf course in his town and he hurdled the obstacle by tying up with the operators. They got together and distributed a herald to the kids, since they were the best means of reaching the adults for direct contact and good-will, which entitled them to play on the course for 15 cents, after which they would be presented with a guest ticket to the matinee at the theatre. The stunt went over very well, and, as we said, was a means of showing the adults that the theatre was thinking about the kids. Besides getting in a plug for the shows. But then—that's what Sid is always doing in one way or another and if you'll keep your eye on this showman's future work we know that he'll have some more interesting stunts to pass along.

Bob Soffer Tells Us How He Brings In Kid Business

Catering to what might well be termed a small army of kids, Bob Soffer, manager of the Hollywood Theatre in New York City, has to be always on the alert to make sure that interest is maintained in the various kid pictures and special matinees he presents. With this fact before him, he has kindly prepared a little story for use in the Club pages in which he sets forth in detail a few of the methods he had adopted.

In the article he says:

"During the past ten weeks I ran a kiddie show every Saturday afternoon. I gave out coupons to the children as they entered the theatre and those holding numbers corresponding with the one that I called off from the stage were presented with toys.

"At the conclusion of the toy distribution, I called for volunteers to come up on the stage to entertain. Each week I would get about 10 children who would sing, dance or recite. I would then give three gifts to the best talent of the afternoon. The winner was eligible to enter into a show to determine the best artist among the juvenile. After ten weeks ten entrants were on hand for the finals and the winner was awarded a silver loving cup. I personally played the piano for the children, and amidst the applause of friends and relatives the kids put on a great show. This stunt helped me to keep business up to par during the summer months.

"Starting September 1, I will give each child a text-book with the name of my theatre on it. This will always help remind them of the movies. I'm in the East Side of New York City and there isn't a single theatre in this vicinity which uses slides with an organ. So for the season my organ will be put into playing condition, and, being a former organist, I will play the instrument and get the children to sing along. From past experience I know that they just love to sing out loud."

As he is now working out this new slant we are sure that at its completion he is going to give us the dope on it.

It Costs You Nothing to Belong to the

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

And see what marvellous benefits you derive from this organization!

A great many showmen (we know) have been just on the verge of joining the Managers' Round Table Club, but have neglected to do so largely through oversight.

We suggest that YOU get full information about this great army of showmen and then decide once and for all whether you want to join.

The mere fact that so many live-wire showmen already belong to the organization — that they represent the cream of the show-world — every branch of theatre management—that not a single one was induced by a salesman or any other sort of solicitation other than through the actual activities of the Club and the word-of-mouth praise that has spread from one end of the world to the other —but joined after simply reading the facts about what the Club does for its members—all these are indications that it is worth your while at least to get these facts as quickly as possible, and then (if you want to) join and get the benefits that such association with fellow showmen is bound to bring.

IT HAS ALMOST REACHED THE POINT WHERE IT IS NOT A QUESTION OF WHO BELONGS TO THE CLUB—BUT, WHO DOESN'T BELONG TO IT!

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Evans B. Davis Of Rialto, Rochester N. Y. Joins Club

Another manager from New York enrolls in the Club. Evans B. Davis handles the affairs of the Rialto Theatre in East Rochester, N. Y. Located in a town of 6,000 population, his house is one of the objects of interest. The reason we make the foregoing statement is because Davis was kind enough to send us in a photo of his theatre, and when they put a house on the post cards it must be beautiful. While we are not very well acquainted with his situation, and thus do not know how many prohibitive ordinances are in force in the town, we are sure that he manages to display some fine showmanship—since he informs us that most of his work and in fact some of his ideas are exactly the same or modifications of the slants presented on the Club pages.

In order that you might meet this showman face to face we are presenting his photo. We are glad to welcome him into our ranks and we know that when he pulls any stunts of especial interest and value to his fellow members he will observe our famous slogan "All for One and One for All," and send them in to us, so that we can pass them along. Keep up your good work, Evans, and remember we'd like to be kept posted from time to time on what you are doing to sell them.

IT WON'T BE LONG BEFORE SCHOOL OPENS AGAIN!
HAVE YOU PLANNED ANY SPECIAL STUNTS?
WHY NOT PASS THEM ALONG!

Comic Lion Aided Brown Parkes On Selling Of Show

Not so long ago we showed you how A. Brown Parkes, manager of the Strand Theatre, in Shreveport, La., merchandises shows in his city, and we know that you will agree with us when we remark that he certainly knows his stuff; but for those of you who have not yet come in contact with his work we are passing along a stunt he pulled for "The Social Lions."

He hired one of those trick lion costumes that are so familiar to movie-goers, dressed a man up in it and sent him out on the streets to plug the film. In order to make the stunt more effective, he tied up with a local dealer and secured the use of an automobile. An usher was dressed up in immaculate afternoon outfit and driven about town by another of the theatre's staff who was garbed as a chauffeur.

When traveling through the streets the fake lion would be placed in the rumble seat and when the car stopped at the busiest sections he would jump out and commence to clown and do tricks. While the lion performed the young man in the car sat drinking tea and chatting with passersby. In the photo we are showing you can see how well the stunt shaped up.

No matter what part of the town the strange procession went, crowds would gather to watch and in this manner the picture received plenty of publicity. As a matter of fact, it was one of the best gags that he had pulled in some time. And that's going some, isn't it, Parkes?

Some More Reasons Why G. P. Banniza Has Good Business

If G. P. Banniza should inscribe on his personal cards the words: "One of Alabama's representative showmen," he would certainly have a right to the title, especially since he has proven to be one of our most active members and a showman whose tips have long been a help to his fellow members. Of course he declares that he too gets a great many helpful hints from the work of his brother showmen, which grace the pages of the Round Table, and with a true "All For One and One For All" spirit he gives credit where credit is due.

His latest activities at the Princess Theatre in Decatur, Alabama, were productive of considerable publicity and business for him and we are sure, after reading this little account, that you will agree with us that he knows how to sell the city.

Not so long ago we featured a special exploitation hints department in conjunction with new releases and just to show you that Banniza thought that our suggestions were of value he used a couple in the ads we are reproducing. In addition to this nut ad he also effected a nut herald in the form of a pay envelope, lettered with copy headed: "Cuckoo Food." Upon inspection the envelope was found to contain bird seed. As a street ballyhoo for "The Cuckoos," he dug up an old Ford relic, that had seen better days, but at present was enjoying days of "daze."

Two men were hired to pilot the antique about the streets of Decatur, and when we say "pilot it about" the streets we mean "about," because it about hit everything but the streets. There was danger once of calling out the rescue squad to aid in extricating the flivver, which in some unknown manner wrapped itself about one of the prettiest poles in the town. The men driving, or rather hanging on to the Henry, were supposed to act cuckoo, in keeping with the tone of the picture. They acted so well that someone sent them a sign "Don't Feed the Animals." Realism? Yep!

As a result of the crazy escapade all of Decatur's residents who had watched the progress of the ballyhoo were forced to play "Hearts and Flowers" on their phonographs in order to see how it felt to get back to their normal states instead of the abnormal condition caused by a too hearty indulgence in laughter at Banniza's stunt. He tells us that it was the biggest laugh getter he had ever seen in Decatur.

Another gag that created a lot of comment was the machine gun Banniza placed in front of the house as a plug for "Officer O'Brien." Copy read: "Direct from Chicago! Captured by Officer O'Brien. One of the Playthings Used by Underworld Gangs." The novelty of the copy and display made it an object of considerable interest and aided business considerably.

Along with this story we are also showing, in the ad layouts, a special notice inserted by Banniza in the local paper addressed to "The Mothers of Decatur." The notice acted as a personal endorsement of the Byrd film and we are sure proved very effective. It would pay you to keep this angle in mind as it will perhaps come in very handy for you on a future picture. The little notice headed "Don't Forget Hot Weather Special" was a break for Banniza. It appeared on the front page of the paper, a few columns away from a heat story and is certainly a tribute to Banniza's alertness.

In the past, we have seen a good many accounts of the way newspaper editors, sensing the local news value of our write-ups of showmen's work, have reprinted them in their pages and the article we are showing in part appeared in "The Decatur Daily" and served as a free publicity plug for Banniza's house.

We could go on for a couple of pages more and tell you of the many little angles that this showman injects into his work but since he is very active we are sure that he will be represented again in the near future with a couple of new ones. We want to thank him for passing these along to us and we are sure he is going to continue his live-wire work.

C. S. McLellan Of Texas Joins; He Is Going To Be Active

In order to make amends for the many "steals" he has made from our columns, C. S. McLellan, manager of the Rialto and Queens Theatres in Kingsville, Texas, sends us in his application and promises to become as active a member as possible.

As his first contribution he gives us the low-down on a few recent endeavors that went over very well for him. Having a town of 10,000 population to draw from, he must of necessity use good judgment on his exploitation expenditures. For "Hold Everything," he promoted a co-operative page in the local newspaper, besides running his regular space. A stunt that had them talking was a special card made in the shape of a regulation street stop sign, which was placed at every intersection where there was an official stop sign. The cards carried the title, "Hold Everything," and the playdates.

On "The Cuckoos," he advertised a street parade using kids of all sizes and ages in the most cuckoo costumes possible. He offered awards for the most grotesque outfits. The kids, with donkeys dressed as "cuckoo birds," along with the old comedy gags used for parades, were taken to all of the outlying towns on the Saturday afternoon a few hours before the opening of the picture, and as Saturday is a big day in all the towns, the success of the stunt was sensational—it being necessary to stop selling tickets a short time after the opening.

When results of this sort can be obtained, we know that McLellan is certainly up on his showmanship. Another angle that he uses is in an effort to combat the Tom Thumb courses. He supplies all of the local courses with two tickets daily, for which they pay a reduced rate. The course operators offer the tickets as prizes for the best card turned in. They also permit the posting of theatre signs on their course. A state college located in Kingsville is also pressed into service to publicize the house and their bulletin boards, publications, and busses are used.

And now that he has passed these along to us, we know that McLellan is going to continue being just as active and we hope to hear from him again in the very near future, and relate some of the ways and means of box-office getting he uses.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Singapore Is Represented By Mgr. Julius S. Fisher

Here's another foreign member, added to our roll. Julius S. Fisher is the manager and publicity director of the Capitol Theatre in Singapore, Straits Settlements.

He has been in the show game since 1910 when he was secretary of "Fisher's Bioscopes, Ltd." who at that time had the South African franchise on Edison, Kalem, Essanay and Biograph products. In 1918, the business was acquired by African Theatres, Ltd. and Julius with his brother Joe, managing director of the Capitol, proceeded to Singapore to start the Middle East Film, Ltd. He remained as assistant manager of that organization for six years, leaving in 1926 to take the position of Java Manager for First National Pictures which job he held until Warners took hold of the company. Shortly after he resigned to become associated with the Capitol Theatres, Ltd. of Singapore, where he now operates.

The Capitol is the latest and largest house in the Far East having been built at a cost exceeding a million dollars. The house seats close to two thousand people and features a sound and talking policy. Many of the latest innovations, which include a parking space, call service, etc., are also featured. We would like to tell you now that we expect to present more about Julius and his show-selling in a future issue of the Managers' Round Table Club, so if you'll keep your eyes on this section we can promise you some interesting and helpful suggestions trom Singapore.

We want to extend Julius a cordial welcome into the Club and we are sure that he is going to continue his active interest.

Osborne Goes Lima To Massilon; Here's Some Of His Work

As his final contribution to the Club pages before leaving Lima, Ohio, to take up his new position as manager of the Lincoln Theatre in Massilon, Ohio, Carl M. Osborne, gives us the low-down on his recent activities, a number of which you will no doubt recognize as having appeared on the Club pages and credit for which Carl gives to Hal Kopplin and C. J. Latta.

We would like to call your attention to the telephone hanger card that C. J. Latta passed along to us and which we ran in the Club pages not so long ago. Osborne has taken this stunt and added a couple of new angles to it, and we believe that perhaps you'd like to look them over. On the coupon that the card contained, he printed two questions, "One reason why I like the Sigma?"—"Suggestions for betterment?" These two queries resulted in a couple of box-office suggestions for Osborne that were very valuable, and should you care to use them they would probably do the same for you too.

He also states that in his case he found if he gave "two admissions for the price of one" instead of free passes, it would be a lot more help. Of course, this is up to you—you know your local patronage and can best tell what is the right move to make. The subsequent issues, which are expected to be put out every six weeks, will carry a list of coming shows on the reverse side.

An angle that helped business a lot was the special ballot that he printed up and distributed about the town. The ballot carried space for the names, addresses and phone numbers of twenty persons and asked whether the undersigned were going to see "With Byrd at the South Pole." The ballots were given to the children with a request for them to secure names. The first 100 children to bring in the ballots entirely filled up were admitted to the theatre free. In this manner he was enabled to secure a couple of hundred more names for his mailing list and at the same time grab off some good-will.

PAGING SOME "LOBBY LAFFS"

Dick Kirschbaum is sorely in need of suggestions for the "Lobby Laffs" series and knowing how popular these cartoons are with our readers, we are broadcasting this request right off the Club pages.

If you stop to think for a moment or two, undoubtedly, you will recall some funny incident that occurred around your theatre that could be converted into one of Dick's "laffs."

"Keep Your Sunnyside Up" and let's all get some fun out of this series as long as Dick is good enough to do the cartooning for us.

M.R.T.C.

In conjunction with this story we are showing a sample of one of his ads on the film, that ties in a "Treasure Hunt." Despite terrific heat the hunt went over very well and the local newspapers gave him a front page story on it. In addition, Osborne also managed to secure a few pages of co-operative ads that did a lot to boost up business.

To keep Will Rogers' name before the public, in view of the fact that he expected soon to play the latest Rogers' release, he made up election cards somewhat on the style of the trick cards that Hal Kopplin used. The cards created a great deal of comment and conveyed the necessary impression.

We are also showing a photo of the unique stunt he created for "Ladies of Leisure." Passersby were invited to look into the peep hole of the display piece and see a few stills from the film. At this time we would like to direct your attention to the illuminated sign spelling out "Ladies of Leisure." The letters are made from beaverboard and fitted with porcelain sign receptacles—holes being punched in the letters to receive them. They are then mountd on a light framework and wired. Osborne tells us that he has been using these signs for some time and has found them to be very satisfactory—especially in the way they are used. A talking trailer is run on the screen from seven to ten days prior to the showing of the picture. The sign is suspended over the proscenium arch and connected with a dimmer switch in the operator's booth. It burns before the show starts and also during the exit march. Each time the trailer is shown on the screen a small quantity of juice is injected into the sign, causing it to glow faintly, in order that it would outline the letters and not reflect on the screen. When the name of the picture is flashed on the screen at the conclusion of the trailer, the sign is brought up to full illumination, causing a very effective punch to be given. This sign is made at a minimum cost and in view of the fact that it is used outside the theatre during playdates is well worth the expenditure.

We would like to point out that these few stunts that Carl so kindly passes along to us can be used on almost any picture, and as they are tried and proven business builders, we are sure that if local conditions permit full advantage will be taken of them. We want to thank Carl for passing them along and we also want to wish him the best of luck in his new position, though we are sure he is going to display the same brand of showmanship he has in the past. And it's the kind of showmanship that brings them into the house night after night.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Maynard Madden Shows Us That He Has Been Active

With a Silver Anniversary to feature, Maynard Madden, manager of the Virginia Theatre in Harrisonburg, Va., was afforded an opportunity to display the live-wire showmanship that has characterized his work for so many years.

Starting on the week before the Anniversary, he secured free newspaper readers and stories calling attention to the forthcoming Anniversary. Then, to stimulate interest he promoted a stage wedding—the first ever held in the town. All of the local merchants co-operated to the extent of donating gifts to the bridal parties. Shoes, dresses, suits, furniture, household appliances, were presented to the couple chosen from the many who made application to Madden. The newspapers were solidly behind the stage stunt and they devoted columns of space to accounts of it. The drawing power of the gag was tremendous and the theatre received loads of goodwill in addition to the increased business. In the photo we are showing, you can note the couple on the stage listening to the marriage service.

In order to boost still further the Silver Anniversary, Madden tendered a luncheon to all the business and civic leaders in the town, and the Mayor, who was present as guest of honor, proclaimed the month of August "Silver Anniversary Month in Harrisburg." A parade was staged with the local fire companies and the Municipal band taking part. The procession marched down the main street to the theatre, stopping in front of the house to render a few musical selections and then witnessed the last performance as the guests of the Circuit.

Invitations were extended to all couples celebrating their silver anniversary to be the guests of the management during the special month. A special matinee was also held for all of the silver-haired ladies in the community. The charitable home, the only one in town, was invited to send its inmates to a matinee show, sponsored by a local lodge. The inmates of the home were given free ice cream and candy after the performance.

In his lobby Madden has placed a large Anniversary Cake. All of the decorations are made up with the silver motif predominating. The front of the theatre is hung with drapes and festoons and presents a gala appearance. To show what they think of him, the City Council rescinded an order prohibiting the hanging of banners and tacking of cards on the poles, in order to permit Madden to plug his special month. The unusual street display commanded plenty of attention.

With all of these things under his belt and a good many to go yet, in the form of a chest of silver, donated by a local jeweler to be awarded to some lucky patron, and other donations, it seems to us that Madden is going to treat his town to an eyeful of some of the best showmanship they have seen in many a day and we hope that he will keep us posted as to the final results.

CIVIC CONTACTS

(From Fox West Coast "Now")
By H. A. GILLESPIE
Manager Yakima (Wash.) Theatres

It would seem unnecessary to go into the A B C's of good business policies which build goodwill and prestige for the theatre business, when preparing an article to be read by showmen.

There are certain things, of course, that every alert manager does for the promotion of his business and his theatre in the eyes of the public.

The difficult thing, at least from the smaller town angle, is to keep from doing too much. Quite often a theatre can be thrown open to everything that comes along that savors of a community effort until the first thing the manager knows the house is being run for the benefit of the community instead of the owners.

In practically every small town the theatre, if it is properly conducted, is one of the centers of community affairs and for this reason is besieged constantly by requests for cheap theatre rentals and percentages of gross business for various worthy community endeavors. Obviously it is impossible to operate profitably unless the necessity for profits is constantly kept in mind. In other words, it is easy to build prestige at the expense of receipts; it is not so easy in a small town where one must say no so many times.

Notwithstanding Frank Whitbeck's caution concerning Women's Clubs, Parent-Teachers Associations and like organizations, it has been my experience that, if handled properly, such organizations are the easiest to keep on our side. Also, goodwill in any quarter does not have such immediate results as does the good will of the women's organizations.

It is far better to meet with them as many times as they desire and agree with them that the movies need improving notwithstanding the tremendous advances that have already been made. Admit that some pictures are not all that they might be; admit that they are not all that we who run theatres would like to have them be; then point out the fact that patrons dictate the class of entertainment produced. Ask their co-operation and support of the better class of productions. Invariably such support will be promised and pending crusades forgotten.

Novel Presentation Of Trailer Proved Aid For Thompson

Another showman who is enthusiastic about novelty in trailer presentation is T. W. Thompson, manager of the Avalon Theatre in Grand Junction, Colo., and he more than showed his liking for the unusual in the special trailer prologue he put on for "Anybody's War."

An usher in uniform came out on the stage with the end of a rope in his hand. He announced that he was going to introduce the Two Black Crows'—Moran and Mack—new partner.

While telling them about the picture, the usher moved across the stage pulling a rope which was being jerked from the unseen end. After pulling about 75 feet of rope, he stopped and said, "Ladies and Gentlemen—I take great pleasure in introducing our conception of 'DEEP STUFF,' Moran and Mack's new partner." The spot which was on the usher moved over to the other side of the stage to a small Seelyham terrier on the end of the rope.

After the applause subsided, the spot returned to the usher who announced the dates of the picture. He then announced that he will show them a few scenes from the picture—and then the trailer was flashed on.

This is typical of all of Thompson's work and we hope that he will favor us with some more of these accounts so that we can pass them along to his fellow members in the Club.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

LOOKING OVER THE FIELD WITH "CHICK"

Vic Gauntlet Will Be Heard From

ONE of our most pleasant recollections of Seattle will be the meeting and chatting with Vic Gauntlet, Advertising Manager for John Hamrick's Theatres in Seattle, Portland and Tacoma. Here, boys, is the real dean of press agents in the northwest and we doubt whether anyone will start an argument with us over that statement.

You old timers who have followed Motion Picture News for years will recall the marvelous series of articles he wrote some years back for our Showman section. I'm positive that Vic will come through with a still more interesting series this fall, and anyone in showbusiness who misses a line of what Vic writes will be a loser. And why shouldn't he be a damned fine man to talk about press agenting and advertising? What a background and experience. You mark my words boys, when you see an announcement on the Club pages that Gauntlett's series is due to start, get yourself set for some valuable reading. How far back can we trace Vic's advertising work? Well, it dates around the time that Theda Bara appeared in "A Fool There Was." So just laugh that off if you think he's short on knowing the subject.

Introducing Walter Tebbetts

Luck was with us and we were fortunate enough to meet this well-known showman who had just come in from the beach for a few hours. Not that he had any message of great importance to convey to the industry, he's not that type, but because we felt right at home sitting there and chatting with him.

He is at present operating the Oriental Theatre just across the river from the downtown section, and those of you who believe that the day of the popular local theatre man is past need only meet up with men of Tebbett's kind to find out how wrong you are. Here is a man who owns and operates his theatre. You can find him many a night standing near the doorman or taking tickets himself. And do the cash customers like him? Well, just stand by and listen to the "Howdy" that he gets from the majority of them, and when we say majority, we mean practically everyone who buys a ticket.

Sell out to a chain? Not a chance. Did they threaten him? And how. Does he intend to stick right to his guns and keep on operating this, and perhaps, some other houses? Darned tootin' he does, and we don't blame him. He represents hundreds of exhibitors just like himself who have spent the better part of their lives in the business and what's more, are a credit to the show game. We're wishing him plenty of luck.

We spent all the time we could afford on this visit and then started back to town. We were anxious to say hello to Andy Sasso, managing John Hamrick's Music Box Theatre. Andy put over a corker when he maneuvered that sign hanging right across the main street of the city, and being one jump ahead of the other houses with similar signs, his has the additional advantage of two rows of changeable letters. Picture it boys, your theatre's big electric sign strung right across the thoroughfare with your attractions getting a play equally as fine as the sign itself. That's high speed in any showman's town and I doubt whether I'll get any comebacks to the statement.

It was an interesting conversation we had together and I'm certain that in the future Andy Sasso's activities will occupy a prominent place on the Club pages. Stop me if I'm wrong, Sasso. Oak?

And then, after a short stroll down the avenue, we bust right in on Jimmy O'Connell, manager of the Publix Rialto Theatre, another house with a peach of an electric sign strung over the street. They have about four houses with this gag in Portland and I'm only hoping, for their sake, that one of them don't do a Brodey onto the pavement. If anyone's under them, they'll get scratched a bit, I'm afraid.

Over the Hills to Seattle

WITH much regret we left Portland and headed further north to this famous city on hills. Just think, 19 years since I last walked the streets of this burg and what changes! Especially among the theatres. Why it's a real thriving metropolis and then some.

And little Sammy Seigel was right here with the glad-hand to greet me, so that started the visit off perfect. Sammy is rather short on size but big on hospitality and it was more than appreciated because it helped us get around and see people. Don't have to ask how to get here or there—and know just the right place to find the right people.

And surprise number two was a phone call from old friend Al Gillis, formerly of the Fox-Poli outfit but now back in his native haunts. This was an unusual surprise because we called to locate Al and was told that he had left for Minneapolis, but the information-giver was not on the right track or he must of meant somebody else. But what difference did it make? We had a mighty pleasant time talking over many things and we sure hope that Al gets back East again this fall.

Fighting for Business

AFTER a little chat with C. M. Dunn who operates the former Pantages house here, now called the Follies, and also the Capitol in Portland, Ore., it was mighty plain that they are having tough sledding this summer, but one must admire the pluck and stick-to-it-ive-ness of these independents who are willing to fight their uphill battle and who somehow come out with a smile just the same. The Follies, like many other houses I've seen along the coast and especially around the northwest, ought to be a corking b.o. producer if they could switch to a nice brand of vaudeville (not varieties). But where is a guy going to get vaudeville (not varieties) out in this part of the country? Just can't be had right now. Maybe a smart independent booker will get hep and line up a string between Chicago and the northwest. He'll mop up in my estimation because vaudeville (not varieties) will pull many a red cluck into the black.

Mills a Genial Editor

TRUE to my promise to Eddie Hitchcock (this is HIS town you know), I phoned Harry Mills, dramatic editor of the Seattle Star and even if we could not put on the feed bag together, we did manage to talk things over on the phone. Maybe I'll maneuver it yet. Tomorrow's another day you know. But never knowing how long I can arrange to stay makes it hard to lay out definite plans. Have a faint idea that if Harry and yours truly ever get together we'll have a real chummy (?) visit. What say Mills? Oak?

Stopped off to see if Earl Crabb was divisional managing up at the Fox office, but he was attending another meeting. Seems like they must take a lunch kit with them, they are always at meetings. But this one was for a good cause. I'll contact him yet. But we did meet Sid McDonald, assistant to Crabb and chatted with him in between his O.K.'s on the bills. What a job, putting O.K.'s on bills. Well, someone must do it I suppose.

Himelhoch Will Show You How

LISTEN my friends and you will hear the modern tale of the showman who only knew one religion. "Get The Business." And so, step up and grab the warm and welcome mitt of none other than Dave Himelhoch, manager of the Fox Coliseum here in Seattle and a human dynamo if there ever was one.

Are you crying about lost kiddie business? Do you complain that the youngsters won't come to the picture shows any more? Well, just set yourself down, and drop a line to Dave and ask him how he does it. Will he answer you? I'll gamble that he will. You see he's just that kind. Busy as hell, but always ready to lend a helping hand to any showman anywhere.

His Mickey Mouse Klub matinee shows are the talk of the northwest, and the funny part of it all, is that he is one important guy in this community. Being president of the local Censor Board is no mite of a job for any man, but he handles that job as well as a dozen others, yet he finds time to see that his theatre is properly run. That's pep for you. Take a back-seat you, so-called, youngbloods, unless you can hold a candle to Dave.

Just wait until I get back to my desk in New York and pass along the details of some of his stuff, plus the photos which I phenagled out of him. I'm saving this particular material until I can lay it out the way I want it to appear.

O'Connell's Indian Stunt

WE meant to tell you last week about a novel stunt that Jimmy O'Connell pulled recently at the Rialto in Portland, but we had so many other angles to pass along that we held it until this week.

At the time we were in his office, he was working out a corking campaign for "The Silent Enemy," and we're right here to say that it has all the earmarks of something decidedly unusual. Having to do with Indians he has tied in an Indian stunt involving the burning of a signal fire on a nearby mountain top. Interesting? I'll say it is. But, as he has promised us all the details, we'll refrain from hinting any more of it until you read about the entire stunt on the Club pages.

Joe Cooper Plugs Along

RKO's advertising and exploitation for the Pacific and Northwest is looked after by none other than good old Joe Cooper and the job is in capable hands. For proof of this statement, just watch the ads Joe turns out and the way he handles himself. Real showman and executive sez we. Who dares say nay? Nobody? So we thought. And as likable a chap as you'll meet in many a mile of travel. Oughtn't we to know? We've covered about 4,500 miles already.

Our interview (if you would call it that) covered many and varied topics including a couple near and dear (?) to the hearts of all concerned, but when we tell you that Cooper is the kind of a bird you CAN talk to, then you will better understand what we are trying to get across to you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Yes, Fred Johnson Is Sure Putting The Latonia Across

If any of his friends have been wondering what happened to Fred Johnson, this little story will allay their fears because we want to report that Fred is hard at work putting the Latonia Theatre in Oil City up among the leaders of the Pennsylvania houses.

As Fred says: ". . . have been so busy out billing and tacking arrows advertising the Latonia that I have not had time to do anything but work. We have now about 46 windows in small and other sized towns within a radius of 40 miles of Oil City to which we send one-sheets every week and we have tacked along all routes a nice arrow pointing to "Latonia-Oil City's Finest Theatre." We put up 300 of these. Trees, posts, etc., get tacked and we aim to hit the curves to strike their eye when rounding them."

So that's that. And when Fred tells us he's busy, he sure is. But to get back to the box-office angle. This stunt that he engineered has boosted the out-of-town business a great deal and, from the looks of things, is going to go still higher. This hasn't been all that Fred has been doing. He pulled a Rose Matinee recently that let him in for plenty of publicity and good-will. Any kid bringing a rose to the theatre was entitled to free admission. When the roses were all gathered together they were dispatched to local sanitariums.

Another stunt that went over well for Fred was the "Shooting" of local clubs, plants, oil wells, barrel works, stores, city official, country clubs, and scenes about town. The pictures were shown at the theatre in conjunction with the regular program and the resultant business and publicity more than paid for the cost of taking the pictures.

Oke, Fred. We are glad to see that you are bringing that house right along and we are sure that you are going to keep us informed of your progress by continuing to be an active member.

G. Laby's Advance Lobby Displays Are Always Effective

If we were to judge from the way people look at his displays we should say that George Laby, manager of the Washington St. Olympia Theatre in Boston, Mass., is entitled to hang out a sign declaring that he has a double feature—one a picture and the other a lobby display.

In the past we have shown many examples of this showman's work and it seems to us that he gets better and better. If you will study the photos that we are showing, you will get a line on what he does and how he sells them on his coming attractions.

The special aeronautical display on "The Dawn Patrol" was secured by a member of his service staff, R. Randall, and he certainly deserves a compliment for his work. So much comment was occasioned by this medium of show selling that Laby held the display over and used it during the run of the picture, utilizing space along side of it for the next attraction. In the simplicity of the other display on "Anybody's War" lay the secret of its pulling power. Black and silver coloring was used in all of the work, the shells being made of cut-out beaver board, with heavy black lines outlining the forms.

We want to thank Laby for passing these two corking displays along to us and we know that they will prove to be of valuable interest to the rest of the Club. With Laby turning out this sort of work we hope to have more of it to pass along to his fellow members in the very near future.

HEADLINES TELL THE STORY

(Extract from Miami Herald)

PLANES WILL CARRY CUBANS TO MIAMI FOR AVIATION MEET

Official to Represent Machado at Premiere of "Dawn Patrol"

International recognition of the opening presentation of Richard Barthelmess' aviation epic of the World War, "The Dawn Patrol," at the Fairfax Theatre, Friday, will take tangible form in the presence of four Cuban aviators who will come to Miami to officially represent the air service of Cuba on this occasion.

The invitation was extended to President Gerardo Machado and Cuban officials on behalf of the Miami Junior Chamber of Commerce by its president, Joseph B. Rice, who now is in Havana. In response two government planes will leave Havana Thursday afternoon for Miami, convoyed by a Pan-American plane on which Rafael Martinez Ybor, assistant Secretary of State and President of the Cuban National Press Bureau, will come as President Machado's representative.

Upon their arrival at the Pan-American airport the Cubans will be met by the aviation committee of the junior chamber of commerce and city aviation officials. During their stay of three days in Miami the Cuban delegation will be guests of Henry J. Smith of the Alcazar Hotel. They will make their official appearance at the evening performance at the Fairfax Friday, occupying official boxes which will be decorated with Cuban and American flags. Later the Cubans will be guests of honor at an aviation ball the junior chamber of commerce and Fairfax Theatre will sponsor at the Alcazar Roof in honor of the Cuban fliers.

The junior chamber of commerce aviation committee will complete plans for the entertainment of the visitors at a meeting tomorrow.

"The Dawn Patrol" now is being shown in New York and has created a sensation. It is the "Journey's End" of the aviation side of the war. In addition to Barthelmess and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., 36 American fliers appear in the picture.

A lot of words would be inadequate to convey the showmanship that went into this latest Earle Holden stunt. He crashed the front page of the Miami Herald on one of the biggest publicity scoops the city has ever witnessed. Congratulations!

G. E. Hoffman Sells Shows With Shadow Box Atop Marquee

A shadow box atop his marquee is the way that G. E. Hoffman, manager of the Ritz Theatre in Anniston, Ala., plugs his attractions, and since the frame was constructed at a minimum expenditure we are passing the idea along to you so that you can decide whether you would want to use one to sell your shows, too.

The frame is 14 feet long and three feet high and six inches deep. The inside of the box is painted a flat white and has 22 100-watt lights around the top sides and bottom which at night is a solid light.

The top of the box has a hinged lid with grooves on the inside to permit a frame which is covered with ordinary banner cloth—costing less than a dollar for each change, which includes cloth, plain black oil color and labor. Everything is done in black and white.

The transparent box frame is an old one which Hoffman has made over; the entire cost being under five dollars. But what Hoffman likes about this new advertising medium is that he can change it with each change of picture at the nominal cost of less than a dollar.

From what we know about it, it is working great for Hoffman. Of course, we have to take into consideration your local conditions, which we do not know anything about, and for that reason you'd have to dope out whether you would need an angle of this sort. However, we want to thank him for passing this along and we hope to hear more.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

HERE'S HOLMES!

Fresh from the management of eight Publix Paramount Playhouses in Palm Beach and Lake Worth, Florida, Conrad L. Holmes, new city manager of the Paramount and Rialto Theatres in Portland, Oregon, is making the city sit up and take notice.

Six years have elapsed since Holmes first visited Portland, and his many experiences since then are proving invaluable to him in bringing in business to his houses.

He has been in the show game for 20 years, starting as an usher, then working as a musician, besides attending to the many seemingly endless tasks which a showman contends with every day he is in the business.

Just to give you some idea of the wallop that this showman packs, we'd like to tell you of a recent stunt he pulled in conjunction with his selling of "The Dawn Patrol."

He arranged to have eighteen planes race from Portland to Seattle. Besides carrying the aviators, the planes also bore the first string film critics of the Portland papers. The ships raced to the Washington city and upon arriving at the landing field the passengers were invited to the Seattle branch of the Paramount exchange where the film was screened for their benefit. When the aviators and newspaperites returned, the reporters wrote out their reviews and these were published the opening day after the film opened at the Portland Paramount.

That's high powered publicity; and there's a lot more on the way if you'll keep watching Holmes' work on the pages of the Managers' Round Table Club.

Billy Stillman Is Cashing In On All Angles For Kid Biz.

Starting in at an early age to promote publicity and other things for prize fights, it was only natural for Billy Stillman when he broke into show business to continue his go-getting tactics and start promoting right, left, etc. Ever since he has been handling the Ritz in Jersey City, Billy has been turning out some fine work and his latest is no exception.

Through a tie-up with a popular Jersey City dancing school he persuaded the teacher to lend him 50 of his 600 pupils in order to put on a Kiddie Show at the Ritz. The teacher was more than glad to comply with the request, particularly since he was to figure in the publicity. And so Bill inaugurated "Ritz Cabaret Night."

Fifteen numbers were put on by the children, who ranged in age from seven to twenty. All sorts of dancing were represented. There was tap, toe, soft shoe, clog, and wooden shoes. To break up the program, some of the more versatile children rendered the latest song numbers. The whole affair was carried along on the same lines as a revue night club and was studded with solos, duets and group numbers. Many special costumes were introduced in the numbers and they provided a very effective flash, lending, as they did, color and harmony.

Before we go any further we'd like you to know that this was the snappiest show put on during the year and was a fitting climax to "Manager's Week," the name Billy affixed to his many efforts. And his "Manager's Week" was a corker. Look at these: Monday, "Grab Bag Night"; Tuesday, "Old Fashioned Country Store"; Wednesday, Ukelele Contest," with five ukes being donated as prizes; Thursday, five pairs of shoes given away to persons whose feet they would fit.

So you see that with such an imposing array of showmanlike work behind him, Billy had to do some tall stepping to outdo himself, but his Cabaret Night was voted the best event of the week. And since it didn't cost a thing but a lot of extra work for Billy, who didn't mind it in the least, it was not only a good-will and a publicity success, but, most important of all, a financial one. And since we know Billy, we know that it was what he was shooting at. And scored a bulls-eye; so, being a good marksman, and one who never fails to hit the bulls-eye ten times out of ten, it was a sure thing that he was going to annex another record.

Endurance Drive Was Timely Idea ForHarryMarchand

A timely tieup was arranged by Harry Marchand, manager of the Saenger Theatre, Mobile, Alabama, on "HOLD EVERYTHING" and an Endurance Drive staged in that town with Daredevil Jack Derby, day and date with the showing of the picture. This drive was a non-stop 100-hour performance given by one of the most widely known drivers in the country.

The daredevil was handcuffed to the wheel of the car in front of the Newspaper office where a crowd of over a thousand people gathered to see the start. A card announcing the picture "HOLD EVERYTHING" was tied across the front and rear bumpers of the car. Every now and then while the driver was around town, he would lean out of the car and yell "HOLD EVERYTHING."

Naturally everyone in town was interested in the drive and whenever he would pass all eyes were on him.

A furniture store tied in and furnished the Hollywood Bed Room Suite for display in the theatre lobby and a mattress factory not only furnished the mattress where the daredevil would be brought to sleep after the drive but gave this mattress away to the person guessing the nearest number of hours, minutes and seconds the driver would sleep after his drive. Over 500 people entered this contest.

A Gas Refrigerator was installed in the foyer of the theatre to keep the Dr. Pepper cold. Both these companies ran big ads on the event and naturally the Saenger came in for plenty of free publicity.

At seven o'clock, he was brought back to the Saenger lobby, where he slept until the next morning. A trained nurse was stationed beside the bed and the corner of the lobby where he was roped off. Naturally, this caused a crowd and it is almost safe to say that four out of every five that entered the lobby to see the daredevil sleep, came in to see the picture.

A tie-up with the Milk Company, admitting children for 10 milk bottle tops and adults for 25 between certain hours on Saturday, was also effected and the theatre received free newspaper space on this.

It is impossible to put in this small a space, the amount of absolutely free publicity the theatre received from this tie-up. We are reproducing a photo taken in front of the theatre which will give you a faint idea of the mobs which were attracted. Although the photo is not very clear we are certain it will answer the purpose. Nice work for Marchand and we would like to see lots more like it.

LAFF-OF-THE-WEEK

"The height of optimism" opines one of our members, "is for a theatre manager to shut off the cooling system when he is running an Antarctic picture."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

His Endorsement Gave Koppelberger Editorial Break

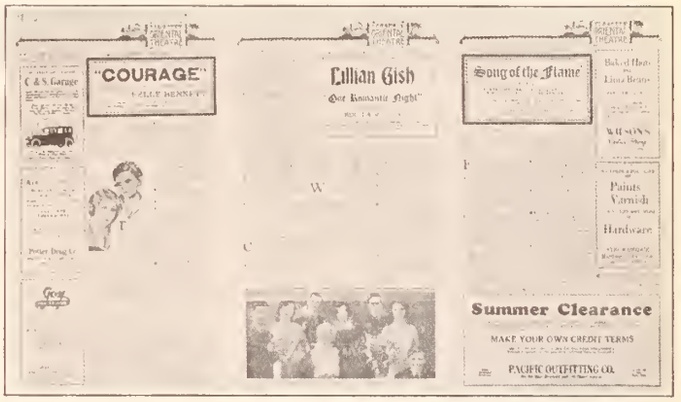
Though the film he was selling was "All Quiet on the Western Front," it wasn't so quiet for the residents of La Crosse, Wisconsin, when F. L. Koppelberger, manager of the Rivoli Theatre secured a circus calliope to plug the picture.

The calliope, a very beautiful affair, painted in cream color and gold, created a considerable flash. Three immense boards on the sides and back of the truck carried the theatre and playdates. A non-sync outfit was concealed inside the van and a loud speaker extended through the back. As the truck went from town to town, the non-sync playing records and shouting announcements, created a great deal of interest wherever it stopped or passed through. Uniformed attendants stood on either side of the truck and when it stopped at particularly busy spots they passed out announcements.

We have spoken many times of the value of a personal endorsement of a picture—a stunt which, if not over-used, will always be productive of increased business. Koppelberger decided to use it in conjunction with his campaign on the film and since it was so well made up we are reproducing it here in order that you may see the novel layout. This ad was so effective that it attracted the attention of the editor of the local paper and he came through with a big editorial giving his views on the picture, which were very favorable. We could go on for a couple of pages and tell you of the many other tie-ups that Koppelberger and his assistant, Wm. Freise, had, but since both space and time are limited we will have to sign off with our thanks to Mr. Freise for letting us see these, and we hope to hear some more about the showmanship being displayed in La Crosse because work of this type, we know, should not be kept under cover, especially when there's a medium like the Managers' Round Table Club in Motion Picture News which reaches thousands of showmen all over the world and assists them with their campaigns. Let's hear from you again, Mr. Freise, and how about a photo and a story on Mr. Koppelberger and yourself?

Colored Crooners Were Atmosphere At La Bar's House

When a stunt is so good that it has to be pulled in from danger of blocking traffic, you know that the man who engineered the gag must be a mighty fine showman and knows just what his public wants and for that reason when F. LaBar, Jr., manager of the Plaza Theatre, played "Hallelujah" he planned on putting in a typical Southern lobby with real negro atmosphere. He arranged for the loan of several bales of cotton and hired two negro musicians who could also sing. These crooned Southern plantation songs and alternated with modern blues during the busy afternoon and evening hours during the engagement and LaBar reports that during the evening he had to take them off the job to avoid blocking traffic. The jam Saturday afternoon and night was so large that extra police had to be called and the singers pulled in every half hour.



The removal of the lobby entertainment, LaBar reports, resulted in a large portion of those standing around the lobby buying tickets. When this crowd had been sold, he would bring the singers out again and start the ballyhoo all over. Business was excellent on the three days' run.

This showman has been represented on our pages many times and his up-to-the-minute activities have been the subject of many an article of interest. As he is one of our most active members, we know that he will continue the interest he has shown in the past and that more of his work will be passed along from time to time.

HOW A REAL INDEPENDENT EXHIBITOR MAKES UP A PROGRAM

Meet "Snapshots," the house organ of the Oriental Theatre in Portland, Oregon.. The Oriental is owned and operated by Walter Tebbetts, about whom more information may be obtained in this week's installment of "Looking Over the Field With 'Chick'." Marks a forward step in program make-up. Doesn't it?

Waterson Secured A Window Display In His Local Bank

When a bit of imaginative thinking can be substituted for a cash outlay in the way R. W. Waterson, manager of the Indiana theatre, Bedford, Ind., did, it is indeed a happy situation.

Waterson used an advertising device for his showings of "The Border Legion" that not only cost a minimum sum, but produced results far in excess of more commonplace forms of advertising. A tie-up was made with a local bank, whereby the bank displayed in its window an old safe that had been dynamited by yeggs. Imitation currency and money bags were strewn about the opening of the safe and copy on a display card called attention to the bank's safety deposit vaults as a safeguard for menaces such as the outlaw characters of "The Border Legion." Other copy made a more definite tie-in about the picture itself, and included theatre name and playdates.

The attention of hundreds of people was drawn to the dynamited safe, and some good sales messages that were interesting enough to be read by all who looked were gotten across, that resulted in a box-office high for Waterson.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Assistant Managers as Members!

In order that we may dispel a wrong impression, we want all assistant theatre managers to know they are eligible for membership in the Round Table Club, PROVIDING their manager certifies as to the position they hold.

Many assistant managers have important duties in their respective theatres, such as publicity and exploitation directors, treasurers, etc. We therefore feel that their activities are many times just as important to the Club pages as the managers.

The reasons we make this one provision is that it is difficult for us to know whether an applicant who calls himself an assistant manager is really just that. We can check up on the assistants and we would rather they expressed their willingness before their assistants joined the Club.

Fishing In Lobby Was Recent Stunt At Short's House

Big ponds are springing up here, there and everywhere. The nation, as far as showmen can make it, is going to become big pond conscious. And one of the instigators of the conspiracy is Paul Short, manager of the Tampa Theatre in Tampa, Fla.

What is a big pond? It is a stunt devised by some alert showman to use an advance plug on Maurice Chevalier's picture "The Big Pond." A tank is constructed in the lobby of the theatre and patrons are invited to angle for celluloid fish floating about the water. Fishing reels are provided by the management (which promoted them from a local sporting goods dealer) and the bait held out to the sportsmen in that at the bottom of some of the fish is placed a number. Any angler hooking the numbered fish is entitled to free tickets to the theatre.

The stunt has been clicking all over the country. Wherever the picture was played, there would be found a bunch of sport enthusiasts grouped about the pond, enrapturedly watching some one engaged in a tussle with the finny denizens. And when the sportsman would hook an especially fine piscatorial specimen that would entitle him to free admission to the theatre, he would be forced to bow to the salvos of applause showered upon him by his admiring audience. Young and old try their hands at it. Experienced anglers and the kid who fishes with a bent pin and a piece of string would vie with each other in an attempt to land a price catch; with the kid usually winning.

But whoa! What's all this? All we started out to say was that the fine display which the photo shows was turned out as a background for the stunt and is the work of Louis Sylvester, house artist for the Tampa Theatre and we guess you'll agree with us when we say that it is certainly a fine piece of work and a very fitting background for Short's showmanship.

This Is What Latta Did When Weather Became Too Warm

"It's a hundred in the shade," cries out C. J. Latta, "and everyone is going to the beach. Here I am with a big house like the Roger Sherman in New Haven, Conn., to fill, and something must be done."

The above was Latta's cry. But not for long. Having been in the show game for a number of years, and being well qualified to hold his present position, since he has proven that he knows his business, Latta decided the only way to keep people informed of the attractions at his house was to beard them right in their own lairs. And did he do it?

In the cut we are showing, you can see the motor boat he hired to cruise about the various beaches. The coat carried a large banner plugging the feature picture. It was maneuvered as close to the bathers as possible and fortunately it happened to be close enough so that the sign was read. With countless thousands of bathers dotting the beaches during the day plenty of attention was paid to the novel ballyhoo and doubtless resulted in the presence of many of the bathers at the evening performance at the theatre.

This stunt of Latta's worked wonders for him and we feel that if you are looking for something along the same lines, providing local conditions warrant it, that it will also click for you. At any rate, give it some thought, and if you can use it, take it with Latta's compliments.

Wallace Handed Patrons A Funny One On Campaign

One of our most active Canadian members, Hugh Wallace, former manager of the Kitsilano Theatre in Vancouver, B. C., who has just been transferred to the Empress Theatre in Penticon, B. C., decided to shoot along to us his last work turned out at the Kitsilano so that his fellow showmen and managers could see how he sold "Three Live Ghosts" to his public.

With the picture a comic one, he decided that a funny advance plug in his lobby would be necessary and so he hastened to secure a bed from a local dealer which was placed on display right near the entrance doors and in full view of everyone entering the theatre. The bed carried a large sign reading: "For Patrons who Split Their Sides Laughing at 'Three Live Ghosts'." As this was the first time a display of this sort had been used considerable interest was shown with the ultimate result of better business during play dates.

Not just satisfied with the bed stunt, Wallace also painted a special placard, in one sheet size, which carried copy: "Important Notice to Everyone—We Are Taking Out a Laugh Insurance Policy Insuring Our Theatre Against the Claim of Persons Bringing Suit for Injury Through Having Laughed Too Hard at 'Three Live Ghosts'." This card also had the people alternately talking and laughing.

We want to thank Wallace for passing these along to us and we also want to wish him success on his new assignment and let him know that we think him capable of building up business at the Empress as he has done at his former house. Let's hear from you soon, Hugh.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Martin Messinger Used Phone Stunt To Good Results

Though he is located in one of New York City's many neighborhood houses, Martin Messinger, manager of the Costello Theatre, is so well acquainted with his local public that he can tell just what stunt will best click for any picture he is plugging.

When he played "Safety in Numbers," he decided to use the lucky phone number stunt, made so popular in New Haven by C. J. Latta and in Massachusetts by John Scanlon, to sell the picture. Accordingly he made up a number of heralds containing very effective selling copy on the film. The reverse side of the heralds (which were made up in the form of cards printed in black on colored stock) carried the explanation. The patron was invited to leave his or her phone number at the box-office. The card explained that during the time the picture played, three numbers would be called every evening. Persons receiving the calls were entitled to witness the performance as the guests of the management.

As the stunt had never been used before it went over with a bang and the cards, which were distributed at local shops, through the mailing lists, and handed out by ushers began to pour in with startling rapidity. Since space had been left for the name and address as well as the phone number, Messinger was pretty sure to boost up his mailing list and the addition of a few hundred names to it more than repaid him for the time he had spent in planning the stunt.

So that you may meet this showman "face to face" we are reproducing his photo at the top of this article. We are glad to note that he is turning out some fine work at his house and we feel sure that now, since he has shown that he wants to be very active in the Club affairs, he will continue. Are we right, Martin?

Grossman Is Giving ThemShowmanship At Park In B'klyn

We have always shouted that Brooklyn, N. Y., is right there with the goods if the showmen in that city care to display their work. Rallying to our call, Milton Grossman, of the Park Theatre, sends us a photo of a recent stunt he used on "True to the Navy," to boost up business.

Through a tie-up with a marine dealer in one of the waterfront sections of the city he was enabled to secure a number of exhibits such as life preservers, anchors, ship lights, steering wheel and other parts of a ship. These were all placed on display in the lobby a week before play date and moved out front when the day for the picture's appearance rolled around. In order to set them off to good advantage Grossman conceived the plan of using special beaver board cut-outs of the star and placing them around the outer lobby and box-office.

To make sure that the nautical exhibit would make a decided impression on his patrons, he also tied up with a local Army and Navy store and secured free of charge a number of sailor suits which were distributed to his ushers. The boys arrayed themselves in the costumes and presented a striking appearance that was an excellent aid in publicing the film and creating word-of-mouth comment. The co-operating dealers were given credit cards for seven days in the lobby of the theatre.

It is certainly a pleasure to see this work that Milton is turning out as it has not been since the days when Bill Levey handled the house that we have heard anything about exploitation. Keep it up, Milton, and we know that the additional business as a result of your work will more than repay you.

ORGANS AND ORGANISTS!

Just because we stopped referring to the fact that you should use your organ as long as it's in the house and cost so much to purchase, is no reason why you should get the impression that the suggestion was not favorably received.

In glancing through some fifty odd letters, before filing, we find that over a dozen showmen thought enough of our suggestion to not only put it to good use, but to make it a regular feature of their programs.

Why not dust off the console and try a good organist for a few weeks, giving him, or her, a good send-off via peppy advertising. Maybe even you will be surprised to find that the patrons like it. We're not asking you to go out and buy yourself an organ. If you have one, don't let it rot away. Use it and make it pay for its keep and the organist you use.

Real Kitchen In Lobby Was Featured By B. Fagin

How would you like to treat your patrons to freshly baked cookies, cakes and muffins? That's what B. L. Fagin, manager of the Plaza Theatre in Kansas City, Mo., did to help put "Honey" across to bigger and better box-office receipts.

Through a special arrangement he made with the Kansas City Power and Light Company he was enabled to procure, free of charge, the corking display that we are showing in the photo. The kitchen was placed in the lobby a week before playdate and proved to be a very valuable medium for securing word-of-mouth publicity. The lighting company also furnished the theatre with plenty of publicity by mentioning the display in their ads.

The equipment was run entirely by electricity and thousands of customers were served in the days that it was on display. From the time the theatre opened till it closed persons were around the counter munching cake and cookies. The good-will derived from the gag was tremendous and the value of such a tie-up as this was seen on the playdates when business jumped way up above the average. We want to thank Mr. Fagin for passing this along to us and we hope to hear more from him concerning the way he merchandises his attractions in Kansas City. And by the way "B. L." we find that we haven't a photo of you in our files, how about shooting one along to us with your next contribution, and also a little dope on your career in the business. Oke?

Irwin Waite Dressed Up Gag For "Puttin' On Ritz"

An old gag was dressed up in new trimmings by Irwin R. Waite, manager of the Majestic Theatre in Austin, Texas and used to exploit Harry Richman in "Puttin' On the Ritz." As we have stated many times, you can take almost any gag on the Club pages and use it to suit whatever picture you are plugging and in this one Irwin certainly took advantage of the fact.

The stunt was in the form of a Government postcard with persons being invited to write the name Harry Richman as many times as possible on the back of the card. To the ones writing the actor's name the most number of times a five-dollar gold piece was presented with the next five receiving free tickets to witness the picture.

This stunt differed from the usual method by having it conducted through the newspaper. The newspaper announced it in detail as well as telling all would-be contestants to procure the Government postcards at the Post Office. By conducting the stunt through the newspaper columns, it saved the theatre the expense of having cards printed and distributed. The newspaper also contributed four excellent stories on the idea—always mentioning title of picture, theatre and playdates.

With the co-operation of the newspaper secured, it was a pretty sure thing that the contest would receive a great deal of attention and the vast amount of cards that flooded Waite's office the day after the first notice appeared spoke well for a successful run of the film. And Waite wasn't disappointed either.

Kane and Eberly Landed Free Space In Redwood Paper

Show selling of the type that you would expect from a showman of Tom Kane's calibre has been shown often on these pages. In the past we have presented many accounts of his work and the always good results. No matter what local event comes up in Redwood City, Cal., Kane is right there getting in his plug for the Sequoia Theatre.

A prominent figure in the affairs of all the local organizations, he has access to nearly everything in the city and manages always to keep his house before the public. In the cut we are showing, an idea will be obtained of how Kane and Clinton Eberly, his assistant, work together to corking results.

During Kane's recent vacation, Eberly, who has been under his tutelage for some time, saw an opportunity to land plenty of stories in the newspaper about the house. It seems that the local daily had just opened a new plant, so he inserted a special ad in the paper offering congratulations. The paper executives were so pleased that they decided to work a special page around the ad and you can see what a corking effect it created. With the circulation for this edition entirely free, every one in Redwood City and the surrounding territory received a copy and it was a sure thing that they would look at the ad. Which they did.

Showmanship of this sort does much to cement the friendship between the local newspaper and the theatre and we know that if the opportunity ever arises whereby you too can cash in on a stunt like it you will more than take advantage.

"THE CREAM IN HIS COFFEE!"

"And right here I want to say that nowadays you don't have to be a showman; just take some brick and mortar, build a theatre, join the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and Uncle Sam places the bible of show business on your desk. If then you can't put the showhouse over, learn a song and join some chorus if you want to stay in the show business. And this comes from one in the show business thirty years. I look for the NEWS each week as I do my coffee every morning." R. S. A.

Phil Fourmet Puts On Novel Trailer Presentations Also

To make sure that his patrons are completely sold on his coming attractions, Phil Fourmet, manager of the Colorado Theatre in Pueblo, Col., sees to it that he has a couple of special novelties to add to his trailer presentations, and his work on "The Big House" advance trailer proves to us that he rates pretty high around his district.

The trailer was presented through an organ presentation. Two men made up as convicts were seated behind the scrim and spotted from above with green. A slide was thrown on the screen, making them appear to be in cells. Over the "non-sync" the Prisoner's Song was played, accompanied by the organist.

At the end of the chorus which was used, the operator shot into the first prison scene in the trailer. The unique way of presenting this talking trailer had a very good effect and added much interest in the picture.

This novel mode of presentation had the desired effect, as Fourmet, watching the people, noticed the intense interest which his stunt occasioned. Listen, Phil! Why don't you give us the dope on a few more of your presentations so that we can pass them along to the rest of the Club? And when you shoot us in a few lines on it include your photograph.

Bernie Satz Gave Away Cuckoo Clock As Special Treat

Making double use of his stunt on "The Cuckoos" enabled Bernie Satz, manager of the Casino Theatre in Ware, Mass., to let his house in for some additional publicity, to say nothing of the good-will and extra business that the stunt occasioned.

As he felt that the most logical display he could create on the film should be worked around a cuckoo clock, he purchased one from a local dealer. The clock was placed on a beaver board in the lobby which carried a display showing the stars in the picture and the selling copy. A sign on the bottom of the display stated that the clock would be given away to the person sitting in the "lucky seat" on a designated night.

The card created a lot of word-of-mouth comment and many persons made special trips to the theatre to look at the clock. Anticipating such a move, Satz arranged to have the young man, who may be seen in the photo we are showing, act as cuckoo feeder" and as the bird would poke out its head and cuckoo the time the youth would make ludicrous attempts to stuff bird seed down the feathered throat. This angle had them all laughing and did a lot to keep interest in the film pepped up. The children especially displayed plenty of interest.

On the night that the clock was scheduled to be given away the house was jammed and Satz reports that though the clock set him back twelve dollars and a half he was more than repaid for his investment. We are passing this one along in the event that you should want to use it on some picture sooner or later. As we feel that it is unnecessary, since nearly every showman knows what the luck seat stunt is, we have not explained it. We want to thank Satz for passing this along and we hope to hear more concerning the work he is turning out in his district. Keep us posted, Bernie?

Credit Bob Gary For This One; Not So Bad Is It?

This is just another of the million examples we have shown of the practicability of showmen. No matter where, when, why or how they are confronted with a situation, some showmen just seem to hop right over it and come through with colors flying in the breeze. Since this stunt will talk for itself better than anything we might say about it, we'll let you look it over and, outside of telling you that it belongs to Bob Gary of the Des Moines Theatre in Des Moines, Iowa, what more is there for us to say?

Some stunt, isn't it? Well, it would pay you to put it away in your tickler file of "things to be thought of," because even though you may not be able to use it now your fellow showman in the next town might be mighty glad to get ahold of it.

In order that there be no misunderstanding we'd like to say that Gary's idea is a gigantic blackboard and persons passing the theatre are invited to write their names under the heading reading "The Following Des Moines Citizens Wish the Greater Des Moines Theatre Good Luck."

We want to thank Bob for passing this along to us and we know that when his house re-opens he is going to stage a couple of surprises that will find their way to the pages of the Round Table Club because, as one of our active members, this showman is always willing to pass along his ideas to his brother showmen both in the Club and on the Publix Circuit.

Weiss-Perlberg Continue To Turn Out Corking Work

The incorporation of Weiss-Perlberg, meaning Al Weiss and Jonas Perlberg, manager and publicity director respectively of the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., are still batting them out to the outfield and hitting the billboards with their live-wire work.

When they played "The Unholy Three" a lobby stunt of value was conceived that did much to swell box-office receipts.

A huge cut-out of Lon Chaney was placed in the lobby ten days in advance of picture. A microphone was placed inside the cut-out by the Chaney's ear and a loudspeaker by his mouth.

A card alongside the cut-out suggested that people talk in Chaney's ear and ask him about the picture—and he'd answer.

The electrical apparatus in the cut-out was hooked up to another part of the lobby where an usher was hidden from view. As he received the questions, he would respond to the best of his ability.

And just to show you how quick they are to cash in on anything new that comes into Jacksonville, we'd like to tell you about the tie-up they effected with the local Chrysler dealer and secured a new eight for display in the lobby as a plug for "The Big House."

The Chrysler people ran 12 two-column, ten-inch ads in both local newspapers and also had six readers. They distributed 10,000 handbills with copy, "The big attractions at the Florida Theatre—the new Chrysler Straight "8" and The Big House."

Chrysler people also sent out 2,000 postcards to a preferred list announcing the showing of the car and the current attraction at the Florida. And also distributed 5,000 blotters to hotels, post office and banks—and placed 5,000 stickers on wind shields of autos all over town. Both the blotters and stickers carried copy relative to the new car at the Florida and "The Big House." The agency bore the entire expense of the tie-up, which resulted in mutual benefit to both the agency and the theatre.

STAFFORD JERSEY is the manager of the Plaza Theatre in Englewood, N. J. Working with such wide-awake showmen as comprise Hal Sheridan's division, Jersey is sure to turn out some showmanlike work. We hope that when he sends us in his first contribution he will also include his photo and a little dope regarding his career to date in show business. How about it Stafford?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DAVID SILVERMAN, manager of the Belmont Theatre in the Bronx, is by no means a stranger to the Club, as his activities have found a place on our pages many times. But, in order to be right in style with all of the alert showmen of today he decided to jump on the Round Table bandwagon. Even though we know him pretty well he must be represented first on this page. And now that you're "in," Dave, we are sure that you are going to be very active. Right?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

C. A. DHARMAPALA is the manager-operator of the Broadway Theatre, Matara, Ceylon, India. We are indeed glad to welcome this foreign showman ino our organization and we hope to present an account of his work on our pages in the very near future. How about favoring us with a photo of yourself and a little dope on your career in the business, Mr. Dharmapala, when you send us in your next conribution?

COMPLETE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut toward such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributor. Where they vary in different cities or towns, the change is probably due to state or local censorship deletions.

TALKING COMEDIES

"HELLO TELEVISION" with
ANDY CLYDE ANN CHRISTY
NICK STUART

WHETHER the subject is an idea as far advanced as television or as homely as the average American husband, every MACK SENNETT COMEDY takes its place among the finest productions of this modern talking picture era, regardless of length.

Dollar for dollar, you'll get better story treatment, casting, acting and direction, greater production value, and more real entertainment, in a two reel MACK SENNETT COMEDY, than in nine out of ten feature pictures on the market.

A New Criterion

A new motif in the new mode of superior screen attractions so successfully established by "Holiday" . . . Something exceptionally forceful in its appeal to the modern intelligence of today's talking picture patrons . . . An amazingly clever play that will set a new criterion for rare quality in long run features, will be presented in — a dramatic vehicle inspirationally suited to the subtle, exquisite artistry of who will have the superior support of masculine stars of world-wide popularity.

"REBOUND"

"Rebound" will also have E. H. GRIFFITH's genius in its direction, the talent of HORACE JACKSON in its adaptation, and the keen showmanship of E. B. DERR in its production details — the personalities who share credit for the great success of Pathé's "Holiday".

'REBOUND'

DONALD OGDEN STEWART'S SUPERB STAGE SUCCESS

Adapted for Talking Picture Presentation with the Author's Personal Assistance

• A Wide-awake, Ultra-Modern Play that won high praise from the great dramatic critics. • HEYWOOD BROUN said: "I'm distinctly for Donald Ogden Stewart's new play 'Rebound'. This is the best light comedy by anybody hereabouts in ten or twenty years. And it's not so damned light either." • ALEXANDER WOOLCOTT wrote: "I had a good time at your play. The finale of the second act is one of the most exciting things I ever saw in the theatre." • ROBERT BENCHLEY declared: "I like 'Rebound' enormously. It is only a humorist like Mr. Stewart who can be serious simultaneously with being funny." • JOHN ANDERSON asserted: "Altogether delightful. Its sly mixture of superb idiocy and compelling drama makes an evening of rare quality." • CHARLES DARNTON said: "Wholly refreshing and delightful. It is highly modern in being quite sensible about what it does and how it does it." Praise that's praise indeed!

PATHÉ

attract the people to the box-office? In spite of what they can learn from the four productions, producers are going ahead with production programs based on principles exactly opposite to those responsible for the satisfactory box-office showing of the four current successes.

And—while I am asking questions—do you think any good would be accomplished if I set down here the reason All Quiet and the other three are earning profits? Not a bit. There are no words small and pointed enough to penetrate the ignorance and self-sufficiency of our producers and directors. I have preached too much to unwilling and uncomprehending ears. If producers wish to know why the pictures I have mentioned are making money they can find it out for themselves.

And if they do find it out, and can understand it; and if they apply what they learn to all the pictures they make, the film industry once more will be prosperous. It is not prosperous now because it is the most grossly mismanaged business on the face of the earth. It can not survive long under its present management. It must find in its ranks some people who have some knowledge of motion pictures or it must collapse entirely. Those who dominate production now will have to step aside and give people with picture brains a chance to breathe new life into the rapidly expiring industry.

A recent number of Motion Picture News, by long odds the most able, best edited and most interesting film trade paper published, contained an editorial written by Editor Kann who presents his conception of the remedy that should be applied to cure the ills of the film industry. Curiously enough, Kann suggests the remedy that should be the most efficacious and at the same time reveals that his diagnosis is wrong. He attributes the weakness of pictures to the fact that the heads of studios have to superintend the making of too many of them. Let me quote him:

> No question that the box-office is sorely in need of a new transfusion and that it is only from Hollywood that such rejuvenation can possibly come.
> But so long as there sits in each major studio a one-man fulcrum on which the trials, tribulations, worries and decisions involving anywhere from thirty-five to seventy pictures a year rest, just so long will the curve of production dip sharply into the ordinary and mediocre.
> This is not a slap at the men holding the reins in Hollywood. For them, it must be properly said that they are filling an impossible job as well as the system warrants.
> Too many pictures are being turned out under individual management and, because there are too many for any one individual on any one lot to handle adequately, they are ground out in strict compliance with the rules and regulations of factory manufacture.
> If this industry feels it must market as many pictures as it does to-day—and to that belief this writer does not subscribe—the one way out is to draft into, or make allied with, each studio of importance as formidable an array of production brains as money and incentive can attract.

By different routes Kann and I arrive at the same conclusion—that pictures are bad because Hollywood executives do not measure up to their jobs. Kann, however, apologizes for the executives and I do not. He says that no man can superintend the making of from thirty-five to seventy pictures a year and turn out a good product. Such reasoning as that runs counter to all the accepted rules of executive efficiency. The President of the United States has a rather sizable job—greater than making seventy pictures a year—and he manages to get along fairly well. The president of the United States Steel Corporation handles as much business in a month as one of our producing organizations does in a year, and you can't find any steel journal that apologizes for him.

Throughout the country there are hundreds of executives, any one of whom has a bigger job on his hands than that of any individual production chief in Hollywood. In all other industrial lines men are found to fill the jobs as they exist. Kann argues that as picture executives are not equal to their jobs, the jobs should be pared down to fit them. That's a queer bit of reasoning.

All told, there is something like two hundred million dollars being spent in making pictures in Hollywood this year. Is there anyone silly enough to believe that there are not plenty of men who could supervise intelligently the expenditure of the entire sum, much less various parts of it? The requisites for success in executive management are a knowledge of the product and a knowledge of organization. Our production executives lack both.

But Kann is right when he argues that conditions will not right themselves until picture brains are given an opportunity to function. It is a slender reed for the prosperity of pictures to lean upon for as long as we have in charge of production executives who do not know what motion pictures are, it is going to be impossible to secure recognition for motion picture brains. Applying the principles of the art to enhance the commercial value of the industry's product, is not an intricate or a difficult process. It could be learned by the present personnel of the studios. Producers and associate producers have the necessary backgrounds and training to make them apt pupils if they would open their minds. I despair of them doing this, however, as I think it is impossible to disturb their confidence in their infallability.

Something should be done now by someone—God knows who—to keep the industry from making a sublime ass of itself again when the present crisis reaches the acute stage. Already there are heard half-witted wonderings if there should not be a complete swing back to silent pictures. Such a step would match the other insanities committed by the industry. It is not necessary to do that to restore prosperity. What should be done is easy and simple. But I despair of our producers ever discovering what it is. Before they treat their patient they must know what is wrong with it, and even that is beyond their mental capacity.

I don't suppose there are assembled together in any other industry in the world so many people totally ignorant of the tasks they are paid to perform or who are half as well satisfied with them-

Intrigue By Secret Foes Responsible For Receiver Suit to "Get" Warners?

Dillon in Warners?

While Richard O. Hoyt will be "very active" in affairs of Warners, as a result of the Hayden, Stone affiliation with the company, his many activities in other lines may lead him to appoint John Dillon as his personal representative in the film company, MOTION PICTURE NEWS learns. Dillon, it will be recalled, was active in affairs of West Coast and First National, when those companies were tied in with Hayden, Stone.

Revenge, Plot to Control, Hinted as Motives of Dismissed Action

Is there a sinister move behind the receivership action brought against Warners by a minority stockholder, with some hidden adversary the real instigator of the suit? That is a question being asked in film and financial circles following dismissal of the suit on the ground of a faulty complaint.

Harry M. Warner

Harry M. Warner, in his answer to the charges of mismanagement and excessive expenditures brought by Ira I. Nelson, Boston, owner of 300 shares, made the allegation of bad faith in the filing of the suit. Two days before it was filed at Wilmington, he said, wide circulation was given to the story that the suit would be filed, for alleged purpose of beating down the stock. The charges in the complaint he branded as false and malicious.

Company's Control Sought?

Now film and financial circles are asking whether the machination of some adversary in the film industry, or some one who seeks to gain control of the company, is not the motivating force in the action. The company's sudden rise to a position of power evoked enmity, it is asserted, and the suit may be part of a campaign of retaliation, so the story goes.

The suit, just dismissed, may be the forerunner of other moves directed against Warners.

Chancellor J. O. Wolcott, who was to try the action, certified his disqualification because of ownership of Warner stock and Chief Justice Penniwell dismissed the action.

Nelson charged that excessive prices have been paid for theatres and real estate. Renwar, a holding company, bought the properties and then sold them to Warners, it is charged. In answer, Warner said the company has had only one transaction with Renwar and this was the purchase of part of the land on which the home office is situated, and at a price less than was paid for the adjoining land.

Sees Steady Keel

No radical reduction of wages of operators and stagehands is anticipated by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and M. P. Rowland Still Itching To Get Back in Films

Although the fight of the Pathe stockholders' protective committee against the "Kennedy regime" is about washed up, Richard A. Rowland has not given up his plan to get back into the picture business. If the proper financing is arranged, Rowland may go for this venture, it is said.

Sol Lesser in Considine Post at United Artists?

Hollywood—Sol Lesser is to replace John W. Considine, Jr., at United Artists, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been informed. The latter's removal as director of Irving Berlin's "Reaching for the Moon" and "The Dove" is ascribed as the cause of the reported split. No one will comment on the report at the studio, but insiders think Considine is out.

ECONOMIZING THROUGH THE MICROSCOPE

THE gladiator playboys of ancient Rome never supplied their toga-bedecked citizenry with a more entrancing, if not quite so futile, spectacle than is being unfolded today in some of our best film circles.

The bankers are looking the other way when flotations of new issues are broached. Cash is consequently hard to get. Theatre grosses, until two weeks ago, were more low than high, while, here in New York, circuit managers looked glum, felt that way and didn't know what to do about it.

So from the high places came the word and picayune retrenchment was started on its smallish way. Publicity men were fired. Also advertising men. Clerks were dismissed, stenos let out and some consciences thereby eased.

Survival of the Yessers

THAT'S one side of the picture.

In New York, high-priced incompetents tenaciously hold their fat jobs. They are relatives, political henchmen of the man in the saddle or they know where the body is buried.

In Hollywood, nincompoops whose vocabulary is limited to the three letters that spell "yes" stay on. One studio continues to spend anywhere from $500,000 to $1,000,000 on pictures that any well-organized business institution can turn out at one-third to one-half less. In another plant, pictures are started, dropped, picked up and re-made until the production disorganization that placed them in work in the first place is successful in making them salable.

Chopping Off the Small Heads

DUPLICATE effort in the studios and duplicate effort in the home offices ride rampant and unchecked. Thousands—it is easily conceivable, millions—are pouring through the industry sieve yearly, but handfuls of the hired help at $25 per head per week have been let out and the situation is considered met.

This business is forever paying the price of loose management. In production principally and now in the indiscriminate and terrifically expensive purchase of theatres. The bankers know of many of the choice business deals that have been pulled and are learning rapidly about others. When the detective work is finished, the lid will blow off the pot to stay off until this business demonstrates it knows how to govern itself.

THE industry, unquestionably in spite, rather than because, of itself, is learning how to apply the brakes. The direct reflection is to be found in the abrupt halt in theatre aggression. Paramount has finished its campaign and, it is understood, will be quiescent in the theatre field. Over at Warners you are told more houses will be annexed in a new fall and winter drive. Discount it.

At Fox, Harley Clarke has set up a finance committee to check, doublecheck and pass on all theatre deals from now on.

These big companies will add to their string, of course, but construction and acquisition will be extremely skimpy for many months to come.

Brains Resume Functions

INTO the brains of the responsibles has seeped the realization that the job on hand is plenty; that present holdings offer enough of a task to consolidate, centralize and make function at maximum efficiency.

Setting the house in order to withstand onslaughts of weather, bad business and bad pictures is the reconstruction problem that follows in the wave of the hysteria through which the trade has been passing. It's no slight assignment.

Middle courses and business procrastination won't go. The moves must be speedy, effective and sound.

His Last Curtain

HOLLYWOOD flashed the word early Tuesday that Lon Chaney had died. There, in New York and elsewhere, and more particularly among those who knew him, the inevitable was accepted with the regrets that accompany the passing of a sterling character.

Chaney was one of the first to swing his influence and his pronounced histrionic abilities toward standardization in acting. Camera hogging and chest heaving meant nothing to him, but the authentic in performance much. He never subscribed to the holier-than-thou school so often assumed in Hollywood. He recognized his capabilities and his shortcomings and governed his professional career accordingly.

In every wise, Chaney was an asset to motion pictures. The right side of the ledger now loses his prestige. The industry can ill afford that.

"Reasonable" Zoning to Be Speeded Up By Coast Conspiracy Consent Decree

A Precedent

While the consent degree entered in the Fox West Coast conspiracy case concerns only the California territory, its applications are general in that an important precedent has been established in the Federal Court. Thus, if abuses similar to those complained of in the original indictment are resorted to elsewhere, the precedent established may be expected to go a long way toward settling such action.

Text of Decree That Ended Anti-Trust Suit in L. A.

Los Angeles—Text of the decree which ended the Government conspiracy suit against Fox West Coast Theatres, Fox Film, Paramount, M-G-M, First National, Universal, Warners, Pathe, United Artists and Harold B. Franklin follows:

Suit Launched By U. S. in 1929

Washington—Suit of the Government against Fox West Coast Theatres and 10 distributors was instituted April 19, 1929, by the return of a criminal indictment charging a conspiracy to exclude independent exhibitors from contracting for films for first or second runs or first suburban run in Los Angeles and other southern California cities.

The alleged conspiracy, it was charged, also shut off film from independent houses which were opposition to West Coast and independents who double-featured programs or gave premiums to patrons. Clearance schedules held up films so long that their

Zoning of the country is expected to be speeded by the court's decision in the Fox West Coast conspiracy case, which was settled by a consent decree submitted by the theatre firm and 10 distributors.

The decision, it is declared by C. C. Pettijohn, "settles the question of the right of the industry, or various groups within the industry, to work out fair and reasonable protection schedules in the various exchange territories."

C. C. Pettijohn

The effect of the decision, it is believed, will cause circuits to tone down on some of their protection demands, which in court might be construed as unreasonable. In fact, the whole protection situation hinges upon the interpretation of "unreasonable" and "reasonable" clearance.

There have been few attempts on the part of exhibitors to question the right of a the-

Los Angeles—Four major restraints are included in the injunction against Fox West Coast and 10 distributors, entered in Federal Court. The decree specifically brands these practices as illegal:

1. Excluding or attempting to exclude unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of interstate trade and commerce for motion picture films.

2. Excluding or attempting to exclude unaffiliated exhibitors from exhibiting in competition with affiliated exhibitors.

3. Excluding or attempting to exclude, by acting in concert, any exhibitors from exhibiting two or more motion picture fea-

Government Wanted Plea Of Guilt by West Coast

Los Angeles—Request that Fox West Coast plead guilty in the protection conspiracy case was made by Federal Attorneys Amen and Law in a visit paid to Defense Attorney Sutro, Motion Picture News learns. Sutro laughed at the idea and asked that the indictment be quashed. Two days before the trial, Amen, Sutro, C. C. Pettijohn and Richard E. Dwight conferred and decided upon a consent decree. This included the filing of a civil suit in equity, in place of the criminal action.

The Insiders' Outlook

NOT always the lack of cash and the caution of bankers that burst merger bubbles.

In this business of personalities, behind as well as on the screen, lack of strategy often sours the closest of associations and leads to complications far beyond the pale of flagrant imaginations.

Two significant instances of this in the trade today. First is the case of the important and well known executive who has been a leader for many years. Many have tried to beat him. "Fully 75 per cent. of the companies that have been formed in the picture business have been formed to lick X," was the deft description fastened to this interesting situation the other day.

The lists are laden with many quondam headline names who have tried. Some of them are out of the running; some are still in, but slightly chastened. Today, a formidable adversary in another organization faces him. Which means that two large and powerful companies are rapidly finding themselves definitely aligned each against the other, the ammunition dumps loaded with shells and the shock troops ready to swing into line. It looks like a major action.

Some years ago he was called on the telephone by a competitor—one to conjure with at that time.

"Listen here," the conversation ran, "I'm going to drive you out of business and the campaign is on now."

"I'm sorry you said that," was X's calm and only rejoinder.

It wasn't long after that X had annexed his opponent's stars. It wasn't long after that the selfsame opponent was off his perch and his company in bankruptcy. But X continued.

This Insider passes on this bit of history because the circumstances that move through the current scrap are identical. The 1930 jouster has threatened X and X doesn't like it, never has and probably never will.

Who will win out is an unwritten chapter. X has been eminently successful. Many consider him the smartest man in the picture business. He hasn't met his Waterloo yet and he may not. For the other chap, it should be said he has power, resources, less age on his shoulders than X and plenty of determination.

Whatever way it goes, you'll get the round-by-round story on this page.

Number Two

The second of these two tales has to do with an outfit to which success, being a new and unaccustomed thing, is proving difficult to control. This organization recently closed a blanket product deal with a big circuit. Everybody got excited and, being that way, this is what is permitted to happen:

One of the two pivotal figures—pretty much the head man—at circuit headquarters is being ignored, not deliberately, but dumbly, by this foolish producer who should but apparently doesn't know the first cardinal principles in business strategy.

The result, as would appear obvious, is that the slighted one is beginning to get wise, is taking on a peeve that threatens to grow as the days roll by and will probably culminate in one or two things:

1. Failure to renew the booking arrangement when the present deal runs out.

2. Swinging his influence to bear against the possible acquisition of this particular producer as was first broached when the deal for playing time was closed not so long back.

The silliest slant on this somewhat amazing set-up is that the producer, having been told by some of his henchmen exactly how the wind blows, persists in directing his policy in completely the wrong direction.

Perhaps you can figure it out.

Buying with Tears in His Eyes

Chicago—A chain operator here, famous for his bargaining ability, was negotiating for film for a new house about to be opened. After winning the salesman's sympathy by deriding the earning capacity of his own house, the operator was quoted a swell price on film and the salesman, with tears in his eyes, left to look over the new theatre for which the film was being bought. After viewing the house, the salesman was back with murder in his heart. It was an elaborate house in a prosperous neighborhood.

The chain operator, recounting the last chapter later, finished up with ". . . and that so-and-so salesman stuck me for eight times the price we had originally agreed on film."

"Well," commented an auditor, "eight times your price is hardly too much to pay."

Square Shooting

The other day a certain sales manager was called into the big boss's office and shown a copy of a letter received from a candidate for the S. M.'s job.

"What do you want me to tell him?" the boss wanted to know.

Eight words, that's all. But this executive probably won't know the significance of these words until he reads this. For his sales manager, impressed and perhaps a little bit stunned by this evidence of complete confidence, is, this Insider happens to know, ready to shoot the works in effort, time and zeal as never before in behalf of that company and its superior officer.

In a lot of quarters this chatterer knows, the same sort of tactics would help mightily.

Chin-Socking

Mary Pickford has apparently decided to let "Forever After" go by the boards, for the star is preparing to start work on "Kiki." The former picture was halted in the midst of production because, it is said, Mary was dissatisfied with results.

All of which is the more interesting in view of the report that some $200,000 already has passed through the camera. If the picture doesn't do justice to Mary, the course of wisdom was to junk it, for crow pictures cost money in the long run to star and company, as producers some day will admit.

But who'll really take it on the chin for those two hundred thousand iron men?

Is It True That—

A certain figure, looming large in public life, is about to abandon politics in favor of a big job with one of the major producer-distributor-exhibitors?

If a theatre executive around New York pried himself loose from a mahogany chair more often and hied himself into the field his circuit's business might take a pronounced turn for the better?

Gloria Swanson will bungalow on the M-G-M lot after making two more for United Arttists and, if so, what about her partnership interest in the Schenck-operated company?

On the inside, a big company putting up a brave front on the outside, is having considerable financial difficulties and that these troubles may result in a few decapitations before the year runs its course?

The director of publicity, advertising,

Only One Strike Mars Labor Serenity As Sept. 1 Contract Deadline Nears

Twin City Operator Fight Only One in Progress; Most Keys Settling

With only one strike in progress and threats of walkouts in but a few spots, labor contracts are being renewed generally throughout the United States. There are few demands for any increase in wages, the operators, stage hands and musicians being content and even eager to renew contracts at existing scales.

The general tendency is for aggressiveness on the part of exhibitors, who are gaining concessions in many instances. The chief demand for concessions is by independent exhibitors, who ask that only one man, instead of two, be required in the booth of sound houses. This is the point of issue in the strike under way in the Twin Cities.

Business Conditions Big Factor

General business conditions are giving exhibitors a strong argument in their requests for wage scale reductions. It is the first time in years that the unions have found themselves at a disadvantage in the annual negotiations. This is reflected in the absence of the usual demand for increases.

Generally, a spirit of give and take is prevailing, it is shown in a national survey of the situation completed by Motion Picture News. A summary of the results of the survey follows:

20% Operator Scale Cut For N. Y. Independents

Two-year contracts are expected to be completed by the end of the week covering operators, musicians and stage hands in Greater New York. Two sets of negotiations have been in progress, one with the unions and the independents, the other with the unions and circuit representatives.

Except for minor changes, the circuit contracts remain the same in the proposed new contract. Stage hands and musicians will sign up for three years, operators for two. What changes are made favor the theatres, such as easing up on the rule that an operator must be in the booth whenever repairs are done by another craft; the right of the theatre to change the minimum musician arrangement on switch of policy, as well as virtual right to set the minimum to be employed throughout the season. The minimum on stage hands is a matter of individual negotiation.

Independents probably will receive a 20 per cent reduction in operator salaries, it is indicated. This offer was made to them by the union. Its acceptance was indicated, with a few minor matters to be ironed out.

A Dilemma

Syracuse—All five chain houses here must employ organists during the new labor year, according to an edict by the local musicians' union. So far as four of the houses are concerned, this demand is not so tough, but the Paramount has no organ. Nevertheless, the union demand stands for all five houses.

New York Conference to Tackle Capital Tangle

Washington—Exhibitors and musicians have agreed to meet Tuesday in New York in an effort to settle the deadlock over a proposed new contract. The life of the present agreement has been extended a week, in order that there shall be no break in program if a settlement is reached.

Little has been accomplished so far during the conferences. The exhibitors refuse to be bound by any contract that will dictate to them the number of musicians to be employed in each house, while the union is standing adamant behind a demand for some sort of a protective agreement. It is understood that the exhibitors have agreed to employ reduced orchestras at the Fox and Palace theatres, but without the safeguarding provision. The union officials have indicated a willingness to agree to some sort of a substitute for the present "blanket" contract, but do not seem willing to back down from the specification of orchestra personnel.

A. Julian Brylawski, of Warners, is spokesman for the exhibitors, while A. C. Hayden is leading the musicians.

No Danger of Strike At Harrisburg Houses

Harrisburg—There is no possibiljty of a strike against picture theatres here Sept. 1 by musicians, electricians or stage hands. All the principal theatres of the city one year ago negotiated contracts for a two-year period with the stage hands and electricians, so that these contracts have another year to run. In the case of the musicians, the Harrisburg picture theatres did not renew contracts last fall. Harrisburg is now without a picture theatre with an orchestra and very few musicians of any kind are employed, due to the changed conditions brought about by introduction of sound pictures.

Give and Take Spirit Prevails as Unions Seek Renewals

Houston Unions Sitting Pretty with Term Pacts

Houston—Contracts of operators, stage hands and electricians here have one year to go, and of musicians two years to go, so there is no difficulty whatsoever. All get wage increases Sept. 1, under their contracts.

New Contract Expected To Be Signed at Cincy

Cincinnati—Operators in suburban houses accepted a 10 per cent cut from the scale effective under contract of a year ago and expiring as of Sept. 1, this cut applying only during July and August. Exhibitors feel that owing to conditions of business, the new contract should be on at least the basis of this cut, but operators have not yet submitted their views. Operators in downtown houses still are working on the basis of the contract, as are also the musicians. A meeting between exhibitors and operators is scheduled for late this week, when it is believed that new contracts can be drawn up to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Omaha Not Anticipating Any Wage Difficulties

Omaha—Little indication of labor trouble is seen here, although Publix demands that the World orchestra be cut to 10 men from 12. This probably will be granted, although the union has been standing firm. The house will go on an all-sound policy if the demand is refused, it is stated. The situation with RKO has been smoothed out with 12 men going back into the house.

Contracts of operators and stage hands do not expire until October. Every operator in town is working, according to Harry Bushby, business manager of the local.

Deadlock Over Boosts Of San Antonio Crafts

San Antonio—Although local theatres are deadlocked with the operators, musicians and stage hands' unions over new wage scales, a strike does not appear imminent as customarily an agreement here is reached a few hours before the old one expires Aug. 31. The only local strike, so far as theatres

Showdown Due in Toledo

Toledo—Exhibitors here are girding for the battle which is seen as looming here on Sept. 1, as a result of deadlock over operator demands. The union demands a crew of four, working in shifts of two, at all first run sound houses, and a graduated wage scale.

Managers are prepared for a showdown, having agreed to use four men only at the Toledo-Paramount and RKO Rivoli, three men at other first runs and one in small outlying houses where there are no matinees except Sundays. Managers also demand one free rehearsal weekly, which they are not getting under the present agreement.

Exhibitors Have Advantage in Labor Negotiations Now Nearing Completion

are concerned, took place Sept. 1, two years ago, and at that time the union men were out but a few hours as an agreement was signed early in the afternoon. Increases demanded by the unions average $5 weekly.

Despite their long lay-off, when local houses went to a straight picture policy, and despite Publix's threats to return to this policy, musicians, operators and stage hands are asking for an increase. Musicians returned to the theatres early in the summer when Publix resumed stage shows after a six months' lay-off.

Theatres affected here are Majestic (RKO) and Texas, and State (Publix). The Aztec (Publix) and Palace (Ind.) have contracts with the unions running another year.

The present scale of operators at the Majestic theatre is $88.50 and at the Texas $77.50. The stage hands' scale is $70.50 and the musicians' scale ranges from $42.50 to $75.

Chicago Still Has a Year on Wage Pacts

Chicago—There are no indications of any immediate labor difficulties in Chicago. Wage scales and contracts for all classifications of theatre employees were made for two years and still have a year or more to run.

The only labor complaint of Chicago exhibitors on record is directed at the "two-men-in-a-booth" clause. It is not probable that any action will be taken in this regard for some time to come, as this situation, too, is covered by an existing contract which still has more than a year to run.

One Man Concession Is Asked at Seattle

Seattle—Renewal of contracts is expected to be completed here before the deadline. There is a possibility that the contract adopted with operators will give suburbans one man in the booth, instead of two as at present.

Portland to Sign New Agreement in September

Portland—Although the final agreement will not be signed until about Sept. 5, no difficulties are anticipated between theatres and the three crafts. Fox West Coast, Paramount and RKO representatives and union officials indicated that a settlement would be reached.

Canada Free of Jams; A Record in Sitting

Ottawa—The feature of the Canadian labor situation is that the world's pit-sitting championship will have been won Saturday night by the orchestra of B. F. Keith's here, through having sat six hours daily for the last 12 weeks without playing a note, because of a dispute with the management.

The musicians' contract for the year expires Saturday, when they will walk out for keeps, because vaudeville is not returning to the house this fall.

The outlook is brighter for musicians at Toronto, Montreal and other Canadian cities because of the return of stage shows to several theatres in September, and no trouble is suggested over contracts.

New agreements with operators aren't causing any trouble because this situation was straightened out in most instances last year, when a two-year agreement was concluded. In all important theatres the projection staffs were increased to four men.

Various theatres, such as the Center here, are continuing on the open shop plan and no disruption is anticipated.

Los Angeles—Operators here have agreed to one man in the booth of smaller theatres unless disc reproduction is used, when two men will be required. The relationship between theatres, operators, stagehands and musicians always has been very friendly here.

20 Per Cent Cut Taken By Vancouver Operators

Vancouver—Reduction of approximately 20 per cent in wages eliminated danger of an operators' strike here. Recently five independent houses were closed for operating with unlicensed projectionists without a board of examiners' permit. The theatres have reopened following the settlement. They are Royal, Columbia, Colonial, Carleton and Olympia.

Milwaukee Going Open Shop If Parleys Fail

Milwaukee—Possibility of open shop at local theatres was seen Thursday unless the difficulties are adjusted. Operators are holding out for the same scale and two men in the booth at present, while the small houses demand one man in the booth.

The musicians' union is asking the same wages which theatres paid under the agreement last year and in addition will allow the exhibitors showing straight picture programs to employ a union organist without the necessity of an orchestra of four men in addition.

Stage Shows May Go if Musicians Refuse to Accept Cuts

Musicians Still Out At Loew Baltimore House

Baltimore—Musicians and the Loew group are still deadlocked over the new contracts and meantime Loew's Century, where orchestra and organist were employed, is without music and stage shows, causing rumbling among patrons.

The old contracts expired July 31. The theatre people want the musicians to accept the minimum wage scale of $54 a week instead of $84 under old contract with no overtime and understanding they will work in pit or on stage, it is understood. The musicians agree to accept a 12 months' contract as is or a six months' contract at the premium.

Oscar Appel, president of Local No. 40, went to New York to interview Loew officials and saw Vogel and Schiller and, although several propositions were discussed, none were acceptable to the musicians. The Century is running six complete shows a day.

Musicians Still Out Of Richmond Houses

Richmond—No new contracts have been made with musicians to play in Richmond theatres during the season just beginning and there is no indication that orchestras will return to any of the playhouses in the Virginia capital, it has just been learned.

While in certain other cities contracts with union musicians were not expected to be renewed after Sept. 1, the situation was different in Richmond, in which mechanical music has supplanted orchestras. In fact, most of the leading theatres in Virginia have been without orchestras during the last two years.

The National, former combination house, reopened Monday, playing films only.

Lee Levy, manager of the Wilmer & Vincent interests in Virginia, said nothing has Finish Fight in Twin Cities

Minneapolis—It's to be a finish fight between Twin City independents and the operators on the one-man-in-the-booth demand of theatre men. The exhibitors, fortified by an injunction restraining members of the union from destroying property, intend to continue open shop operation. The last strike of operators ended in what was termed a victory for the theatres.

So far the controversy has been enlivened by the bombing of one theatre and bombardment of another by gunmen. In addition, stench bombing has been resorted to.

Sir Oswald in a Quandary; Heavy Dough the Reason

London—To sell or not to sell! That is the burning question now keeping Sir Oswald Stoll from enjoying his beauty nap and 4 o'clock tea.

Offers of an important group of London bankers to buy Stoll's theatre circuit are said to have opened the flood gates for an avalanche of proposals from American and English producer - distributor - exhibitor companies. Paramount Publix is a leader in the negotiations, so the yarn goes. When informed that the Stoll circuit was in the market, Publix hurriedly dispatched Sam Katz to London to see that its bid was given consideration.

Sir Oswald, while admitting that offers had been made, refused to add further information when queried. He winked when asked how true was the report which placed a $25,000,000 valuation on the properties, which are operating as Stoll Theatres Corp., capitalized at $4,000,000.

Other reports now in circulation attribute the London bankers' offer to a desire on the part of a press agent to build up interest in the circuit on the part of possible purchasers.

Katz Buying More For Publix Abroad

London—Sam Katz, now in London on a combined business-pleasure trip, will confine a great deal of his business activities to the acquisition of strategically located theatres in and about London, it is understood. The Publix chief is said to be negotiating for two or three small local circuits, among them the four-string Astoria chain of London suburbans.

Girl Accuses Syd Chaplin; B.I.F. Breaks with Actor

London—The filing of charges in court against Sydney Chaplin by Molly Wright resulted in so much unfavorable publicity that British International Films decided not to continue his contract, it is reported. Miss Wright was to have appeared in Chaplin's next picture. The comedian protested his innocence of her charge, but the company refused to make the picture.

Pruning Knife Reaching All Paramount Depts.

Economy program of Paramount Publix is being carried out in all departments, even bringing cuts in the forces of ushers at company houses. During the last few weeks, some 200 have been let out at the home office. Theatre managers, too, are feeling the pruning knife, which is being wielded in all sections of the country.

exploitation and whatnot of one of the national distributors is about to feel the keen edge of the executioner's axe?

Lee Shubert's talkers—if he really makes any — will be distributed via U. A.?

A motion picture critic whose name you know well practically dictates the policy of one of the fast-stepping studios in Hollywood?

Harry, Abe and Jack are corralling every stray dollar for investment in Sinclair Oil?

A w.k. producer sailed for foreign shores under an assumed name this week and why?

Friendship

Strength of unions in the conduct of theatre chains is shown in the recent experience of one of the large circuits, whose president attempted to import a man from another section of the country to replace a veteran department head.

The union said no to the proposed move and said it in no uncertain terms, so the story goes. It was to be either or else, with the threat of a possible walkout involved. It was either, and the threatened department head who always shot square with the members of the craft concerned, retained the post.

You Answer This

In a Southern city a producer is losing $1,600 every week in the operation of a theatre.

An old showman, once a chain owner and still bulwarked by some of his profit, offers to invest his own money and take over the house, confident he can put it over.

New York is advised, takes four weeks to make a reply and turns the proposition down.

The theatre is still losing $1,600 a week.

Golf and the B. O.

The Insiders' staff includes an incurable optimist who was once upon a time a cynical newspaperman. But since his vacation, spent in motoring through New Jersey (don't laugh), he emits a disgusted "Aw, hell" whenever anybody predicts that pictures aren't clicking any more.

"Say, listen here," says he, "in one day's drive I passed at least fifty miniature golf courses and there wasn't a soul on half of them. The others had two or three patrons. Do you call that competition? And in the course of a single week I had to stand in line at three theatres. Sure, the pictures were good ones. Why should I shell out my own dough to see them otherwise? I get paid to review the other kind."

Another Denial Of Publix Coast Deal; Still on?

Portland—Edward A. Smith, Pacific Coast division manager of the Paramount-Publix theatres, emphatically denied a report that the Publix theatres on the Pacific Coast would be operated by the Fox West Coast Theatres. Smith and Boris Morros, general musical director for the Publix-Paramount corporation, are here on a regular inspection tour and to help with the opening of Greater Talkie Season.

Despite the repeated denials of the reported plan to turn over operation of Publix Coast houses to Fox West Coast Theatres, the proposition has not been abandoned, Motion Picture News has been informed. Deliberations, it is said, probably will be resumed upon Sam Katz's return to New York from Europe.

Actress Robbed Of Jools-Really!

Chicago—With the arrest of three railroad car cleaners by a pawnshop detail here, police recovered jewelry belonging to Laura La Plante which has been valued at $7,000. The valuables were taken from a hand bag which Miss La Plante left in an observation coach of the Michigan Central railroad here last April. Harry Rose and George Salter, negro car cleaners, are charged with the theft.

Recovery of the jewels followed attempts by Gladys Paine, colored, a niece of Rose's, to sell a bracelet belonging to Miss La Plante for $20. Included in the recovered loot in addition to this bracelet are a bar pin of onyx jade set with thirty-eight diamonds, a platinum bracelet set with 225 diamonds, a brooch of emeralds and sapphires, and a jade and gold pin set with pearls. Miss La Plante is expected to appear in court here against the defendants.

Perches on Canopy Seven Days as Stunt

Dayton, O.—Tree-roosting champs are facing competition here by Henrietta Bertke, who perched atop canopy of Strand for seven days and nights in connection with anniversary celebration of the theatre. As a "gift" to public, the house ran double feature program, showing "Mawas" in addition to "Captain of the Guard." The result was heaps of newspaper publicity for both the house and Manager Millard Blaettner.

Publix Continuing to Dispose of Theatres

Minneapolis—Publix is continuing to dispose of smaller theatres here. On Sept. 2, S. G. Lebedoff, former owner, again will operate the Homewood, while a deal is under way for the Emerson, closed for four years.

Arbitration Rules to be Pivotal Point In Ratification of Standard Contract

"What Price Husbands?"

Leo Friedman, who attorneys for the Loew circuit and clears theatre deals and such, doesn't take credit for this one, but he is passing it around:

Ginsberg had been killed. His cronies selected an Irish friend to break the news to Mrs. Ginsberg. Reach ng the dead man's home, he finds Mrs. Ginsberg seated at the kitchen table, devouring a large bowl of borscht.

"Mrs. Ginsberg, I bring you bad news. Your husband was killed this afternoon," Casey said, but not a rise out of Mrs. Ginsberg.

"Mrs. Ginsberg, maybe you didn't hear, but your husband is dead," he again said. Still no response.

"Mrs. Ginsberg," he then shouted, "don't you understand your husband has been killed?"

Just then, Mrs. Ginsberg looks up and says, "When I finish this borscht, you will hear a woman scream!"

Allied in Accord on Most Features, with Adoption Seen Shortly

Upon the draft of rules of arbitration will depend adoption or rejection of the proposed new standard form of license agreement by Allied States Association, Motion Picture News learns. So far as other features of the proposed agreements are concerned, the parties are in accord, save for minor changes, and speedy adoption may be expected, provided the arbitration rules are satisfactory.

The Allied units, of course, are autonomous and each will act as it sees fit on proposed adoption of the contract, but no difficulty is anticipated, provided the all-important arbitration rules pass muster.

The number of important concessions on arbitration were made by distributors in the closing sessions of the 5-5-5 conferences at Atlantic City and are expected to lead to ratification when the final draft is submitted to the Allied groups.

At any event, it is learned from an authoritative source, no "extraneous factors" will influence Allied's consideration of the contract. That is to say, that only the contract provisions will be considered, and not any matters outside the contract.

The next step is completion of the contract's wording by Gabriel L. Hess and Abram F. Myers, including the rules of arbitration. Then the agreement probably will go back to the 5-5-5 committee for final approval, after which it will be sent to the various exhibitor groups.

Accommodation

Portland—Carrying two baby boys, a good looking young matron rushed up to the box-office at one minute to one, just in time to see "Rain or Shine" at the RKO Orpheum at the 25c rate, and though both of her hands and arms were well filled, endeavored to subtract a quarter from her purse.

The obliging doorman, perceiving her predicament, stepped gallantly forward and said, "Allow me, madam. I'll be glad to hold one of the children for you." She thanked him and after searching through the many articles in the purse found a quarter. The doorman, hurriedly handing back the baby, remarked, "They're boys?"

"Yes," declared the proud mother, blushing slightly. "We call them Hoover and Smith."

"I see," replied the courteous doorman. "Pardon me, but I believe I must have held Smith."

Paramount Hits Back, Starting House at Cincy

Cincinnati—Bad blood, said to have been caused by the move of Radio-Keith-Orpheum in stepping in on the proposed Paramount-Libson deal, is declared behind decision of Paramount-Publix to build a 2,100-seat house here, known as the Paramount. Publix Ohio Corp. already has started excavation for the 2,100-seater, which is to cost $225,000.

The location is on McMillen Ave., near the intersection of Gilbert and close to the Orpheum, the city's largest second-run. Paramount is building also at Hamilton and Middletown.

Paramount is declared to have been particularly peeved over the RKO move in grabbing off the Libson chain, just when a deal for its purchase was about set. The Libson houses dominate the local first-run field.

RKO Taking Over "U" Capitol at Atlanta

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Monday will take over operation of the Capitol, Atlanta, which recently reverted to Universal. On the same day, the Libson theatres at Cincinnati, Columbus and Dayton, O., will go under the RKO banner, as will the Interstate chain at Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Little Rock, Fort Worth and Birmingham; the twin theatres, RKO Palace and RKO, at Toledo, and RKO at Dobbs Ferry. Other additions include the Downtown, Detroit, opening Saturday, and new houses recently opened at Rahway, Lyndhurst and Irvington, N. J.

Schenck to Sail On Talker Deal

Decision as to the number of multi-linguals United Artists will produce is to be decided following a trip to Europe by President Joseph M. Schenck. He is scheduled to go abroad in September. Production probably will be on the Continent. Al Jolson is sailing for Germany next week to star in a talker with a supporting cast of Germans, under direction of Fred Zelnick. It will be an original. Meanwhile, Dolores Del Rio is starring in a Spanish version of "The Dove" at the Coast studio.

Joseph M. Schenck

Nathan Burkan is at present in London preparing the multi-lingual production plans.

Ungar Joins Universal

Hollywood—Arthur Ungar, formerly business manager on the Coast for "Variety," has signed a two-year contract as a Universal supervisor, working with Carl Laemmle, Jr.

Marconi Makes Sudden Plunge In Sound Field

London—Maconi Wireless Telegraph Company's closely-guarded activities in connection with the development of new sound apparatus was brought to light here with installation of its initial device in the old Stoll Cricklewood studios.

Stoll Film will distribute for Marconi, which has dubbed the new machine the "Visatone." Lower royalties than Western Electric or RCA will be charged by Marconi, which, it is said, plans to build up strong competition for foreign markets now much sought after by American and German electrics.

Crouch Succeeds Greene As Coast Representative

Los Angeles—William Crouch has assumed charge of the West Coast office of Motion Picture News, succeeding Walter R. Greene, resigned.

"Soreheads" Using Pathe Fire as Political Football

Echoes of the past sounded like the deafening roar of thunder in New York's city hall when Mayor "Jimmy" Walker was put on the political carpet by Alderman Joseph Clark for alleged "laxity," which Clark claimed to be "the root of all the city's evils." "Complete indifference" of Mayor "Jimmy" to "each and every scandalous situation," including the sensational Pathe studio fire, which snuffed out the lives of ten, was scored by Clark.

Okla. City Fight Is Seen; Griffith Momand Deal Off

Oklahoma City—Despite the general trend away from theatre acquisition, there probably will be a jockeying for position here following reported collapse of the Griffith Amusement Co.-A. B. Momand Enterprises merger plan. This deal had been regarded as set, but a last-minnte hitch has said to have caused dropping of negotiations.

Now, Motion Picture News learns, a 3,000-seater costing an estimated $2,000,000 is to be built on E. Grand Ave. Either Publix or Radio-Keith-Orpheum is sponsor, it is said. Meanwhile, Publix has taken over the Circle, Capital Hill, formerly operated by the Momand chain, and will run this house in conjunction with the Criterion, Capital, Ritz and Victoria.

Night Baseball and Football at Balto.

Baltimore—Night baseball and football are planned at Oriole Park, home of the Baltimore International League baseball team. No league games are scheduled at night, but exhibition contests will be played.

Ann Joins Lillian

Hollywood—Ann Roth, sister of Lillian Roth, Paramount actress, has been assigned a part in Jack Oakie's new talkie, "Sea Legs," which Victor Heerman is directing. Lillian Roth is playing the lead opposite Oakie. The Roth sisters were formerly vaudeville headliners in New York.

Reoch, O'Malley Sail

V. E. Reoch, a vice-president of RCA Photophone, Inc., sailed for Europe on the Europa Friday night.

Pat O'Malley is another passenger on the same boat.

Richman Starting Two

Harry Richman, early next month, begins production of two Paramount shorts at the company's Long Island studio. They will be grouped in the Personalities series.

Mel Shauer in New York

Melville A. Shauer, in charge of foreign production for Paramount, arrived Thursday in New York from the Coast.

Atta Boy, Arkayo!

With the release of Winkler's sound cartoon, "The Fiddler," RKO becomes eligible for at least one dozen Disc-feld short subject awards. Originality—that rare jewel found but little in present day cartoons—is the keynote in this new one reeler. Couple this individuality with an unusually humorous tempo, clever animation and perfect musical adaptation and you have the perfect cartoon: "The Fiddler."

CUNNINGHAM

Go West

Eastern exhibitors used to paying high tariff for accommodations at their conventions should get a big kick out of the announcement of rates for the Wisconsin convention scheduled to be held Sept. 9 and 10 at Big Cedar Lake, Wis. Rooms and meals are to be furnished by the resort for $5 for duration of the meet.

Clara Escapes Spanking; Red Head Signs Up

Hollywood — Clara Bow is not to be spanked by Paramount for her front-page escapade in visiting her various boy friends at different spots in the country, for Paramount has exercised its option of renewal. It will be remembered that she was summoned to the studio post haste after sizzling newspaper stories about her affairs of the heart. Anyway, there was the matter of four Bow pictures already being sold on the 1930-31 line-up, so the renewal is not unexpected. It starts Oct. 1 and marks the beginning of her fourth year as a star and her fifth year with the company.

German Emelka To Expand Abroad

Berlin—Reports that Emelka, one of Germany's biggest production-distribution-exhibition units, was to enter Paris and other Continental markets on an expansion program has caused much excitement abroad. The name of Pathe-Natan, Paris, is linked with the French invasion. Emelka is controlled directly by the German government.

Oklahoma City—Charles Hutchinson, former manager of the Folly, has been appointed supervising manager for Griffith Amusement Co.

Wisconsin Unit Gets "Lowdown" At Annual Meet

Milwaukee—Protection, analysis of the proposed new standard license agreement and the Tiffany franchise will highlight annual meeting of the Wisconsin exhibitor unit to be held Sept. 9 and 10 at Big Cedar Lake, near West Bend, Wis.

Promise that members will be "told a story" which will have an important bearing on new season's product and on the contract has been made by the Wisconsin association, which is a unit of Allied States Ass'n. Abram F. Myers, Allied president, has been invited to attend.

The association is urging its members to protect their Tiffany franchises, pointing to a big improvement anticipated during the coming season.

Sloane Off for Europe In Search of Vehicles

Paul Sloane will leave for Europe on Sept. 6 to interview European dramatists for RKO's new product which, owing to the waning of the popularity of musicals, will be preponderantly dramatic.

Bearg Gets Montreal Post

Montreal—L. I. Bearg of the Metropolitan, Boston, has been appointed Montreal city manager for Famous Players Canadian Corp., with special jurisdiction over the three main stem houses, the Palace, Capitol and Loew's. Publix stage units are to open at the Capitol here Sept. 13 and one week later at the Imperial, Toronto.

Sovkino Merger "All Wet"

Moscow—The Mezhrabpom-Film organization is to remain independent, in spite of previous statements to the effect that it was to be merged with Sovkino.

Wheeler in N. Y.

Bert Wheeler is vacationing in New York and will stay over for the premiere on Sept. 8 of "Dixiana," in which the team of Wheeler and Woolsey supply most of the fun.

Swanson Film for Rialto

"What a Widow," new Gloria Swanson picture, is to open late in September at the New York Rialto.

"What's new?" repeated Abram F. Myers in response to a query while in New York this week. "Why, I read about everything in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, usually before it happens. And the funny part of it is that things almost invariably do happen just as MOTION PICTURE NEWS said they would." The Allied leader was in New York with Mrs. Myers, who attended the conference of women attorneys.

Chaney Niche at M-G-M to Go to Wallace Beery?

Hollywood—Wallace Beery will be groomed to fill the vacant star place on the M-G-M program left by the death of Lon Chaney, Motion Picture News has been informed. Due to his illness, Chaney was listed for but one picture, "The Bugle Sounds," on the 1930-31 program. Beery is being substituted in this film, it is understood.

The death of "the man of a thousand faces" occurred this week after a valiant battle against anemia and congestion of the bronchial tubes. Hope that he would rally from several blood transfusions was shattered when a hemorrhage of the lungs suddenly cut short his fight for life at the age of 47.

Funeral services were held Thursday evening at an undertaker's chapel and he was buried beside his father in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

The following were active pallbearers:

John Jeske, Clinton Lyle, R. L. Hinckley, Phil Epstein, William Dunphy and Claude I. Parker.

Film Leaders Honor Chaney

Honorary pallbearers were:

Nicholas M. Schenck, Louis B. Mayer, Irving G. Thalberg, Milton M. Cohen, Dr. John C. Webster, Dr. Hugo A. Kiefer, Tod Browning, Harry Carey, Lionel Barrymore, Ramon Novarro, William Haines, Lawrence Tibbett, Harry Rapf, Cliff Edwards, Dr. E. L. Commons, Hunt Stromberg, Paul Bern, Chester Vanderlip, M. E. Greenwood, Jack Conway, Pete Smith, George Hill, Henry Sharp, Fred Niblo, Edgar Selwyn, Benny Rubin, Fritz Tidden, Wallace Beery, Jack Benny, Gen. Smedley D. Butler, Sammy Lee, Dr. A. Seiler, James Dugan, Wallace Chewning, W. H. Hendry, H. Roy, Tom Gubbins, M. H. Newman, C. A. Logan, Jack Feinberg, Merritt Gerstad, M. K. Wilson and Sam Feinberg.

At the moment of Chaney's burial all activities at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Culver City ceased for a period of three minutes, while all company offices throughout the world open at the time paid respect to the screen star by a similar pause.

Became Ill in New York

Chaney entered a hospital on August 15 for treatment of an anemic condition resulting from a severe attack of pneumonia suffered in New York early this year. He failed to respond readily to treatment and last week three blood transfusions were resorted to. Last Saturday he became critically ill, but safely passed the crisis and he was said, by hospital attaches, to be resting easily.

The hemorrhage which resulted in Chaney's death struck with unexpected suddenness. He was dead in less than 30 minutes, his physicians said.

At Chaney's bedside was Mrs. Chaney, a constant attendant since her husband first was taken ill, and Creighton Chaney, a son by a former marriage.

The death of Chaney removes from Hollywood's varied ranks a veritable mystery man, who made few friends and was known almost entirely by his screen appearances. Away from the motion picture Lon Chaney inevitably wore a pulled down cap, dark glasses and plain clothes. He commanded a large salary, made numerous investments and reputedly was wealthy.

Chaney, the second of four normal children born to deaf and dumb parents in Colorado Springs, Colo., was born April 1, 1883. When he was nine, in the fourth grade at school, his mother became permanently helpless from inflammatory rheumatism, and Lon gave up school to nurse her and do the housework. For three years he was engaged at this labor, and many have said that the necessity of exchanging thoughts with his mother by gestures and facial expressions laid the groundwork for Chaney's skill as an actor.

At 13 Lon went to work, first as a guide leading tourists up Pikes Peak, and then as carpet layer, decorator's apprentice, mine worker and prop boy in the Grand Opera House, managed by his brother.

Chaney's first stage role was in a comic opera, "Said Pasha," produced by the local stage hands' union of which Chaney still was a member. "Said Pasha" was a success. It encouraged the Chaney brothers to produce first

RKO After New Houses in Texas; Seeks Supremacy

San Antonio, Tex.—With the acquisition of the theatres of the Interstate Amusement Co., RKO is planning to acquire additional houses in Texas key cities in a battle for theatre supremacy of the South.

The plan of RKO contemplates playing its regular pictures, backed up with strong vaudeville, in its Interstate theatres. In the other spots to be acquired RKO will show pictures.

The Capitol in Dallas has already been taken over and agents of RKO are looking over the field in San Antonio, Houston and Fort Worth. In San Antonio two independent houses are under consideration—the Empire and Palace. Each of these seats between 1,500 and 1,600.

Close First San Antonio Theatre; Progress Rapid

San Antonio, Tex.—The remarkable growth of San Antonio in picture development and theatre construction is exemplified in the closing of the Rialto, the first theatre built here solely for motion pictures.

When this tiny show house opened ten years ago—it seats but 800—it was the last word in picture house construction. So rapid, however, were the strides made by pictures that in a few years Louis Santikos its owner, built another, the Palace, seating 1,500. Santikos eventually disposed of his holdings and a year ago Publix took over the Rialto. The lease expired. Now the theatre will be remodeled into a store.

Today San Antonio boasts of a trio of de luxe theatres. The Majestic (RKO) heads the list with a seating capacity of nearly 4,500. The Texas (Publix) is next with 3,000 seats and the Aztec (Publix) third with 2,500 seats.

Manchester Exhibitors Start Booking Combine

Manchester, Eng.—With 40 members on its roster, Exhibitors' Film Service has commenced operations as a buying and booking combine in this territory. Bookings are already being made six months ahead.

Whether decision of the K. R. S. (distributors) to refuse to do business with combines will hold good when approached by the new body is speculative.

Edwards' Social Bust

Hollywood — Social standing? Tsk, tsk, Cliff Edwards is just plain Ukelele Ike, and his wife "doesn't have to keep up appearances" for him, he told Judge Myron Westover, after his estranged wife asked for $250 maintenance pending trial of their divorce suit. She needed that amount, she said, to maintain her social standing.

For Instance?

Hollywood—Sign in the window of a cleaning establishment on Hollywood Boulevard:

"We clean everything from a lace handkerchief to an entire production."

Which prompted a gag guy to dispatch sales representatives of the cleaners to the producers of 17 new feature releases.

a Gilbert and Sullivan opera and then "Fra Diavolo," in 1901, when Lon was eighteen.

Lon's brother returned home when the show failed, but Lon kept on as a trouper in all sorts of shows throughout the United States and Canada.

After four years he married the girl who was then his singing and dancing partner.

After his son was born Chaney decided that life on the road was too uncertain, so he took steady, but strenuous, work as actor and stage manager in Los Angeles and in San Francisco.

Chaney was given his first picture job by Universal on the first day he applied. He was an extra and rode horses in two-reel Westerns.

His first real part was in a unit directed by Jeanie McPherson. Miss McPherson was first to observe Chaney's genius for character work, and wrote a story with a special part for him. But she left the company and it was six years before Lon Chaney got his real chance, which came only after he had been refused a raise from $100 to $125 a week, and had resigned from Universal. "Bill" Hart then gave him a part in "Riddle Gawn." He did other pictures with Hart, and then in 1919 George Loane Tucker cast him in "The Miracle Man," a Famous Players-Lasky film of 1919. In 1920 he made "Treasure Island" for Paramount, and in 1921 "The Penalty" for Goldwyn. The next great success was "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for Universal.

In 1925 he signed his starring contract with M-G-M. Since then he had made about five pictures a year and had established himself as one of the firmest-placed of all the stars. He was recognized as a master of make-up and was author of the article on make-up in the Encyclopedia Britannica. He was winner of the critics' ballot for the best performance of an actor in 1925, the verdict being based on "The Unholy Three," "The Tower of Lies," "He Who Gets Slapped" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

Four Charette Houses In Receiver's Hands

New Bedford, Mass.—Temporary receiver has been appointed for the Orpheum, Allen and Casino here and the American at Fairhaven, operated by Charette, Inc. The Orpheum Amusement Co., a new firm headed by Zoel Ray, is ready to assume control of the theatres if the matter can be arranged.

Clyde-Freeland Merger

Hollywood—June Clyde, RKO featured player, is to marry Thornton Freeland, United Artists director. The wedding date has not been set. Freeland directed "Whoopee."

Universal Out Of Exhibition; Chain to Lukan

Seattle—Universal sang its swan song as a theatre operator in this territory when, in a $350,000 deal, it disposed of its eight remaining suburbans to Farwest Theatres, newly-formed company headed by L. O. Lukan, former branch and division manager for First National.

Theatres included in the transfer are the Cheerio, Granada, Portola, Arabian, Ridgmont, Woodland, Mission and Madrona. About $80,000 will be spent in improving the various houses, according to Lukan.

Toronto House Used as Publix Unit Studio

Toronto—The Regent has been reopened for use as the production studio for Publix stage units to be seen at Famous Players houses, starting Sept. 5 at the Imperial, Toronto, and the Capitol, Montreal. Players will be drawn from the Publix organization in the States but the unit personnel will be largely Canadian.

The following is the staff under John Arthur: William Mills, recently with the Avalon and Marlborough, Chicago, as assistant director; Tremaine Garstang of Toronto, art director; William Hart, Uptown, Toronto, in charge of sets; Mack McLean, Toronto, scenic artist, and Harry Fisher, Toronto, supervisor of electrical effects.

With the opening of a stage unit-talking picture policy at the Toronto, Imperial, the Uptown will revert to straight talkers. A modernistic stage setting has been created for the Imperial and a new flood lighting system has been installed for the house.

To Remake "Kid"

Hollywood—A remake of "The Patent Leather Kid" is being planned by either First National or Warners, and it is stated that Molly O'Day, who played opposite Richard Barthelmess in the silent version, will have the same role in the talker.

"Fatty" Directing Lloyd

Hollywood—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle is again making comedies. This time he is directing Lloyd Hamilton in a series of short-reelers for Educational. Arbuckle was last with RKO, where he was comedy constructionist for "The Cuckoos."

Confident

Charlie Chaplin intends to hold the fort in his dogged championing of silent pictures. And he is so sure of his ability to do so that he has ordered United Artists to stop "City Lights" pending the screening of it. Charlie, so the story goes, believes that the picture will command much higher rentals than it has been sold at to date, hence the desist order.

Drive Launched Against Violators of Copyright Laws by Pathe, "U" and RKO

Newspapermen Really Are "Gentlemen"

Toledo—Ernest R. Moorefield, film editor of the Toledo News-Bee, has a pet peeve. It concerns the depiction of newspapermen in films because he feels that they are portrayed as eager victims of the demon rum. Hollywood needs a clearer definition of the phrase, "Gentlemen of the Press," he believes, decrying the film practice of picturing newspapermen on an unend ng bender. Incidentally, the film, "Gentlemen of the Press," was written by several New York newspapermen.

Two Rochester Houses Turned Into Golf Links

Rochester—Miniature golf captured space from two more theatres in this region for winter quarters last week, while other operators of outdoor courses sought shelter for year-round activities.

The Capitol, West Side neighborhood house, reopened this week as a baby golf course. Almost at the same time Harry C. Morse, owner of the Sampson and Elmwood theatres in Penn Yan, announced the Sampson would be rebuilt to house a course for the winter. The dance hall will be removed from the Fay's Theatre building, downtown, and a course constructed there, it was announced. Rumors also were heard that the old Victoria Theatre, ancient downtown house, would blossom out with greens and tees.

Fight License Fee

Evansville, Ind.—Six operators of Pee Wee courses have filed a petition in court asking an injunction against the city to prevent the collection of the $100 annual license fee. The court has issued a temporary restraining order and a hearing to make the order permanent will be held in September. It is contended the ordinance is unconstitutional.

Inside Links in Chicago

Chicago—The first of a score of indoor golf courses which will be operated in Chicago's Loop this winter is now under construction in the heart of Chicago's theatre district. The Brownie Golf Course Co., operators of several outdoor miniature links here, has signed a lease for a large portion of the second floor of the Ashland Block.

Golf Hits Providence

Providence—Films here are compelled to buck against the miniature golf craze now as well as the beaches. With the Tom Thumb courses scattered broadcast, the phobia is a real menace. Burlesque, which starts at the Modern Labor Day, is another worry for local exhibitors.

Immature Golf Smacked Plenty In Indianapolis

Indianapolis—Old Man Bogey on the city's miniature golf courses will be a license fee of $20 a month if the city council here passes an ordinance introduced at the last session. The proposed ordinance provides that courses must be closed at midnight and provides fines of $5 for violation of this provision and $5 a day for each day of operation without a license. Play on the courses will not be permitted before 8 A. M.

The largest newspaper in the city, in an editorial, said: "The city council's proposal to require miniature golf courses to close at midnight and pay a license fee appears to be in line with public opinion. Some of the courses, located near homes, apartments and hotels, are regarded as objectionable because they continue operation all night and the bright lights keep citizens awake."

It points out all the other businesses that pay licenses and says for this reason the city doubtless has the legal right to levy a license fee and regular hours of play. The only objection was the size of the license fee which the paper said was much higher than that governing most other businesses.

Ways of the Mighty

Several weeks ago came an important announcement from the inner sanctums at Paramount stating that the elimination of "Buddy" was highly essent al if Charles (Buddy) Rogers' name was to carry the dignity and weight which it so justly deserved among the great American public.

Soon afterward, Eddie Cantor served an ultimatum on the industry in which Eddie pointed out that in the future he would tolerate no cognomen other than "Edward Throckmorton Cantor."

And now comes word stating that "Mike" O'Toole should hereafter be addressed: Major Michael J. O'Toole, Officers' Reserve Corps of the United States Army, and National Secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Esq.

Major "Mike" just got word that his reappointment for another five years has been ordered by the War Dept.

Move Under Way in Michigan and Wisconsin; Bauman Sued for 15 Violations

Milwaukee—A drive against copyright infringements, which include bicycling, unauthorized holding of prints and contract breaches, is under way throughout Wisconsin and upper Michigan.

Several suits for alleged unauthorized holdovers now are pending. Three of them are against Charles G. Bauman, operator of the State at Oshkosh, filed in Federal Court here. Pathe, Universal and RKO are the complainants. They charge 15 violations against Pathe, two against Universal and one against RKO.

Bauman is charged with exhibiting the pictures in excess of the license period without permission of copyright owners and $250 is asked for each exhibition as well as an accounting of the profits and an injunction against continued use of pictures without permission.

Fines Would Total $4,500

The copyright law provides for a minimum fine of $250 for each violation, plus court and attorney fees. Fines, if levied, in this case would aggregate $4,500; $3,750 for the 15 Pathe violations, $500 for the two Universal and $250 for the one RKO.

A similar suit has been filed in the western district, federal division, U. S. District Court at Marquette, Mich., against Delft Theatres, Inc., largest operator on the peninsula.

The complaining companies in this case include Pathe and Universal, the former claiming six violations and the latter four, making a total of $2,500. No decision in the matter of copyright has been handed down in Wisconsin, but in St. Louis and in West Virginia decisions in favor of the complaining companies have been handed down in each case, charging infringement of motion picture copyrights.

Carnivals Ordered Off Main Streets in Indiana

Indianapolis—Indiana's highway commission has issued orders that carnivals showing in the smaller cities and towns of the state must relegate their shows and bandstands to the sidestreets rather than the main street, if the main street happens to be a state highway. The Commission has taken a positive stand against the temporary blocking of arterial highways and has announced it will not consent to detouring traffic for that purpose.

Each year, the commission points out, several small towns place their public entertainment, such as street fairs and carnivals, on the main street, which in most cases is the route of travel of the state road through the town. Promoters ask permission to detour traffic for a few days or a week and when not granted occasionally will establish a blockade regardless of authority.

Kansas City First Runs Get 28 Days Clearance in New Zoning Plan Voted

Pact Outlines Maximum Days' Protection; Permanent Committee Named

Kansas City—Setting forth the maximum protection which may be accorded any theatre, a zoning plan has been approved by distributors and the exhibitor committee here. The plan is complete except for rules governing North Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan. The committee did not have sufficient data to work out a plan for these spots. Kansas City first runs have 28 days clearance over second runs.

A permanent zoning committee was elected by the general committee to serve for the 1930-31 season, as follows: E. Van Hyning, president of the M. P. T. O. A. of Kansas and Western Missouri; R. R. Biechele, former president and new regional vice-president of M. P. T. O. A.; Ed Dubinsky, independent circuit owner; E. C. Rhoden, representing Fox Theatres; L. J. Finske, representing Publix; Charles Gregory, Universal branch manager, and M. C. Sinift, branch manager for Warners.

The plan as drawn up is not permanent, but may be changed upon the request of exhibitors if they show that the plan is not fair to their particular situations. The zoning committee will meet as the occasion requires hereafter as determined by the committee, to hear any complaint of any exhibitor or distributor, in writing, in this territory with reference to run and protection or to the uniform zoning plan.

Maximum Protection

The plan specifies only the maximum protection to be given each theatre in time and area; less protection than the maximum may always be given by mutual agreement. The plan states that first run theatres may specify protection over surrounding towns by naming the towns and number of days protection in their contract provided the towns and number of days within the maximum distance and maximum days are defined in the uniform plan. Subsequent runs may define the prior run theatres they will or will not follow in their contracts. Adjacent suburbs and towns within three miles of the city limits are considered as part of the same city in determining first run protection over the city theatres in each town or city, according to the plan.

In determining the classification of runs of theatres on admission prices, the code points out, it is understood that the classification shall be determined by the adult admission charged for a majority of the seats at the week-day evening performances.

For the purpose of the zoning plan, distances between towns or cities are to be determined by air line, as set up by the U. S. Postal Service.

The zoning plan follows:

RUNS AND PROTECTION IN KANSAS CITY, MO.

First-run theatres in Kansas City, Mo. (excluding road show), playing the initial run in the city shall have a maximum protection over all city theatres as follows:

Maximum protection for first-run theatres over second-run theatres shall be 28 days; 14 days additional protection on subsequent run theatres for each 5 cents less admission charges.

The week immediately following the expiration of the protection of the first-run theatre over the second-run theatres charging 40 cents admission as defined above shall be known as the first week of release.

Subsequent-run theatres shall have their pictures available and run and protection in accordance with the following schedule:

WEEK OF RELEASE

First and second week—Theatres charging 40 cents admission.

Third and fourth week—Theatres charging 35 cents admission.

Fifth and sixth week—Theatres charging 30 cents admission.

Seventh and eighth week—Theatres charging 25 cents admission.

Ninth and tenth week—Theatres charging 20 cents admission.

Eleventh and twelfth week—Theatres charging 15 cents admission.

Thirteenth and fourteenth week—Theatres charging 10 cents admission.

All protection between second and subsequent-run theatres shall expire 14 days after their available date. The available date shall be the first day of the first week of release they are entitled to by their admission prices.

Colored Theatres

First colored theatre run to be available 14 days after first run in the city, and to have 14 days' protection over all other colored theatres in Kansas City, Mo., or Kansas City, Kas., charging the same admission and seven days additional protection for each 5 cents less admission price charged, and 21 days protection over first colored run in Kansas City, Kas., provided pictures are dated within 14 days of availability.

Kansas City, Mo., Protection

First-run theatres in Kansas City, Mo., may take 28 days protection on surrounding towns as follows: Bonner Springs, Kas.; Lees Summitt, Mo.; Nashua, Mo.; Overland Park, Kas.; Shawnee, Kas.; Blue Springs, Mo.; Platte City, Mo.; Olathe, Kas.; Independence, Mo.; Belton, Mo.; Liberty, Mo.

Seven days additional protection for each 5 cents less admission charged.

TOWNS WITH A POPULATION OF LESS THAN 4,000

Maximum protection allowed shall not exceed 10-mile radius and 7 days protection for each 5 cents less admission charged.

It is agreed in all towns of 5,000 or less, in case of violation on protection by any exhibitor, exhibitor affected shall report such violation to the continuing committee, in writing, with proof, and the continuing committee shall have full power to increase protection 7 days for each 5 cents less admission charged. Continuing committee shall notify all distributors accordingly, and the distributors agree exhibitor shall not be served any sooner than spot provided for by continuing committee. No penalty to distributors shall be applied by the continuing committee.

Demand Modified

Des Moines—Publix has modified its protection demands in this territory, now asking for a 30-day protection over towns within a radius of 30 miles. While this is not as much as was asked at first, such a schedule would give the chain a blanket of the state for 30 days. Meanwhile, Iowa independents have taken a stand as opposed to any protection.

Plan Complete Except for Rules Governing One Or Two Towns

Clearance Boosted to 90 Days at Montreal

Montreal—New contracts signed here provide 90-day protection for first runs instead of 30 days, which has been the arrangement between first and second runs up to date. First run managers say there are plenty of pictures for neighborhood theatres.

Zoning at 'Cincy'

Cincinnati—Clearance schedules are being drafted for this territory. Announcement of progress made to date is expected soon.

Availability Gums Up Zoning Scheme in Cleveland; Distributors Blame Showmen

Keep Your Nose Above The Water

Hollywood—Pressure on producers to keep high their standards of production is making itself felt more and more as audiences grow more discriminating and exacting, declares Henry Henigson, Universal studio executive, who states that no longer can the mediocre and cheaply turned out film find the generous market that prevailed when the public's appetite for celluloid entertainment was insatiable.

"The best pictures will never fail to satisfy, but we must have more of them, and fewer of the indifferent type," Henigson states.

Zoning Killed In Seattle By Merry Mix-Up

Seattle—Following the brief report that proposed zoning plans had been killed by exhibitors of the territory, more details regarding the decision have been made public.

Two factors, it is understood, prevented the adoption of the revised plan as outlined several weeks ago, namely, the clearance question cannot be settled because of the fact that downtown de luxe theatres have a wide range of admission prices, including a very cheap admission early in the day; and zoning cannot be adjusted because of the overlapping of interests, with chains and independents each on opposite sides of the question in both the key centers and small communities.

A meeting of more than 45 exhibitors listened to their committee of five members and discussed the matter for more than six hours before the final decision to abandon all further action was made.

S.M.P.E. Expanding; Adds 84 New Members

Twelve countries are represented in the new group of 84 members added to the roster of the Society of M. P. Engineers since May 1. Fifty-six additions are from this country and the remainder from England, France, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Scotland, Poland, Norway, Germany, Japan and Brazil.

Pathe Readying Pollard Group

Hollywood—"Breakfast in Bed" will start off the new Daphne Pollard series of two-reel Pathe comedies, stories for which are now being lined up. "Her Hero" follows and then "Under the Cock-Eyed Moon."

In from the Coast

Colleen Moore and Virginia Valli are in New York from Hollywood. Miss Moore is to appear in a stage play produced by Arch Selwyn.

Northwest Unit In Protection Court Threat

Minneapolis—Independent exhibitors of Minnesota, North and South Dakota are stirred over the protection situation and threaten to carry their fight against it to the government and to the public. Meanwhile the Film Board has invited the Northwest exhibitor unit to send two membersh to a meeting on the situation Sept. 5. This would be attended by two distributors and two Publix representatives.

Some independents are threatening to refuse to buy Paramount product unless what they term the unreasonable demands of Publix are withdrawn. They insist that the granting of the demands will mean lower film rentals to all distributors, taking the position that such clearance would make all films second run pictures. Northwest exhibitor unit leaders insist the protection demands are illegal.

Deny Paramount Australian Buy

In a cablegram to his American representative, Millard Johnson, Managing Director Doyle of Union Theatres, Ltd., Australian circuit, denied this week reports that Paramount is seeking to purchase an interest in the chain.

"No doubt the rumor has arisen because Paramount investigators are studying the situation in Australia owing to the demands of exhibitors for reductions in film rentals," said Johnson.

Circuits Laying Off?

Minneapolis—Circuits are through bluffing about enfering towns to force their demands, as the market and the public's attitude toward amusement stocks means no more money for expansion, W. A. Steffes, general manager of the Northwest exhibitor unit, says in calling upon members to fight what he says are unreasonable protection demands on the part of Publix.

Row Over Clause in Plan Is Cause of Stalemate, Companies Say

Cleveland—Availability has thrown a monkey wrench into the machinery of zoning in this territory and distributors are selling product with a zoning plan, according to their individual protection requirements.

Exhibitors approved the zoning plan with the clause making films available to subsequent runs 60 days after release date. In case the first run does not play the picture, the clause would make the film automatically available to the subsequent run.

Distributors claim this clause was incorporated into the plan by the exhibitors after distributors had submitted the zoning plan. Exhibitors, however, claim the clause was part of the original plan and the schedules which they ratified. Thus, the matter, regarded last week as settled, is now at a standstill, due to the row over availability.

No future meetings have been scheduled by the distributor zoning committee, so it looks like the next move will have to come from exhibitors.

Sidetrack Zoning In Boston Due To Labor Scrap

Boston—Meetings of the new protection and zoning committee have been adjourned until after the labor situation is cleared up. The sessions will be resumed when a majority of each of the three groups comprising the general committee signifies its desire for resumption of the meetings.

It is understood that considerable progress has been made by the committee in a preliminary way, although no definite program has been submitted for final ratification.

The adjournment motion also cited the fact that this is the season when exhibitors are busy doing much of their year's buying of films.

Macy Finishes Outdoor Job

Macy Manufacturing Corp., Brooklyn, makers of horns used in sound houses, has completed what it declares to be one of the largest outdoor amplification jobs in the East. Ten large sized horns, hidden in recesses along midway buildings, were installed at Luna Park, Coney Island.

Gets Shoe Tie-Up

Two hundred and thirty-eight stores, comprising the American retailers of I. Miller shoes, will each tie up locally with "Reno," when it is released Oct. 1. The tie-up is the result of a specially grouped series of six shoe models worn at different times by the star, Ruth Roland, who makes her return to the screen in "Reno."

Toledo Deluged With Theatres; Will Public Pay?

been able to get away with at least two or three "Didn't I tell you's" every Spring. But it's going to be tough this year.

With six first-run theatres to deal with, a cagey guesser stood a chance. But, starting Aug. 30, there are no less than nine of them competing for the patronage of a 297,000-odd population, a Mutual Burlesque Association hip-waving emporium bringing the grand total of Friday, Saturday and Sunday openings up to the unprecedented number of 10.

The latest additions are the RKO houses, Rivoli and Palace, and the Cameo, which has just abandoned a second-run policy and now will specialize in brand-new ones bearing the Fox trade-mark. Toledo-Paramount and Rivoli, the city's two largest, are the only ones offering stage as well as screen fare. The situation is particularly interesting because Publix and RKO each get two cracks at the town's show-shoppers, the former's second shot being the Princess. Completing the roster are the State, only first-run not in the downtown district but spotted in a class neighborhood, Vita-Temple, Pantheon, and Loew's Valentine, all of which are on the main drag, theatrically speaking.

Dopesters have bought up a supply of those "You Can't Win" posters but can't decide which marquees to hang them on. Anyway, the pygmy golf gate hasn't been hit—yet.

Lodged in Jail on Fake Film Agency Charges

Philadelphia—Edwin F. Bamford, former professor of sociology at Pennsylvania State College, is held under $500 bail for the grand jury on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses and operating a film and model employment agency without a license.

He was accused of obtaining $1 each from more than 100 girls who answered his advertisement promising a future in the films or as models for those enrolling in his National Motion Picture and Modeling Employment agency. Officials in a central city hotel became suspicious of his activities and called the police. Two woman attaches of the detective bureau visited his headquarters and on their testimony Bamford was arrested. He pleaded not guilty to the charge.

Warners Take Over 2 Goshen, Ind., Houses

Goshen, Ind.—Sale of the Jefferson here to Warners for approximately $100,000, has been completed. The purchaser also has taken over the lease on the Lincoln. The Jefferson was owned and the Lincoln leased by Oscar Hansen. It also was learned that the same company has leased the Lerner, Bucklen and Orpheum theatres at Elkhart, Ind., in the same county. The Lerner is owned and the other two theatres were leased by Harry Lerner. Possession will be given immediately.

Good-Bye Talkers!

If scare headlines in important London newspapers are to be believed, thousands of song writers and others brought West with the advent of sound will soon start the trek back to New York.

"Talkies have definitely collapsed in America," says the London Daily Express. "The boom in talking pictures has finished," states the London Daily Mail.

Which leads us to inquire: Who the 'ell is news correspondent in this country for both papers?

Chicago Run for "Hell's Angels"

Chicago—United Artists has given up its intention to open "Hell's Angels" at the United Artists Theatre and will road show the Howard Hughes spectacle here instead. A theatre is now being sought for the picture, with the odds favoring either the Garrick or Majestic. Only minor cuts were made by the censors before issuing the local permit.

Publicity tie-ups have been completed with aviators here to participate in the National Air Races, and numerous other stunts are in work.

Whatever happened to that war picture that was road-showed here several months ago?

Musician Killed In Cooling Plant Blast

Leavenworth, Kas. — Explosion of the carbon dioxide tank used in the cooling system of the Orpheum cost the life of Joseph Eisch, a musician of the theatre, who had gone to the basement to shut off the air compressor when the overcharged tank exploded. Blood transfusions failed to save his life. Albert Evans, a machinist, was injured by the explosion.

The accident occurred during a matinee when approximately 50 patrons, mostly children, were seated in the theatre. A first report that 700 persons were in the house at the time was an error. Although panic resulted, patrons escaped safely.

Brown to Sheridan to ABC Newest U. K. Theatre Play

London—Seven theatres recently acquired from Summers Brown circuit by Victor Sheridan are expected to pass to Associated British Cinemas, now conducting negotiations for their acquisition. The deal would give ABC control of 12 houses. John Maxwell heads the circuit.

Sherman Supervising First Of Majestic's List, 'Today'

Hollywood—Harry Sherman, president of Majestic, is supervising production of "Today," which is being directed by William Nigh. It is the first of eight pictures which Majestic is producing for independent distribution through its franchise holders. Conrad Nagel and Catherine Dale Owen are featured.

Hughes lavished on his "multi-million-dollar air epic." He kept thousands of Hollywood's bit players and studio workers from the bread line for more than two years, and made more than one Gold Coast film magnate feel like a piker when it came to dishing the coin. But now the days of plunging are ended, and Hughes, it is understood, has decided to make pictures his regular business.

Hughes After U. A. Interest

Hughes, Motion Picture News learns, will shortly acquire an interest in a distributing unit. United Artists is mentioned, but Joseph M. Schenck denies ever having been approached. However, negotiations are understood to have been in work which would give Hughes a substantial slice of Art Cinema, United Artists subsidiary.

First, as a hobby and sideline, Hughes entered the business with formation of Caddo Prod. He made "Two Arabian Knights" and "The Racketeer" before attempting "Hell's Angels." The latter effort, so the inside story goes, finally convinced Hughes that he could make pictures, and opened the way for definite expansion of his film interests.

Holding "Hell's Angels" Pro Tem

General key city distribution will not be accorded "Hell's Angels" for at least six or eight weeks. The picture, now playing Los Angeles and New York, is due to open at Boston on Monday, Philadelphia one week later and then possibly one or two additional spots. Other roadshows will be held until Nov. 1.

The delay is said to be due to another pet whim of Hughes. Unlike other producers, he had the sound made on a separate sound track instead of on regular sound-on-film distribution prints. This was done pending reaction following Los Angeles and New York premiers, which would give Hughes the opportunity of cutting unfavorable sequences. He used the scissors plenty after the Coast showing, and made only one or two minor changes at New York, after which he sent in his order for the regulation sound-on-film prints. This transfering of sound from the separate track to Movietone prints adaptable to the ordinary sound projectors will take from six to eight weeks. The separate track now in use at the few big-town showings must be operated in conjunction with a double sound head costing in the neighborhood of $35,000, a stiff installation fee to allow for widespread openings. In New York, Los Angeles and two or three other spots, there is a possibility of securing a profit and the $35,000 double head investment from the run, but Hughes and his Caddo company are not so sure of weaker spots, which they have decided will not get "Hell's Angels" until the Movietone prints are ready.

Sterling in Comedy Series

Hollywood—Ford Sterling has been signed by Al Christie for a series of Educational-Christie comedies to be made in the near future.

Lab Wizards to Hasten Arrival Of Television?

Washington.—Efforts are being made to hasten the arrival of television, but technical as well as economic obstacles still must be surmounted, according to Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, chief engineer of the Federal Radio Commission, who states that within the laboratory and on the five experimental visual broadcasting channels now being used, technicians are doubling their efforts to speed the day when television will be practical.

The commission still regards visual broadcasting as purely experimental, a fact pointed out exclusively in Motion Picture News many weeks ago.

On the television channels set aside for experiments, Dr. Jolliffe pointed out, there are 24 licensed stations as well as seven under construction. These transmit images which may be picked up by visual broadcast receiving sets, he said, explaining, however, that at present television has little sustained entertainment value.

Urges Standard Scanning

Dr. Jolliffe urged the adoption of standard scanning systems by experimental television stations, as a means of expediting development. "The Commission, while it does not require the use of standards in television, feels that the adoption of a standard scanning system by as many as possible of the companies engaged in the experimentation will increase the value of the experiments," he asserted.

Standards might be adopted such as those of the Radio Manufacturers Association, which provide for scanning from left to right and from top to bottom, with pictures of 48 lines, and with 15 pictures per second, he pointed out.

One of the major television problems, declared Dr. Jolliffe, is that of maintaining synchronous operation between sending and receiving apparatus. Unless the receiving apparatus is calibrated at precisely the same speed as that of the emitted impulses, the pictures received are off-tangent, he said.

Visual Broadcast from London Stage Planned

London.—Commercial television will make its debut in Europe shortly when the Baird system will put on the ether waves a complete stage play from a London theatre. The system, of British origin, is understood to be considering play broadcasting on an elaborate scale provided the initial venture is successful.

Schulberg Sends Lubitsch, Bow To L. I. Studios

Having gained "active charge" of eastern and western production, B. P. Schulberg is beginning to make changes at the Paramount Long Island plant. He is bringing Ernst Lubitsch east as supervising director at the studios.

B. P. Schulberg

Upon his arrival, Lubitsch will start work on a star production. Hector Turnbull, associate producer on the Coast, will come to the New York plant to take charge of production of pictures starring Clara Bow, Ruth Chatterton and Clandette Colbert. Miss Bow is to make one picture, her next, at the eastern plant. James R. Cowan continues as general manager of the studio and its chief executive.

Eastman Kodak to Buy Gelatine Company Plants

Rochester—The Eastman Gelatine Corp., newly-organized subsidiary of Eastman Kodak, has contracted for the purchase of the gelatine plants and business of the American Glue Co. Albert Goodhue, manager of the glue company's gelatine department, will become vice-president and general manager of the Eastman Gelatine Corp. William G. Stuber, president of Eastman Kodak, is also president of the subsidiary.

Warners Withdraw in Mansfield Lease Fight

Mansfield, O.—Long drawn out court fight to prevent rebuilding fire-razed Madison has been settled by Warners withdrawing legal action. Ground for new building and additions will be broken within 30 days, according to Scareb Amusement Co., which has taken lease on the house. The theatre is part of Memorial building, a city-owned project. Meanwhile, there is report of another house on the Vonhof Hotel site.

Murder and Press Agents

Neatly tucked away in a far corner of a current issue of the Baltimore News appears the following item:

KEEPING THE PACE

A friend of Pat Garyn went out and bought himself a snooty roadster the other day. So Garyn turned right about and annexed a very sassy phaeton in blue. The Jersey countryside now turns to look when Pat passes through.

Which just goes to show how far a fellow can get with a good press agent (or did the Baltimore city editor clip the above item from MOTION PICTURE NEWS many weeks ago).

U. S. Films Taboo Here

Sydney—British films, and British films only, will be screened at a new sound house just opened at Auckland, New Zealand. The supply of British films is not sufficient to provide even weekly changes, so the exhibitor will run longer than a week when there is a dearth of product.

Television Near, Says Milwaukee Projection Dean

Milwaukee—Television with sound will be the next major improvements in films, according to Arthur H. Weaver, Milwaukee's pioneer projectionist. Weaver turned the first crank in the first machine in the first film house in Milwaukee. Aug. 31 he will turn off the current at the Merrill theatre for the last time and go on a vacation.

Weaver's record is a record of the film business in this city. Starting with the old Wonderland, the Magnet, Otto Meissner's Vaudette, the South Side and then the Butterfly, he was the organizer of the Milwaukee operators' union.

When Harry Graham, manager of the old Butterfly, on whose site Warners' new theatre is now rising, left Dec. 15, 1915, to go to the Merrill, designed for pictures only, Weaver went with him. Since that time Weaver has worked for 32 managers of the Merrill.

The Merrill, formerly operated by Saxe Amusement Enterprises and now by Fox, will close Sept. 1. It has a seating capacity of only about 1,300 and is one of the smallest first-run downtown houses in Milwaukee. It will be remodeled into a store building.

NBC Applies to Gov't For Television Permit

Washington.—The Federal Radio Commission is expected to take action soon on renewal of an experimental television license for operation by National Broadcasting Company, operating a national radio chain.

The televisor is operated with 5,000 watts on the channel 2,000 to 2,100 kilocycles and was originally operated by RCA, which assigned the permit to its subsidiary, NBC. Known as Station W3XAK, the plant is located at Bound Brook, N. J.

Two Apply to Gov't for Television Authorization

Washington—Application for permits to operate experimental television stations have been filed with the Federal Radio Commission by the Chicago Daily News and De Forest Radio Co., Passaic, N. J.

The newspaper license would allow for construction of a new station, operating as W9XAP, on 2,750 to 2,850 kilocycles. De Forest likewise asks for a construction permit for W2XCD, for 2,000 to 2,100 kilocycles.

been done to cause musicians' return to the theatres, which are supervised by him. The situation is unchanged, he added, despite the fact that labor interests have launched a fight to have union musicians employed in the playhouses again. All Richmond theatres now have mechanical music.

The situation has not affected stage hands and electricians to any great extent, it is learned, and in most houses only a few changes have been made since music supplanted orchestras.

Threaten to Cut Stage Shows in Detroit Row

Detroit—Threats of the Publix and Fox downtown houses to adopt all-sound policies followed a strike vote by musicians, who rejected the theatres' proposals for concessions on a 1930-31 contract.

The theatres want to abolish the yearly contract and have one cancellable on four weeks' notice in case of policy change. They also want to abolish overtime, the men to play the required number of shows under the house policy without extras, and demand the right to allow houses to cut the size of orchestras at their discretion.

Working to Prevent Strike at Providence

Providence—Every effort is being made by local exhibitors to find some solution that will prevent a walkout of musicians, electricians, stage hands and operators Sept. 1. Conferences between Providence managers and union delegates so far have served to promote better understanding of the problems involved and there is hope expressed that a strike may be averted. Two meetings have been held during the past two weeks and the final conference will take place Wednesday.

All Quiet on Rochester Front as Sept. 1 Nears

Rochester, N. Y.—All is serene in Rochester in view of the general expiration of union-theatre contracts Sept. 1. Only two theatres are employing musicians and only one operating a legitimate stage until fall and there have been no indications of a general upheaval and no kicks heard on possible negotiations. The RKO Palace employs a full orchestra for its vaudeville program and the Little, specializing in silent films, a group of instrumentalists and a small orchestra.

Charlotte Confabs Seek Agreement on Contract

Charlotte—While both theatre managers and union operators in Charlotte are reticent and non-committal, it is learned that they are not in agreement as to wages and working arrangements for the new year, which opens in September, but amicable negotiations are under way and there is no prospect of a break. Just what is the point of disagreement no representative of either side would say, but it was indicated that a proposed wage reduction is being resisted by the operators. There is some talk, too, of a reduction in the number of men per theatre.

The principal theatres here are controlled by Warner Brothers and the Publix organization, the latter operating three houses and the Warners one.

Dropping Stage Shows Planned at St. Louis

St. Louis—First run picture houses may drop their stage shows and go on an all-sound policy if their demands for reduction of stagehands and musicians are resisted. Contracts of stagehands at all St. Louis houses expire Sept. 1. On the same date, agreement of musicians at the St. Louis and Fox expire, while at the Skouras, St. Louis Amusement Co., and independent houses the contracts run until Sept. 19.

The projectionists contract is also about to run out, but it is understood that this agreement will be renewed without controversy. There has been close harmony between this organization and the theatre owners in this locality and no friction is expected.

It is understood that for the first time in years the theatre owners are a unit and will present a solid front in their conferences with the musician and stage hand union representatives. It will be recalled that last year when a conflict with the musicians union developed the Fox Theatre signed up very quickly while Loew's State Theatre hasn't used any musicians since Aug. 31, 1929. The Skouras houses and the independents resisted the musicians demands for several weeks and finally worked out a compromise concerning the number of musicians to be employed. The number of union workers will be the chief issue this year.

Vaudeville Threatened

Musicians will demand, it is said, that the St. Louis give up its status as a vaudeville house and be placed on the same basis as the Fox, Ambassador and Missouri. This move, if successful, would mean the St. Louis orchestra would be increased to 20 or more players. This demand will be resisted to the utmost by the St. Louis management and if forced to do so the house probably will drop its vaudeville act and depend on sound pictures. This was what Loew's State did a year ago and it has done fairly successful without musicians since then.

It is an open secret that the stage shows haven't been such big money makers for the motion picture houses and perhaps if they are eliminated entirely the profit and loss account would be healthier at the end of the year. Record of heavy losses for the past year will be among the exhibits displayed at the conferences with the union representatives between now and Sept. 1.

Samuel P. Meyers, president of the Musicians Mutual Benefit Association, has stated that his group will attempt to obtain a new contract from Loew's State.

No Radical Reductions Made In Contracts Being Closed

Syracuse Operators O. K. But Musician Jam Seen

Syracuse—For the first time a uniform contract with operators prevails here. In the past local houses have negotiated individually, with the result that contracts have been irregular as to scale, working conditions, duration and expiration date. The new deal superseded existing contracts, the Eckel contract having two more and the Keith's one more year to run.

The cancellation of these contracts is a concession by the operators, as the Eckel scale called for $80, $70 and $60 this year and $83.73 and $64 in 1931-32. Inasmuch as the top scale is considered the governing scale here, other houses would have been forced to meet the Eckel's top.

Now, however, a two-year agreement scales the men at $75 for chief operator, $65 to first assistant, and $60 to the two other men of the crew.

Keith's has had a comparatively moderate scale, and the new contract brings its booth force an advance; the existing figures are $65, $55 and $52.50. The Strand has been paying $75, $65 and $55. The Paramount scale has been on par with the Eckel. The Loew contract, oldest, had the low of $60 for the chief operator and $50 for the other three men.

Other concessions given by the union permit the reckoning of overtime in fractional terms of 15 minutes instead of the straight hour, and 11:30 P. M. closing, whereas 11:15 has been the deadline in the past. Houses, in return, will pay operators from 1:30 P. M. on Sunday instead of 2 P. M. City authorities for some time have been winking at the earlier opening.

Organist Seen Stumbling Block

Keith's and the Empire, which recently went vaudefilm, are the only two houses with a union orchestra. The latter has five men by a concession of the union. Leaders here get $90, men $65. There is no trouble over the orchestra question, but the organist matter is something else again.

The Syracuse Musicians' Union has served notice on all five chain houses that it expects an organist to be retained for the new labor year; four have organs at present, while the Paramount has none, but that's nothing to the union; it wants the house to engage a console maestro, any way.

The State, Keith's, Strand and Eckel have all handed their organists two weeks' notice and a fight impends. Houses would be willing to keep organists on for the present, although obviously with sound programs they are not needed, provided the union would grant a contract with a clause providing for two weeks' notice on both sides. The union is insistent, however, that an organist playing on Labor Day must be paid until the ensuing Memorial Day.

Year Marks First Time Unions Haven't Held Out for Raising of Wage Scales

Contracts Ready to Be Signed In Most Keys; Few Deadlocks

Keith's would also like to carry its organist, Carlton James, as an extra musician, using him with the orchestra in the featured overtures. James also broadcasts from WSYR three times a week.

The organist scale at present is $65; Paul H. Forster, featured at the Eckel for several years, and before that at both the Empire and Loew's, is reported to walk the plank on Sept. 1, when his agreement terminates. He is said to be drawing $150 a week, rating as assistant manager as well as organist.

Keith's this fall will use 11 men in the pit in addition to Ken Sparnon, director. This is a cut of one, but two more than used during the summer.

As for the stage hands, Keith's present contract calls for eight men. The house wants to cut two and the union offers to take one. The house plays intact four-act bills. The Empire, also with four acts, is permitted to operate with only two.

Scale is not an issue; carpenters and electricians get $52.50 for six days and $20 for Sundays. Six other men get $47.50 for six days and $20 for Sundays. Assistant props get $42.50 for seven days; assistant electrician gets $42.50 for six and $20 for Sundays.

Loew's, with vaudeville out, carries two stage hands and has no argument. Eckel, with no stage, has one at present, and is fighting to drop him. The Paramount and Strand have one man each and the union is insisting upon two men under a new contract.

Kansas City Agreement Expected by Saturday

Kansas City—Theatre managers and the unions expect to complete their contract negotiations by Saturday, and no danger of a strike is believed to exist. Both sides are reluctant to disclose the new demands or progress being made, but it is known that the operators are asking a $2.50 increase in the de luxe first runs.

No changes are expected in contracts covering second runs and neighborhoods. Stage hands are seeking a six-day week. New demands of the musicians have not been disclosed.

2-Year Musicians' Pact Is Completed at Frisco

San Francisco—Musicians and theatre men have completed a secret and "pleasant" two-year agreement. Previously, agreements were for three years. Negotiations are under way with operators and stage hands and the opinion is that a new contract will be executed without delay or danger of a strike.

Only One House at San Diego in Labor Row

San Diego, Cal.—With one exception, there is no labor difficulty here and contract renewal is expected. The exception is the Carteri, where the manager has only one man in the booth. It is "only a question of how long it can last," states Ed Dowell, secretary of the Federated Trades and Labor Council.

Both Sides Stand Pat In Boston Conferences

Boston—With neither managers nor employes giving ground, indications point to a strike on the part of theatre employes on Sept. 1 to enforce the demands made upon theatres a month ago.

Some of the theatres are believed to be prepared for just such an emergency and there are plenty of reports afloat as to just which theatres are so prepared and which are not, but no one in authority is willing to make any statement.

Negotiations are continuing with sessions held almost daily. Other activities of theatre managers have been cast aside in order that all attention may be focused on the negotiations in the hope of arriving at a satisfactory solution.

The situation at Boston is the same as at other points throughout New England. What Boston does will probably be followed by a majority of the cities in New England. In small towns having one or two theatres, individual agreements may be made, but in all of the larger cities indications at present point to united action, with all eyes focused on the situation in Boston and its suburbs.

Strike of Philadelphia Musicians Is Threatened

Philadelphia—Four hundred members of Philadelphia Local No. 77 of the American Federation of Musicians seethed in rage at a meeting here when the resolution of the motion picture theatre owners of the city to drastically cut the number of musicians employed for the next year, was placed before them.

Following a scene of disorder when it was proposed that approximately three-fourths of the musicians now employed be dismissed this year, the musicians advanced a two-day ultimatum to the managers to reconsider their plan. If the managers do not acquiesce, it seems inevitable that the musicians will walk out Saturday night when their 1930 contract expires.

According to the present rating, approximately 200 musicians are employed by the Warner interests in Philadelphia, Camden and vicinity, while the Fox company uses

Extension of Time Is Decided Upon to Map Capital Accord

40. It is said that the Warner Brothers intend to use only 45 musicians divided mainly between the Mastbaum and the Earle, where stage shows are featured. The Fox Grand Orchestra, a feature of the house since its opening six years ago, is to be abandoned according to current rumor and a stage band of 17 pieces substituted.

If the musicians strike, there will be an attempt to have the operators join them. Whether this will be accomplished, of course, remains in doubt, as the operators' contract runs until the end of the year. There seems to be the concensus of opinion around the city that the operators will sit tight for the present at least. Should the strike eventuate, so far as the musical end of the affair is concerned, the only houses affected would be the Fox, Mastbaum and Earle and whatever neighborhood theatres run stage shows. At the musicians meeting today it was announced that an amicable settlement had been made between the Carman, independent, and the Friehoffer interests, controlling several neighborhood houses.

The musicians are demanding a renewal of all contracts on the same basis as last year, with the big movie operators employing the same number of musicians for the coming year.

Projection School Favored By St. Louis Operators

St. Louis—Better projection is the aim of a projectionists' school being conducted here. Attendance is purely voluntary, but practically the entire membership of the union has taken advantage of the weekly meetings.

Milwaukee Seeks to License Operators

Milwaukee—Municipal licensing of projectionists is proposed in an ordinance here. At present Wisconsin operators are licensed only by the state.

The Syllabic One Cat-e-gor-i-cal-ly Denies Everything

Just think of it, mates, some mugs have got us wrong, figuring Empeenews has a bone to pick with Six-Syllable Sim-mons, the choice for president on the regular AMPA ticket. Far be it from this publication to twit the practically certain next president, as witness this official communique from the old kid himself:

"Sir:

"My chief attention-caller has called my attention to the story in Motion Picture News about my playing prima donna to a bunch of AMPA chorus men.

"Poof! Tish! and a couple of derisive shrugs! What a gross distortion of my lucid monolog! And, what a crass chronicler your representative is! Apparently it meant nothing to him that when he accosted me I was humming the opening bars of Rachmaninoff's Prelude in G—allegro con brio.

"And the joke about my having an inaugular address in type is no laughing matter. In the first place there is no printer east of the Mississippi boasting a font of type adequate to the syllabic exigencies thereof. In the second place there is no inaugural address in the first place. Now, you can all go and slap a flounder.

"I give a most disdainful snap of the fingers to your sleuth hounds. I invoke all the prophets in the scroll to witness the gargantuan asthma of their minds, the moral dyspepsia of their humor and the dandruff on their lapels.

"I return to a more profitable pre-occupation with the andante movement of Debussy's "Apres Midi Avec d'une Faune."

AMPA-thetically yours,

Mike Simmons"

Baltimore Theatres on Standard Time Basis

Baltimore — The Rivoli, managed by Frank Price, Jr., goes on standard time Saturday, reopening with "Hell's Angels." Price has discarded daylight time for his theatre because all other picture houses in the city are on standard time. Prior to closing for renovations and the installation of the dual unit Typhoon cooling plant, Price ran the playhouse on daylight time. Practically all the city is on daylight time and the matter will be settled once and for all at the polls this November at the general election, for the question is on the ballots.

Publix in Deal with Mascot in New England

Boston—Hollywood Films, handling Mascot product in this territory, has sold "The Lone Defender," new Rin-Tin-Tin serial, to 40 Publix houses in England. The serial is the first of a series of three all-talkers which Nat Levine will make for the independent market in 1930-31. "Phantom of the West" and "King of the Wild," the latter a wild animal yarn, complete the trio.

A Long Shot

New York, with its tremendous population of 7,000,000, has only 668 theatres—one for every 10,569 inhabitants, according to Frank Wilstach of the Hays office, who has just completed a survey which divides the Metropolitan theatre map as follows:

Brooklyn	272
Manhattan	221
Bronx	85
Queens	71
Richmond	18

Warners and F. N. Can Bookers' Aids

Chicago—In an economy move inaugurated this week at the Warner and First National exchanges here, all assistant bookers are dispensed with. The policy affects four assistant bookers and Charles Fanning, a First National booker here for the past nine years.

Percy Barr, First National salesman, was named this week to succeed Harry Neil as district Vitaphone sales manager. Neil has been appointed Indianapolis branch manager for Warners.

Morning Matinee Is Bid for Kid Trade

Commencing Saturday, RKO's 86th St., New York, will inaugurate its new fall season with an "Early Bird" morning matinee daily excepting Sunday. Doors will open at 10:30 A. M. and the show will begin at 11. In addition to seeing the regular vaudeville show and screen entertainment, at a reduced price, patrons of the "Early Bird" matinee will also enjoy added screen presentations of comedies, shorts and features.

24 in Manhattan Chain As Two More Are Opened

Remodeled, redecorated and refurnished throughout, the Second Ave., Second Ave., and Second St., New York, is being reopened Friday by Manhattan Playhouses. It will be the 23rd house in the company's chain with the 24th, the Cosmo, 116th St., near Third Ave., scheduled to open Saturday after complete overhauling.

DeForest on Coast to Open Phonofilm Plant

Hollywood—Dr. Lee DeForest and M. A. Schlesinger, General Talking Pictures chief, are here in search of a site upon which will be erected a new Phonofilm studio. The pair will offer Phonofilm licenses to independent producers.

Rivkin Working With Selig at Tiffany

Joe Rivkin has joined Al Selig's publicity-exploitation staff at Tiffany. Rivkin, well known in Eastern press agent circles, resigned recently as exploitation director for Pathe.

Greater Talkie Season Helps B.O. On West Coast

Los Angeles—With theatres here, at San Francisco, Seattle and Portland co-operating and all Fox West Coast houses participating, Greater Talkie Season is being observed throughout Pacific Coast states. Box offices are reflecting the extensive compaign waged.

The Greater Talkie Season, an outgrowth of Greater Movie Season, is being continued as an annual August event on the Coast, although exhibitors in most other sections of the country abandoned the new season observance several years ago.

Chain and independent theatres in Coast cities are joining hands to put over the Greater Talkie Season in a big way, stressing the strides made during the year in pictures and theatre equipment. Civic and business organizations are helping put over the event. Theatres throughout the Coast states are in holiday dress for the observance.

Fox New York Houses to Celebrate New Season

Greater Talkie Season starts Friday night in the 17 Fox theatres of upper Manhattan and the Bronx, with simultaneous reopening of six theatres of the circuit. These are the Riverside, Audobon, Valentine, Manhattan, Crotona and U. S., all of which have undergone extensive alterations.

London, Ont., Royal Is Reopened with Sound

London, Ont.—Competition will be further increased here Sept. 5 when Famous Players Canadian Corp. opens the Royal as a talker house. "All Quiet on the Western Front" will be the feature. Loew's recently reopened with a straight picture policy, after overhauling.

38 Names on Roster

Hollywood—The number of contracts being signed by Educational brings the list of players lined up for starring or featured roles in comedies to 38, while the roster of writers now totals 11. Five directors are devoting themselves exclusively to company comedies.

Niblo Out of M. G. M.?

Hollywood—Fred Niblo, who has been with M-G-M since that company was formed, finished there last week and no new agreement has been signed. Niblo's latest talker was "Way Out West." The director was noted for "Ben Hur," a silent picture which he directed some years ago.

Former Showman Dies

Boston—David Murdock, who sold the Needham, now renamed the Paramount, at Needham, Mass., to Publix and who went abroad for a vacation, died in Scotland, according to word received in Boston this week.

Canadian Officials Continue Probe of Paramount Purchase of Famous Chain

Sic Transit Gloria!

Hollywood—Grauman's Egyptian is swinging into its second week as a neighborhood house. Prices have been cut from 65 to 50 cents and the stage band, which has been a regular feature at the theatre, dropped.

The Egyptian now gets second choice of second run pictures in Hollywood, but Pantages gets the break for weekly changes along Hollywood Boulevard.

Film to Carry On, but What a Bloody Change

Trenton, Ont.—"Carry On, Sergeant" is to have another stab at Canadian theatres, but this time it will be in new dress, for the picture is undergoing a major operation at the Ontario government studio, under supervision of G. W. Brownridge, who has just completed 26 scenics for the provincial government.

The feature was produced by Canadian International Films, Toronto, now defunct, just before the talking picture wave struck the continent, and it was practically stillborn in so far as Canadians who had invested in the venture were concerned. The guiding light behind the project was Col. W. F. Clarke. The original film was directed by Bruce Bairnsfather.

With a great blare about Canada's war film epic, "Carry On, Sergeant" had its world premiere at the Regent, Toronto, but it proved an immediate failure and was put on the shelf after two or three other engagements.

Nothing much will be left of the original feature in the present revamping as it will have a new title, new theme and dialogue with sound effects. "Carry On, Sergeant" was silent, of course, and the promoters ignored the advent of talking pictures, which was one of many reasons why the feature flopped. Incidentally, the company took some two years to make it.

Rogers' Next Set

Hollywood—Charles "Buddy" Rogers' next talker to follow the one going into production this week will be a comedy western, at present titled "The Lone Rider of the Mojave." Adaptation and dialogue are by Joseph Mankiewicz and Andrew Bennison. Mankiewicz is at present working on Jack Oakie's next picture, a talker remake of "Merton of the Movies."

Bess Lonergan Sails

London—Elizabeth Lonergan, American correspondent for "Kinematograph Weekly," sailed Thursday for New York. She has been spending the summer in England on a combination business and pleasure trip.

Premier Bennett to Get Data On Deal and to Decide on Course of Action

Ottawa—Proposed probe of the Paramount-Famous Players Canadian Corp. deal has not been dropped and the government's course of action is to be determined upon by Premier R. B. Bennett.

F. A. McGregor, registrar under the Combines Act, "has assembled considerable data on the question which he is waiting to lay before the prime minister for his consideration and decision whether or not an official inquiry will be instituted in the public interest."

Premier Raised Issue

As leader of the opposition in the last Parliament, Premier Bennett brought up the Famous Players sale in the House of Commons, Ottawa, in May. The sweeping victory by the Conservative party in the Federal elections in July made him prime minister with a clear working majority in the house.

It was pointed out in a statement by McGregor that there has been wide protest in Canada against the recent reported action of the new Publix owners in banning legitimate drama shows from practically all theatres in the Famous Players chain. It is declared that, if the inquiry is held, the company may be required to show that stage productions were operated at a loss "or else the banning of these shows might be termed detrimental to the public interest and a combine in restraint of fair competition.

"Theatre conditions under present film booking contracts were also touched upon and it is suggested that the department of labor would look into this angle of the situation with particular attention being given to the effect on independent exhibitors. The next session of Parliament is scheduled to open late in September."

Resorters See Pictures Hot From Studios

Oak Bluffs, Mass.—Theatregoers who expect to leave pictures behind when they come to this resort find themselves agreeably surprised, for not only are there two cinema houses here, but many of the pictures are shown far in advance of city premieres.

This is true all along the Cape, where the demi-tasse "palaces," many of them dingy and nondescript, nevertheless flaunt such attractions as "Romance," "For the Defense," "Queen High" and other features hot from Hollywood. The admission price usually is 50 cents and but two performances a day are given, in the afternoon and evening.

Theatres Safe

Cincinnati—Inspection by the board of health here shows that film houses in the city and vicinity are safe in so far as ventilation and temperature are concerned. City authorities ordered the inspection as result of continued hot weather and drought. The report indicates that houses having air-cooling methods sought to have the air inside at about 80 degrees.

Philly's Indigo Laws Receive Judicial Swat

Philadelphia — Philadelphia's anticipated "open Sunday" moved another step forward with a decree this week by Judge Edwin O. Lewis that Sunday amateur baseball was legal and that "passing the hat" was within the law.

Sunday amateur baseball has been permitted for some seasons, but any attempt at a collection brought the interference of the police. The question came to a head three weeks ago when the Passon Baseball Club attempted a test case by passing the hat in the presence of Judge Lewis and police spectators. The managers of the two clubs and the umpire were arrested and sentenced to 30 days for violation, not of the blue laws, as was anticipated, but for disorderly conduct, though many witnesses testified that the proceedings of the game were most orderly. The sentences were appealed, at which time Judge Lewis handed down his decision on the "passing the hat" question. Last Sunday, several thousand people attended various independent games throughout the city which were played without interference.

The New Jersey farmers have added their squawk to the blue laws situation, having protested against police interference against selling their produce at the Dock Street wharves before midnight. An indignation meeting was held at Gloucester Monday night under the direction of George Lamb, Gloucester County farm agent, and State Senator Francis B. Davis, where the protest was duly forwarded to Director Schofield. Davis led a delegation of Jersey farmers to City Hall two weeks ago and won a concession from Police Superintendent Mills to unload their produce at 7 P. M. Sundays, but they were still prohibited from selling before midnight.

Youthful Playwright

Hollywood—Jane Hinton, 21-year-old playwright, has written a play, "The Devil Was Sick," which Warners will produce with Claudia Dell and Grant Withers in the leading roles.

torneys, Messrs. Newlin & Ashburn and Allen W. Ashburn, and having consented in open court to the making and entry of this decree, before any testimony whatever having been taken, now, on motion of Samuel W. McNabb, Esq., United States Attorney, John H. Amen, Esq., and Albert J. Law, Esq., of counsel for the petitioner, and after due consideration;

IT IS ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED AS FOLLOWS:

The term "affiliated exhibitors" as used herein shall include all persons, firms, partnerships and / or corporations which are engaged directly or indirectly in the exhibition of motion pictures at theatres owned, operated or controlled directly or indirectly by any producer or distributor of motion picture films.

The term "unaffiliated exhibitors" as used herein shall include all persons, firms, partnerships and / or corporations which are engaged in the exhibition of motion picture films at theatres which are not owned, operated or controlled directly or indirectly by any producer or distributor of motion picture films.

1. That the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter hereof and of all persons and parties hereto and that the petition states a cause of action against the defendants under the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled, "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," commonly known as the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

2. That the combination and conspiracy to restrain and to monopolize interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films as described in the petition herein is hereby declared illegal and in violation of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled, "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraints and Monopolies," commonly known as the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

3. That the defendants and each of them, and each and all of the respective officers and directors of the corporate defendants and each and all of the respective agents, servants, employees and all persons acting or claiming to act on behalf of the defendants or any of them, be and they hereby are perpetually enjoined and restrained from carrying out, directly or indirectly, by any means whatsoever, the conspiracy described in Paragraph VI of the petition herein, and from entering into or carrying out, directly or indirectly, such conspiracy.

4. That the defendants, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and all persons acting or claiming to act on behalf of them or any of them be enjoined from collusively, collectively or by concert or agreement—

a. Excluding or attempting to exclude said unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films for films to exhibit first or second run or first suburban run in the City of Los Angeles, California, and in other cities and towns in the southern half of the State of California;

b. Excluding or attempting to exclude said unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films for films to exhibit in competition with exhibitions thereof by said defendant, Fox West Coast Theatre; and

c. Excluding or attempting to exclude from the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films all said unaffiliated exhibitors who—

(1) Exhibit two feature motion pictures on one program;

(2) Donate gifts or premiums to patrons.

d. Enforcing or attempting to enforce clearance schedules providing for unreasonable and discriminatory clearances for each and every theatre so operated by the defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, in the City of Los Angeles, California, and in other cities and towns in the southern half of California.

5. That the defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, its officers, agents, servants, employees, and all persons acting or claiming to act on behalf of it, or them, or any of them, be enjoined from coercing or compelling said distributors, their officers, agents or employees, with the intent, for the purpose, or calculated to have the effect of causing them—

a. To exclude said unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films to exhibit first or second-run or first suburban run in the City of Los Angeles, California, and in other cities and towns in the southern half of the State of California;

b. To exclude said unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films to exhibit in competition with exhibitions thereof by said defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, and

c. To exclude from the aforesaid interstate trade commerce in motion picture films all said unaffiliated exhibitors who—

(1) Exhibit two feature motion pictures on one program, and

(2) Donate gifts or premiums to patrons;

d. Enforcing or attempting to enforce clearance schedules providing for unreasonable and discriminatory clearances for each and every theatre so operated by the defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, in the City of Los Angeles, California, and in other cities and towns in the southern half of California;

e. Giving or attempting to give defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, the right to select and contract for motion picture films to be exhibited at the theatres maintained and operated by it, or at theatres in behalf of which it contracs for motion picture films, before negotiations are entered into for film contracts with unaffiliated exhibitors; and

f. Entering or attempting to enter into film contracts whereby defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, is given the right to select for exhibition a certain number of motion picture films from the annual product of certain of said distributors to be selected by Fox West Coast Theatres, from time to time during the season for the purpose and with the effect of preventing unaffiliated exhibitors competing with Fox West Coast Theatres from contracting for and securing any of the product of those exhibitors immediately after the release thereof because of the requirement that the distributors not contract with any other exhibitor until Fox West Coast Theatres had made its selection.

Nothing in either of the foregoing subdivisions e and f of this paragraph 5 shall be construed as preventing the defendant distributors acting separately from entering into contracts with the defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, for motion picture films to be exhibited at theatres maintained and operated by or at theatres for which Fox West Coast Theatres contracts for motion picture films, or from permitting Fox West Coast Theatres from selecting for exhibition a certain number of motion picture films from the annual product of such distributors, or any of them, from time to time, before said distributors or some of them enter into negotiations on contracts with unaffiliated exhibitors for, or permit unaffiliated exhibitors to select, motion picture films from time to time for exhibition purposes, nor as preventing Fox West Coast Theatres from entering into contracts for or making selections or motion picture films for exhibition purposes before the time when unaffiliated exhibitors, or some of them, have entered into such contracts or made such selections.

6. That the defendants and their officers, agents, servants, employees, and all persons acting or claiming to act on behalf of them are enjoined from taking concerted and agreed action to prepare, publish, adopt, attempt to enforce, or enforcing any uniform plan, system or schedule of zoning and/or clearance with the intent or for the purpose of unreasonably—

a. Excluding said unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films to exhibit first or second run or first suburban run in the City of Los Angeles, California, and in other cities and towns in the southern half of the State of California.

b. Excluding said unaffiliated exhibitors from contracting in the course of the aforesaid interstate trade and commerce in motion picture films to exhibit in competition with exhibitions thereof by said defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres;

c. Giving certain designated motion picture theatres operated by said defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres an arbitrary and unreasonable protection over competing theatres operated by unaffiliated exhibitors; and

d. Giving motion picture theatre operated by said defendant, Fox West Coast Theatres, an arbitrary and unreasonable clearance over motion picture theatres operated by unaffiliated exhibitors.

Nothing in this paragraph 6 containcd shall be construed as prohibiting Fox West Coast Theatres from negotiating for or entering into any lawful contract for motion picture films for exhibition purposes with any distributor separately.

7. That nothing in this decree contained shall be construed to declare a classification of theatres according to the method described in the petition as first, second, third or subsequent run or runs theatres, or such other reasonable classification as may hereafter from time to time be in use in the motion picture industry or zoning of such theatres or clearance and/or protection of motion picture films for exhibition purposes as between theatres, including clearances and/or protection according to runs or price of admission, to be illegal as such or in violation of the Act of Congress of July 2, 1890, entitled "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce" commonly known as "Sherman Anti-Trust Act," or as prohibiting any defendant from selecting its own customers and bargaining with them in accordance with law, or any affiliated exhibitor from exhibiting at any time its own films in theatres owned or controlled by it.

8. That the terms of this decree shall be binding upon and shall extend to each and every one of the successors in interest of any or all of the defendants herein.

9. For the purpose of this decree in case any defendant is owned directly or indirectly by another defendant, the two defendants, shall, so long as such relationship continue, be deemed one defendant.

10. That jurisdiction of this cause be and it hereby is retained for the following purposes:

a. Enforcing this decree;

b. Enabling the plaintiff to apply to this court for a modification, but not for any enlargement, of any of the provisions of this decree; and

c. Enabling the defendants or any of them to apply to this court for modification, but not for enlargement, of any of the provisions of this decree on the ground that the same have become inappropriate or unnecessary.

Any application by any party hereto under the foregoing subdivisions, a, b and c of this paragraph 10 shall be made in open court upon notice to all of the parties hereto, and any of the parties hereto, upon such application, shall have the right and privilege of requiring the production of witnesses upon whose testimony such application is sought or opposed, and of examining and cross-examining such witnesses in accordance with the rules of the Court.

DONE in Open Court, this 21st day of August, 1930.

SGD GEO. COSGRAVE
District Judge.

Victory for All Seen In Consent Decree recognition of its right to demand and receive "reasonable" protection, and in protection against the triple damage civil suits by independents which were regarded as practically certain to follow, if the Government won the case.

What Distributors Gain

Distributors gain a victory in the recognition of their right to select their own customers and "bargain with them in accordance with law," and at any time to show their films in their own or affiliated theatres. They also win protection against any intimidation in connection with unreasonable protection demands.

Independents win protection against "unreasonable and discriminatory" protection; unfair buying and exhibition restraints by the defendants, and the right to double-feature shows and to donate gifts or premiums.

The Government finds victory in the injunction which "restrains the defendants from every illegal practice charged in the indictment."

showing by independents was unprofitable, it was charged.

Practices complained of were abandoned, according to Acting Attorney General John Lord O'Brian, and agreements of a more satisfactory character entered into voluntarily between independents and the defendants. He says the settlement and the course of action taken by the Government were commended by the trial judge "because of the protection afforded independent exhibitors of southern California through the injunctive features of the new decree."

atre to demand protection over a subsequent run, the difficulty having been extended clearance demands, which, in many instances have assumed unreasonable proportions.

The decree, therefore, will clear the way to a degree for distributors not in sympathy with excessive clearance to co-operate more closely with independents in the drafting of satisfactory schedules, it is believed.

"U" Party Nov. 1

Second annual dinner dance of the Universal Club will be held Nov. 1 at the Hotel Astor, New York. The grand ballroom will be transformed to represent the steamer "Morro Castle."

Regusted

Both members of the Fresh Air Taxicab Corpulation seem to be that way. One of the first stills of the Amos 'n' Andy production, "Check and Double Check," to reach New York.

Five Baltimore First Runs Open

Baltimore—Five first-run theatres will reopen their doors for the new season soon—the Little, Auditorium, Palace, Hippodrome and Rivoli.

The Auditorium, managed by Fred C. Schanberger, Jr., reopened August 29 with Al Jolson in "Big Boy" with admission at $1.50 top at night. It is planned to show it later at Warners' Metropolitan Uptown for the popular-priced showing. "Hell's Angels" will go into the Auditorium later in the season.

The Little, operated by Moviegraphs, Inc., of Maryland, affiliated with the same company of New York, reopens Sept. 1 under the management of Herman G. Weinberg, who piloted the house last season.

Nat Keene will manage the affairs of the Hippodrome again this year with Roger Hurlock, who acted as his publicity man last season, promoted to be his assistant, to have charge of publicity also. Tabloid musical shows with talking pictures will prevail. It opens August 30.

Bert Smith has returned to Baltimore and opens the old burlesque house, the Palace, on Aug. 30, under the backing of John Jemon, of New York, it is said. He will offer his tabloid musicals with talking pictures, as the house has been wired. Joe Battersby will handle publicity.

The Rivoli will reopen under the management of Frank Price, Jr. "Hell's Island" is to be the opening attraction. This house has been generally overhauled. Columbia and Pathe pictures have been signed for the season.

Three Birthdays

Chicago—Three neighborhood theatres here are observing "birthdays" this week. The Senate (Publix-B. & K.) is celebrating a tenth anniversary; the Tower (Publix-B. & K.) its fifth anniversary and the Ramova (Indie) its first. All three houses invited patrons to cut a piece of cake and the Ramova, with the customary profligacy of youth, also ladeled out ice cream. The mammoth birthday cakes, candles and all, are established in the lobbies

Spoor Reenters Production with New Inventions

George K. Spoor, pioneer producer and head of Essanay Pictures, Inc., is to reenter the field of production in January after a lapse of many years, during which he has devoted his time to developing a three-dimensional camera and projector and the "Intersound" device, by which sound is engraved on the edge of the film. Both innovations have reached "the point of perfection," he told a Motion Picture News representative in New York, and he predicted that they would "revive the industry."

Spoor declined to give details of his production plans, beyond that he contemplated making four pictures during 1931. They will be outdoor productions chiefly, he said, because his "Natural Vision" camera, which he says gives a stereoscopic perspective, has a focus range of 25 miles and the outdoors therefore constitute better backgrounds. He will utilize his Chicago studio, where Charles Chaplin and other stars made their film debut, for interiors. Although he has plenty of story material, he asserted that he had not as yet signed up players or a technical staff.

In addition to making his own productions, Spoor will license his equipment to any producer. One picture, "Danger Lights," a railroad melodrama, has already been made by RKO with the "Natural Vision" camera and will have its premiere in Chicago next month. It was shot on 63mm. stock, with the sound recorded on a separate film. Perfect synchrony between the two can be obtained on the projector devised by Spoor and P. John Berggren, the producer declared. "Danger Lights" was also shot on standard film. After playing RKO houses, the wide film will be available to other theatres.

The cost of "Intersound" recording will be one-twentieth that of any other process, Spoor asserted.

"I'm told that the present type of sound track will wear out after running the picture 110 to 125 times," he added. "We have run the 'Intersound' through a projector 6,000 times without any perceptible wear and believe that it will reach 10,000."

Spoor is now preparing his Chicago studio for the resumption of production.

Unreasonable Jealousy, Basquette Case Charge

Hollywood—It was a case of "unreasonable jealousy," Peverell Marley, cameraman, charges in his suit for divorce from Lina Basquette, former wife of the late Sam Warner. She was jealous of his friends and even threatened to slap the face of one woman with whom he was dancing, Marley charges. Miss Basquette recently provided front page copy by a suicide attempt.

Trop Handles Scenics

J. D. Trop has arranged for the distribution of a new series of one-reel novelty scenics, synchronized both on film and disc, known as "Masterpieces of Nature."

Clarke Reports Improvement in Fox Finances

Improvement of the financial condition of Fox Film is indicated in the detailed report for the first six months of this year, as made public by President Harley L. Clarke. It shows current assets of $30,444,121 on June 30 and current liabilities of $12,229,-245.

At the end of 1929 current assets were $23,408,565 and current liabilities $46,101,-586. Cash at the end of June was $6,965,126, compared with $2,492,600 at the close of 1929. Accounts receivable on June 30 were $3,564,633 and inventories, otherwise referred to as unamortized costs, aggregated $19,914,362.

Supplementing the earnings statement for the first 26 weeks of 1930 are figures made public by Mr. Clarke in connection with the Fox Film's interest in Loew's Inc. Its holdings of 660,900 shares of common stock of Loew's Inc. represent an equity of about 48 per cent in the earnings of Loew's. Such equity for the first 26 weeks of 1930 approximated $3,304,500, or a gain of more than $2,800,000 over the income actually reported by Fox Film Corp. from such holdings. This would be equivalent to additional earnings of $1.11 a common share of Fox Film.

Robbins Exploiting New Fall Catalogue

Simultaneous with the release of several M-G-M productions, Robbins Music Corp. has begun exploitation on a number of songs which include "Go Home and Tell Your Mother," "I'm Learning A Lot From You," "I'm Doin' That Thing," and "One More Waltz," written by Jimmy McHugh and Dorothy Fields for "Love In the Rough," "Just a Little Closer," by Howard Johnson and Joe Meyer, sung by William Haines in "Remote Control," "Sing A Song to the Stars," from "Way Out West" and "Sing a Happy Little Thing" from Buster Keaton's "Dough Boys," a song that is reported to be another "Singin' In the Rain."

Al Skinner, for the past two years Detroit manager for this firm, has been recalled to New York to assume charge of the band and orchestra department succeeding Frank Kelton. Al is a brother of Frank Skinner, arranger.

Treacy in Series of Eight "U" 2-Reelers

Hollywood — Emerson Treacy, stage player, is now working in "A Day to Live," the first of a series of talking two-reelers which he will make for Universal. Albert Kelly is directing under supervision of Sam Freedman.

Browning to Make "Dracula"

Hollywood—Tod Browning is to direct "Dracula," recently acquired by Universal.

Un-Common "Clay"

Fox's "Common Clay" this week winds up a four-week run at the Roxy, New York, with a total box-office take nearing the $465,000 line, a sensational figure considering weather and usual seasonal depression. The first week started off at $108,367, climbing to $120,233 and then to $123,746 in the third week. Up to Thursday of the final week, more than $95,000 had been grossed.

Suit on "Unborn Child" by Ross Not Yet Settled

Suit brought in District Court at Minneapolis by Mark Ross for return of his $15,-000 deposit on "Her Unborn Child" from Windsor Pictures has not been won by Ross, as stated last week, according to Harry G. Kosch, Windsor attorney.

"In the action brought by Mr. Ross," Kosch writes in a letter to Motion Picture News "a demurrer was interposed, which merely judged the sufficiency of the complaint and the decision of the judge merely means that the complaint sets forth a cause of action. There was no determination and there could be none as to the merits of the action. The decision merely meant that Windsor has to interpose an action and then the action will proceed to trial."

Ross claims the contract was abrogated when he says Windsor refused to become party to a suit against Publix for alleged violation of the copyright law and for other obligations, for which he asks $5,300. His contract is said to have specified he is to hold 55 per cent of the gross until his deposit was returned. He has collected $7,-200 and is suing for the balance.

Keith-Albee Nets $60,597 in 6 Mos.

Net earnings of $60,597 for the six months ended June 30 are reported by Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp. and subsidiary companies. The figure represents income after taxes and charges, but before deduction of subsidiary preferred dividends, and compares with a net loss of $446,274 for corresponding period in 1929.

Consolidated income account for K-A-O and its affiliations for the six months of 1930 and 1929 follows:

Loss from operations	$17,412	$987,619
Other income	78,009	541,345
Net profit	$60,597	*$446,274

*Loss.

Boost Attendance

Attendance at AMPA meetings is being boosted since the association changed its weekly luncheon headquarters to the Dixie, 42nd and 43d Sts., west of Broadway. The newspaper and outdoor billing committees reported at Thursday's session.

Columbia Hits Stride; Revenue Nearly Doubled

While some distributors have been squawking about poor business, Columbia during the fiscal year which ended June 28, 1930, sailed along to a new record net of $1,029,958, nearly doubling earnings of the previous year, when the take was $551,822. This year's earnings equal $6.22 earned on 150,063 no-par common shares, while last year $4.77 a share was earned on 100,063 shares then outstanding. On the basis of present capitalization, last year's net was $3.18 a common share.

The balance sheet shows current assets of $4,098,953, as against current liabilities of $1,168,588 and cash of $516,291. And the company for the coming season is set for its entire product in all Radio-Keith-Orpheum houses.

Levine Returns from L. A., First of 3 Serials Ready

Nat Levine, president of Mascot Pictures, is back in New York from Hollywood, where he produced "Lone Defender," first in a series of three all-talking serials which his company plans for 1930-31. Levine returns to the Coast shortly to place the second serial in work.

Distribution deals for the serial group have already been closed by Levine with Capital Film, New York; Hollywood Films, Boston; Premier Pictures, St. Louis; All Star Features, San Francisco and Los Angeles; Fischer Film, Cincinnati and Cleveland; Standard Film, Buffalo and Albany; Graphic Exchanges, Detroit; Affiliated Producers, Atlanta; P. C. Hurst, Seattle; Midwest Film, Kansas City; B. N. Judell, Chicago and Indianapolis; and Midwest Film, Milwaukee.

Harvey Starts Art Service

George W. Harvey, formerly head of Pathe publicity and advertising and recently with Warners, has established an advertising art service at 1674 Broadway, New York. Herb Jaediker and other artists are associated with him. Harvey also is representing McKellar & Platt, advertising typographers, offering a practical service to advertisers, backed by his 15 years of experience in the field of advertising and publicity.

More Runs Set

"Top Speed" will probably follow "The Dawn Patrol" at the Winter Garden. Another New York run set by the Warners is "Kismet," Otis Skinner's first talker," which is now scheduled to follow "Moby Dick" at the Hollywood. Dates depend upon how long the pictures current at those houses hold up.

Pathe Starts Two Shorts

Hollywood—Two short comedies are scheduled to go into production at the Pathe studios next week. Daphne Pollard will start "Breakfast in Bed," the first of her new series of 12 and Bob Carney and Si Wills will get under way with "Under the Cock-Eyed Moon."

The massed brain power of the staff has given birth to a new batch of synonyms for miniature golf and "golfers," to wit: Pill Plains, Pasture Pool, Immature Golf, Dot Ditches, Tiny Turfs, Dinky Links, Dwarf Dubbers, Scotch Meadows, Abbreviated Acres, Tiny Toms, Course-ettes, Thimble Courses, "Missing" Links, Diminutive Ditches, Golfies, Lilliputian Lots, Divot Diggers, Gall-f Courses and Marble Movers. (To be continued—if we do not meet an untimely end.)

Announcement is made of the engagement of Margaret de Mille, daughter of William C. de Mille and niece of Cecil B. De Mille, to Bernard P. Fineman, producer. It is understood that Cecil will give her one of his prop bathrooms as a wedding present. . . . Peverell Marley, cameraman, has sued Lina Basquette for a divorce, charging that his wife was so jealous that she objected to his working with actresses. Just a bit "cranky," as it were.

Barney (Paramount Publicity) Hutchison wasted his vacation in the mountains writing trick post cards. . . . Ben Grimm hooked up with Columbia a few weeks ago, but he couldn't break himself of the habit of going to 730 Fifth Ave. every morning, so Universal hired him back again. He is now manager of sales promotion under Phil Reisman, general sales manager. Ben is a stable (not livery) resident of Rutherford, N. J.

Harold J. Fitzgerald, veteran showman, now has the Fox Chicago houses, as well as the Wisconsin string, under his jurisdiction. Harold is one of the boys who used to say, "There'll be a franchise everywhere," asleep or awake. . . . There's some kind of a subtle gag hidden in the Fox P. A.'s announcement that "'Stolen Thunder' is a story of an opera singer and a burglar." Hollywood could use a couple of burglars like that.

Norman Taurog, directing for Paramount in the east, invariably calls Ed Wynn "Madame," but he doesn't kiss his hand. . . . An excited reader has just called up to inform us that he's seen "Our Blushing Brides" and that he believes the word "talkies" should be changed to "undies." And he didn't talk under his breath, either. . . . Sam Sax asserts that the Tom Thumb golf course across the way from the Brooklyn Vitaphone studio will not interfere with production. In fact, he's thumbing his nose at it.

B. S. Moss' Colony, where Universal took it on the chin for so long using the house as a Broadway show window, will open with legit in November. . . . Al Ruben, insurance broker, is all a-thrill over the ride he had t'other day in the dirigible, Los Angeles, sailing over New York for some 11 hours. Wotta guy. . . . Incidentally, that Jack Holt automobile mishap had all the earmarks of a publicity gag, but wasn't.

Harry Rathner, formerly with Photocolor, has returned to the Main Stem with the first of a series of novelty shorts which he says is something new and a real novelty. . . . What producer recently went abroad under an assumed name? . . . Ilka Chase is having fun with a pet parrot given to her by a film man. It seems the bird tells plenty of stories.

Another Hope Shot

"Good night—an' remember—don't sleep in that uniform!"

Depression? Blah! Better Pictures Boost Bway B. O.

Seasonal depression is the bunk if you have the pictures, as evidenced by many healthy performances along Broadway's main stem, where, aided by comparatively cool weather, box-office grosses mounted to high averages for current period. At the Roxy, one of the outstanding runs of the season was scored by Fox's "Common Clay," which closed after four weeks at this weekly-change house with a total gross intake of $449,755 (up to Thursday), a sensational figure considering the terrific heat wave which this picture had to buck in the early days of the run.

In this week's line-up, the new $2 pictures continued to hold up well, but most of them are still in the early stages and the Broadway box-office prophets refuse to hazard an opinion as to the possibilities of their continuing indefinitely. Howard Hughes' two "Hell's Angels" runs, now in their third week, remain complete sellouts. The Capitol was forced to five shows a day with the Garbo picture, "Romance." Greta usually plays to capacity at this house. United Artists' Wright story, "Eyes of the World," flopped heavily in the middle of its second week at the Rivoli. "Monte Carlo" succeeded on Thursday, following a dressed-up formal opening on Wednesday night.

WARNERS—(1,490), $1-$2, 2 days. Other attractions: Shorts: "Legacy," "Believe It Or Not," "Hold Everything." Gross: $6,915, looks good on these first two-day figures.

Paging Papa

Tucson, Ariz.—Roy Drachman, manager of the Rialto and Opera House, often finds it necessary to call railroad men from the audience.

In the silent film days the usher merely paged them. Now it is necessary to cut in a slide on the screen with the trainman's name on it.

"And who is the father of this child?"

Right at this point a slide appeared on the curtain reading: "W. J. Young."

The Tucsonites are still kidding the engineer who was unwittingly the victim.

Rainbow Follows "Rain or Shine" In Cleveland

Cleveland—Big pictures did big business here last week. Cool weather helped recreate an interest in theatres generally. The new policy of featuring big vaudeville headliners at the Palace is getting splendid response from the public.

"Rain or Shine" went over big, indicating that good fun and plenty of laughs is today's best bet. Weather, cool and clear.

Oliver & Kirby Get House at Little Rock

Little Rock—Eugene T. Oliver and Sam B. Kirby have acquired lease of the old Kempner, "legit" house and will open it in October under the name of the Arkansas. The house is being completely remodeled and modernized for a picture policy.

Associated with Oliver and Kirby in Arkansas Theatres, Inc. are Thomas W. Freeman, Arkansas financier who is president of the company; G. L. Nicklaus, secretary and treasurer. Oliver is vice president and general manager and Charles W. Mehaffy legal advisor. Oliver for 20 years has been connected with the Interstate Amusement Co.

Seitz Returns

Hollywood—George B. Seitz will return to Columbia to direct "The Lion and the Lamb," by E. Phillips Oppenheim.

"Top Speed" Tops L. A. Runs With Weather Boiling

Los Angeles — Scorching hot weather doomed downtown first runs which were on the spot with weak pictures. Very little influence was felt on the week's figures of the stronger runs, led by "Top Speed" with its $27,400 gross (195%), and "Moby Dick," taking $27,000 (185%).

Under-par performances were made by "Anybody's War," taking only $3,600 on a 53% rating; "Love Among the Millionaires," $11,500, or 78%; "Our Blushing Brides," $9,500, 97%, "Eyes of the World," $10,500, 80%, and "Czar of Broadway," $11,000, rating 66%. Other runs played slightly above the 100% mark.

The new Newsreel theatre (formerly the President) started off with a bang. Seating 700, and charging 25 cents, the first week's gross reached $4,700.

W. E. Installations Now 6,446; Near 1,000 in U. K.

Western Electric installations in Great Britain will shortly have passed the 1,000th mark. The figure is now 968.

World-wide installations now told 6446 of which 2111 are in the foreign field and 4335 in the United States. Four installations recently completed in Switzerland have jumped that country's total to 41.

Friendly Enemies

Hollywood — Joe Frisco, the comic, was surrounded by his usual audience in the lobby of the Roosevelt. He was trying to impress the listeners with how well the studio technicians, "Yes-men" and others, roared and howled while rushes on "The Gorilla," his latest picture, were being shown in the projection room.

One of the boys who had been listening to the confab in a rather casual manner asked:

"Tell me, Joe, just how many studios do you think the talker can play in?"

300% for 'Quiet' A Sensation on Des Moines Row

Des Moines—S.R.O. business at the Des Moines where "All Quiet on the Western Front" is doing knock-out business on both matinees and evenings gave the picture a rating of 300%. All other pictures hung around average. The Fair crowds and 3,000 men here for the I. N. G. camp helped a little.

"Rain or Shine," Columbia picture at the Orpheum, did 120%, while "Call of the Flesh" at the Paramount rated 125%. An exceptionally good attraction, the Roxy Theatre "gang," helped out the Orpheum bill. Weather O. K.

Subsequent Runs Can't Play 'Lummox' at Sydney

Sydney, Australia—Censorship here has become hysterical. The latest instance of the irritating fiasco was the revival by the chief secretary's department of the N.S.W. censors for the express purpose of viewing "Lummox" which, after the chief censor's ban, had been passed by the appeal board. As a result of their look-see, "Lummox" was ousted, despite the fact that it has already run several weeks in the city. The affair has caused a sensation not only in film circles, but also among the picture going public.

Providence—With thousands of resort-bound vacationists beating it hot-foot from the city exhibitors here felt a bit depressed although a check-up of the books at the end of the week showed that things might have been worse.

The Majestic, with "Common Clay," which hit $13,000, and the Paramount, showing Moran and Mack, clicked $12,-500, were the week's best.

Loew's State came under the wire strong with $18,000 with Haines in "Way Out West" and the RKO Albee had a good week with Joe Cook in "Rain or Shine." The RKO Victory sank to about $7,000 with "One Mad Kiss."

Calls Turn

Albany—A mind reader at one of Schenectady's theatres informed "Mingo" Charles, of Watervliet, N. Y., that he would soon leave town. Charles was being sought by the Watervliet police for the shooting of a patrolman a few nights before. When he entered the theatre in Schenectady he was spotted by one of the police of that city, and no sooner did he ask the question of the mind reader and receive the answer, than he was placed under arrest. Ten minutes later he was on his way from Schenectady to Watervliet.

"Common Clay" Held Over on $13,500 Gross

Toronto—Business was so snappy with Toronto's cinema palaces during the week that practically every attraction crowded the high marks and two features were held over, "Common Clay" going into a second week at the Tivoli after doing $13,500, and "Splinters," British war comedy, being retained at the Royal Alexandra on $12,000 for the first six days.

Topping the list was "Grumpy" at the Uptown with $16,000, Jack Arthur's stage unit helping materially. Arthur has only two more weeks at the Uptown when his stage spectacles will be transferred to the Imperial. Fair weather prevailed during the week.

Estimated takings:

Businessmen Back Sunday Pictures in Iowa Town

Jewell, Ia.—Petitions, signed by the town's leading business and professional men, asking the repeal of the ban on Sunday films and the ordinance requiring a license fee for operating a theatre, have been received by the council.

Jewell has been without a theatre since June 1, when the Strand closed, due to heavy competition from wired houses in adjacent towns. J. B. Forseman, owner of the house, has declined to install sound equipment. for a six-day week. Merchants claim that business generally has been hurt by lack of a theatre.

Reel (Not Real) Life

He saved the poor orphan girl from the churning waters,
He foiled the plans of the cruel villain,
He grappled with the bandit and saved the bank's money,
He carried the aged woman from the burning house—
Then his double died and he had to go to work.

End of Drought In Okla. Raises Managers' Hopes

Oklahoma City—A heavy rain Tuesday, breaking the drought, improved theatre business considerably. Crowds flocked to the first run houses and found it hard to choose from the excellent offerings.

"The Bad Man," with Walter Huston, at the new Midwest, grossed $8,000, rating 105%. "Manslaughter" (Para.), starring Claudette Colbert and Frederic March, piled up $8,500 with a rating of 110%. "Let's Go Native" (Para.), with Jack Oakie, pulled in $7,000, rating 105%.

"Women Everywhere" with Fifi Dorsay only pulled down $4,000 at the Liberty for the entire week, while "Bride of the Regiment" knocked off but $4,500 at the Empress. "Wings of Adventure" did $3,200 for four days, while "Embarrassing Moments" with Reginald Denny did like business at the Orpheum.

Sound an Impetus for Educational Development

Hollywood—"The fact that sound development in films has made the dialogue unintelligible to a great proportion of the people abroad seems to make no difference whatever," according to Richard Wallace, director, back from a tour of the world.

"The effect it seems to have, on the contrary," Wallace says, "is to make everyone eager to learn the English language. It is surprising how talkers are helping foreigners to acquire a speaking acquaintance with our language."

Mpls. Managers Perk Up as B.O. Receipts Climb

Minneapolis—Happy days are here again. Theatres in the Loop had one of the best weeks they have known for several months. Best of all, it appears that this week is just an indication of still better weeks to come. Now the house managers greet you with a smile. The future has the rainbow hue that they have been constantly talking about but have doubted of seeing.

Of the six houses in the Loop, four registered 100% or better, biggest gross going to the Minnesota where the personal appearance of Helen Kane and the showing of "Holiday" was a great lure for the customers. The house rated 98% and grossed $34,000. The Orpheum gave the Publix house competition with "Let Us Be Gay." The film grossed $23,000 which rated 105%. The State came in third by collecting $19,250, a rating of 90% on "Way Out West." The Century also brushed into high money by showing "Common Clay," to the tune of $11,300 which gave the house 110%.

The Aster, ballyhooing "Murder Will Out," listed $3,000 as the week's take to rate the house 100%. The Lyric made "A Man From Wyoming" bring in $3,800, rating 115%.

No apprehension is felt here concerning the legit shows which are soon to be featured at the Shubert, Metropolitan and the Lyceum. Mrs. L. N. Scott who has the backing of the Civic and Commerce association, so it is stated, will bring in "Strictly Dishonorable" to open the house in Sept. The Shubert will open with the stage version of "Let Us Be Gay." Mrs. Carlyle Scott plans to manage the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra this season and to bring in several theatre guild offerings.

Estimated takings:

"LET US BE GAY" (M-G-M)

Cummings on Colman Film

Hollywood—Irving Cummings has been borrowed from Fox by Samuel Goldwyn to direct Ronald Colman in the star's next. Among those who have been cast for the picture which is as yet untitled are David Torrance and Frederick Kerr. Frederick Lonsdale has written the story.

Service Plus

Hollywood—Harrison Carroll is telling the story about the extra man who went into a famous Hollywood restaurant minus his coat. The headwaiter rushed toward him shaking his head, "I'm sorry, sir, but we can't allow anyone in shirt sleeves in the dining room. Where is your coat?"
"I just sold it for enough to eat luncheon here," replied the extra.

Greta's Gross Of $16,000 Puts Palace on Top

Montreal—Theatre business in Montreal broke still further away from the summer slump during the week, receipts being generally better and two features good enough for a hold-over.

Greta Garbo in "Romance" soared to $16,000 at the Palace and Manager George Rotsky decided that it was good for a hold. The British International feature, "Atlantic," remained at His Majesty's as a road show when $11,000 went through the wicket for the first week. "One Embarrassing Night" did nicely at the Princess with $9,500 for its second week, although this was a big drop from the previous week. The weather was fair and cool, turning warm Thursday.

Estimated takings:

"ROMANCE" (M-G-M)
PALACE—(2,600), 25c-99c, 7 days. Other attractions: Movietone news, cartoon reel, comedy. Gross: $16,000. Rating: 110%.

When the Fleet's In, Frisco Hangs Out S.R.O. Signs

San Francisco—Because of pleasant warm weather, the arrival of 24,000 sailors and exceptionally good pictures as well as the promotion of "Talkie Season," which has been going over splendidly, business here was much better than usual.

Eight leading houses did at least 100% or better, topped by "Common Clay" with a 148% rating and $35,000 gross. "Our Blushing Brides" was second, rating 140% and grossing $21,000.

"All Quiet on the Western Front" was shown at the Davies for a second week, rating 105% on a gross of $8,550. "Oh Sailor Behave" also rated 105% at the Embassay with a gross of $9,500.

Three other leading theatres rated 100%. They were the St. Francis with "Journey's End," which grossed $10,000; "Manslaughter," second week at the California, grossing $12,000, and "Grumpy" at the Paramount grossing $10,000. All this in spite of the fact that a couple of new "miniature golf links were opened.

Estimated takings:

Exhibitor, Feeling Biz Topsy-Turvey, Retires

Tampa—E. J. Walton, who at one time controlled all three of the Ybor City theatres, has disposed of all his Tampa interests and has moved to Atlanta where he will manufacture a magnetic belt he has perfected. Mr. Walton says the show business is undergoing too many growing pains, with the sound and wide film, and is confident that he will not reenter the game until it gets on a more stable basis.

Get Ready, Showmen!

If the initial group in Universal's 1930-31 short subject lineup is an indication of the production tempo which is to be followed in future releases, theatre owners will have at their disposal a selection of two reelers hitting very high entertainment standards.

First subjects in the Slim Summerville, "Leather Pushers" and Indian serial units combine the best of everything needed in their respective types. The initial Summerville will probably be accepted as one of the season's funniest shorts. The new "Leather Pushers" is fast and snappy, while the serial is knock-'em-dead stuff for the kids.

Great stuff and surefire money-getters for Universal if the later shorts continue at the same pace.

CUNNINGHAM

K. C. Fans Flock To 'Common Clay' Which Gets 230%

Kansas City—"Common Clay" proved to be uncommon box office tonic for the Newman, shooting the gross up to $23,000. Average intake for this house is around $10,000, but this Fox opus chalked up a rating of 230% and the picture has been sent over to the Royal, another Publix house, for a second, and possibly a third, week.

"Rain or Shine" swelled the coffers at the Mainstreet to the tune of $17,250, or 115%. Above-average business may partly be attributed to Baby Rose Marie, radio favorite, who packed the kids in at matinees.

"Skin Deep" at the Uptown pulled average patronage, getting $6,000, or a rating of 100%. "All Quiet" at the Royal did a little better than average, grossing $5,000, or 110%. It was the picture's third week in K. C. at popular prices. The Midland failed to do better than average with "Lady of Scandal" and finished the week with $15,000, 100%. The Pantages, after a brilliant opening last week with its first Fanchon & Marco show, nosedived down to a 95% week, taking in $9,500. Picture was "Bright Lights."

Boston Beans Discarded for Animal Crackers

Boston—Seldom are first runs held over here and even less often are first runs playing day and date held over. This was the case with "Animal Crackers," Paramount's Four Marx Brothers film, playing day and date at the Publix Uptown and Olympia and the second week's business at both houses nearly equalled the first. For a second week, total gross of $29,500 plus a first week's gross of $31,500, made a grand total for the two weeks of $62,000—which is plenty for Boston.

Metro's "Sins of the Children" did extra big business at Loew's State for a gross of $24,000 and there is talk of another week at the earliest booking date. It hit 120%, partly due to a tie-up with Hearst papers and heavy advertising.

Advent of cold and rainy weather helped maintain the heavy grosses at all downtown theatres for a third week. "Rain or Shine" brought laughter worth $24,000 for 110% at Keith Memorial; "Raffles" at Loew's Orpheum hit 110% and the Metropolitan with "Common Clay," which played many weeks as a legit in Boston, grossed $35,000 for 110%. "The Sap from Syracuse," which showed at the Metropolitan two weeks ago, was brought back to the Scollay Square where it was good for $14,000 more, plus $34,000 two weeks ago, a total of $48,000 for the two weeks.

Estimated takings:

Another for Columbia Firm

Milwaukee—Columbia Enterprises has taken over the Greenfield neighborhood house which featured in one of the recent bombings, from James Docter and Harold Watson. The theatre recently installed De-Forest sound equipment. Columbia also operates the Columbia here.

Estabrook Signs Contract

Hollywood—Howard Estabrook has been signed by RKO on a long-term contract as a result of his adaptation of "Cimarron," from the story by Edna Ferber.

'Little Accident' Surprises "Chi" With 190% Take

Chicago—The weather being agreeable, those Loop houses which were stuck with program pictures managed to hold their heads above water—but that's about all. Holdovers, for the most part, showed what little strength happened to be in circulation.

"Common Clay" finished its fourth week at the Roosevelt in the same consistent manner it adopted at the start. The picture took $22,500 (110%) and opened its fifth week strong. The women are still going for this one. "Grumpy," which gave the RKO Palace its best gross since adoption of a vaude-film policy, after it was overlooked by Publix bookers here, was given a second Loop week at the State-Lake, RKO's other Loop vaude-film spot, where it did $23,400 (90%). "Little Accident," playing to "adults only" at the Woods, grossed $21,500 (190%) in the last seven of its first ten days at that spot. After one more week it moves to the Palace, and "Dixiana" (Radio) replaces for what may be the last run the house gets under RKO management. The Woods will probably be turned over to the Shuberts some time in September.

"Holiday" went into its third week at the United Artists at a nice pace, after finishing the second with $26,400 (120%). Word of mouth advertising is helping this one, and the house is getting the best business it has seen in months. "Animal Crackers" replaced "Dawn Patrol" at McVickers in midweek, and was off to a good start, getting $25,200 (115%) in its first five days. "What Men Want" was shoved out of the Garrick after one unimpressive week. The house remained dark after it left. The Monroe, Fox Loop spot, was also dark during the week while alterations were being made.

Estimated takings:

"HELL'S ISLAND" (Col.)
CASTLE—(300), 60c, 2nd week. Other attractions: Univ. newsreel, "Bride of the Regiment" (F. N.) replaced. Gross: $3,800. Rating: 125%.

Shucks!

"Sure we missed it—right before your eyes don't it say it was LAST WEEK?"
—Life.

Novarro's "Call Of Flesh" Hits High, $14,550

Portland, Ore.—With the second week of "Greater Talkie Season," key houses enjoyed good mid-summer business. Continued warm weather drew considerable matinee business to the beaches, but with modern refrigeration the first runs got their share of evening business. Increased lines at the Fox Broadway for the minimum price of 25c prior to 1 P. M. were in daily evidence enabling this house again to top the grosses with $14,550, rating 135%, proving the popularity of Novarro in "Call of the Flesh."

However, Columbia's "Rain or Shine" at the RKO Orpheum brought out increased patronage, who went in on the laugh wave with a gross of $14,000, rating 131%.

Estimated takings:

Balto Business Bad; "Jubilee" Helps Warners

Baltimore.—With cool and temperate weather all during the week, only one first-run house came out with a high rating. That was Warners' Metropolitan, where they are celebrating Warners' "Silver Jubilee"; attraction here was "Three Faces East." This caught on with the public and, whereas the house has been running low, estimated gross for the week was $7,500, rating 125%. Six hundred cases of Coco-Cola were given away free to patrons and a set of Rogers Silverware on Friday night when winning ticket was selected.

Loew's Century did not fare so well during the first week, without stage show, orchestra and organist. Greta Garbo, in "Romance," started with crowds. Looked like a tremendous week, but during last days business dropped heavily. Picture appeared over the heads of most, although Greta appealed. Gross estimated at $22,000, giving a 104% rating, but gross was probably lower.

The New theatre picked up considerably with Edmund Lowe in "Born Reckless," as the character name of Louis Beretti was billed large and many have read the story. Gross was estimated at $8,500, while the rating was 85%.

"Queen High," "The Sap From Syracuse" and "Sweet Mama" only did average business. Weather, temperate throughout week with cloudy and clear atmosphere coming and going.

Estimated takings:

Giant Expanding Picture Name of New Wide Film

London—M. Pilgrim, projectionist at the Regal, has demonstrated a new wide-film device which he has invented. The process, dubbed "Giant Expanding Pictures," is claimed to give a 300 per cent increase per square foot of screen without damage to the focal image and can be fitted to any make of projector, at low cost, it is said.

Vets Convention Boosts "Quiet" Take to $26,000

Philadelphia—Spanish American War veterans convention helped the musical jingle at box offices, with a war film, "All Quiet on the Western Front," getting the biggest play. Stanley, where this film is playing, grossed $26,000 for a rating of 145%.

Fox crashed through with another $34,000 for the second week of "Common Clay," holding up its rating to 140%. It is being held for a third week. "Big House" jumped to $14,000 for its fifth week, a jump of $2,000 over last week. It seems to be assured at least two more weeks.

With Bernice Claire making a personal appearance, the Mastbaum shared in the increase of business by grossing $42,000, $2,000 over summer normal. Besides the veterans' convention, the weather break helped the grosses, last week being the coolest in two months.

Estimated takings:

"TOP SPEED" (First National)

MASTBAUM—(4,800), 35c-50c-75c, 6 days. Other attractions: Bernice Claire in personal appearance; stage show, "The Rhythm Hotel," with Charles Kaley as m. c. and Freddie Crump, negro drummer, Joseph Jones, songster, Foster Girls among entertainers; Milton Charles, singing organist, also featured; newsreel. Gross: $42,000. Rating: 105%.

"COMMON CLAY" (Fox)

FOX—(3,000), 40c-50c-75c, 6 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Fancho and Marco stage show, "Eyes Idea," with Don Carroll, six Candrova Brothers, Billy M. Greene, Paul Olsen, Bob and Eula Buroffs; Movietone news. Gross: $34,000. Rating: 140%.

"ALL QUIET ON WESTERN FRONT" (Universal)

STANLEY—(3,700), 35c-50c-75c, 6 days. Other attractions: News, Vitaphone Variety. Gross: $26,000. Rating: 145%.

"BIG BOY" (Warners)

BOYD—(2,400), 35c-50c-75c, 2 days. Other attractions: Vitaphone Variety, M-G-M news. Gross: $8,000. Rating: 135%. (Last four days of "Raffles." Gross: $11,000. Rating: 90%.

"DANCING SWEETIES" (First National)

EARLE—(2,000), 25c-65c, 6 days. Other attractions: Universal news; stage show, "Fashions," with Jay Mills, Montrose and Reynolds, Jimmy Ray, Paul Remos and His Midgets, Four Co-eds, Littlefield Dancers. Gross: $19,500. Rating: 105%.

"BIG HOUSE" (M-G-M)

STANTON—(1,700), 25c-65c, 6 days, fifth week. Other attractions: M-G-M news, Vitaphone Variety. Gross: $14,000. Rating: 140%.

"SWEET MAMA" (First National)

KARLTON—(1,000), 40c-50c. Other attractions: News, "With Pinchot in the South Seas" (novelty four-reel film). Gross: $4,000. Rating: 80%.

"U" Signs Drew

Hollywood—Roland Drew has been signed by Universal for "The Lady Surrenders," which John Stahl is directing. Conrad Nagel and Genevieve Tobin have the leads in the production.

Osserman at Milwaukee

Milwaukee—J. C. Osserman has been transferred from St. Louis to manage the Columbia branch here.

Shills at "Cincy"

Cincinnati—A stunt new to Cincinnati has been inaugurated by R-K-O, which had placed barkers outside their houses, who, in a soft, well-modulated voice, announce name of features, starting time of next show, where choice seats are available, etc. No direct solicitation for business is made by the young men who are attired in uniforms resembling those of a major-general in the regular army.

Discord

Hollywood—An actor who played in a number of filmusicals spent his vacation in a small California town that had a theatre of about 500 seats. As one of his pictures was being shown at the theatre while he was there, he decided to attend. He did so and was surprised to find that during the showing two reels were completely left out. After the show he asked the manager what happened. Had the projector gone wrong or what?

The manager replied that musicals were not to the liking of the audience and it was only by running them off in a short time could he hold the audience interest.

The actor is now gravely wondering as to what his future will be. He thinks perhaps short subjects would be the best bet.

Oakie Follows Garbo in Close Race at Seattle

Seattle—The Fox Fifth Avenue, with Greta Garbo's "Romance" as the attraction, was high gross-getter for the week. The take was almost $16,000, rating 110%. Second in the running was Jack Oakie at the Paramount, where "Sap from Syracuse" got $12,500, or a rating of 105%.

"Caught Short," at Fox's Coliseum, on the second week of an extended run policy, was well over the 100% mark, after a first week of 150%. The picture originally played the Fifth Avenue a few weeks ago and rated close to 150% there also. Weather for the week was hot.

Estimated takings:

"CAUGHT SHORT" (M-G-M)
(Extended run, 2nd week)

COLISEUM—(1,600), 15c-25c-35c, 7 days. Other attractions: Fox Movietone news, Mack Sennett comedy, organ, vocal novelties. Gross: $3,500. Rating: 115%.

"SINS OF THE CHILDREN" (M-G-M)

FOX—(2,450), 25c-35c-50c-60c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Mickey Mouse comedy, Fox Movietone news, Owen Sweeten and Fox band. Gross: $6,000. Rating: 60%.

"ROMANCE" (M-G-M)

FOX FIFTH AVENUE—(2,750), 25c-35c-50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Fanchon-Marco stage revue, Fox Movietone news, style reel. Gross: $15,900. Rating: 110%.

"ONE ROMANTIC NIGHT" (U. A.)

METROPOLITAN—(1,100), 25c-35c-50c, 7 days. Other attractions: Paramount news, Paramount comedy, Terry-toon cartoon comedy. Gross: $5,500. Rating: 95%.

"SAP FROM SYRACUSE" (Paramount)

PARAMOUNT—(3,150), 25c-35c-50c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions: Paramount news, Arthur Clausen and orchestra, Stanleigh Malotte at organ, Publix stage revue with Paul Spor and band. Gross: $12,500. Rating: 105%.

Starting Outdoor Sept. 1

Hollywood—Paramount's outdoor drama, "Fighting Caravans," which is expected to cost more than $1,000,000 and compete with Fox's "The Big Trail" and RKO's "Cimarron," will go into production Sept. 1. Gary Cooper has the starring role, with Mary Brian opposite. Otto Brower will direct.

Circus on Sunday Illegal

St. Louis—Operation of a circus on Sunday is prohibited under state laws, it is stated in an opinion prepared by the assistant attorney general.

"Blankley's" Bad Showing Results In Substitution

Omaha—Good shows brought good crowds last week, with one exception. Barrymore's "Man from Blankey's" was jerked from the State after the first day of a scheduled three-day run. Reviewers tore the picture to pieces.

William Powell came through in great shape to bring the World $11,885 with "For the Defense." That's another 125% week for the house. "Sins of the Children" surprised with 125% for the last half at the State, getting $2,812.50.

Orpheum continued its stride with "Rain or Shine" and Babe Egan's Red Heads on the stage with an RKO all-girl unit. Total for the seven days was $18,125, or 125%. "Anybody's War" at the Paramount did 110% for a gross of $8,800. Weather, clear and warm.

Estimated takings:

"FOR THE DEFENSE" (Paramount)

WORLD—(2,500), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions: Vaudeville headed by Ray Hughes and Pam, Billy Meyers' band, house ballet, Paramount news, shorts. Gross: $11,885. Rating: 125%.

"ANYBODY'S WAR" (Paramount)

PARAMOUNT—(2,900), 25c-50c, 7 days. Other attractions: "Robert Hudson," organ, Paramount news. Gross: $8,800. Rating: 110%.

"RAIN OR SHINE" (Columbia)

ORPHEUM—(3,000), 25c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions: All-girl show with Babe Egan's band, Pathe news and shorts. Gross: $18,125. Rating: 125%.

"MAN FROM BLANKLEY'S" (W. B.) (1 day) AND "HUNTING TIGERS IN INDIA" (Epic Pictures)

STATE—(1,200), 25c-40c, 3 days. Other attractions: Universal news, shorts. Gross: $1,575. Rating: 75%.

"SINS OF THE CHILDREN" (M-G-M)

STATE—(1,200), 25c-40c, 4 days. Other attractions: Universal news, shorts. Gross: $2,812.50. Rating: 125%.

Fay's Reopens Sept. 15

Rochester—Date for the reopening of Fay's Theatre, closed for several months as the aftermath of a disastrous fire, has been set for Sept. 15 by Chester Fenyvessy, spokesman for the owners.

The theatre still has 14 years to run on its lease with the Rochester Playhouse Company, of which Frank L. Walker is president and Edward M. Fay of Providence, R. I., operator of the theatre is a director. Arch McCallum is expected to return as manager.

Fort Wayne House Ready Soon

Ft. Wayne, Ind.—The new Paramount-Publix theatre, now under construction, probably will be ready for operation about the middle of September, according to the management. Workmen now are busy on the interior work and installing various features.

Double-Crossed?

London—British distributors have not as yet recovered from the shock of the new tax law which levies 10 per cent on all U. K. importations into New Zealand. Although some are consoled with the 25% tax against American films, they believe certain New Zealand authorities pulled a boner in taxing product from the mother country.

THE

By John F. Rider

NOW that we have completed the elementary treatment of the two popular forms of generating potential and have considered at short length the items of magnetism and the effects of current flow through wire, it is possible to consider the properties of certain devices and arrangements.

We have in the past mentioned that certain substances are good conductors of electric current and other substances are poor conductors. The latter classification is also known as insulators. Yet we cannot fail to note a very peculiar phenomenon when some of these non-conductors or insulators are used in a certain manner.

Suppose that we wish to note the electrical reaction to a piece of paper and arrange this small sheet of dry paper between two metal plates. These metal plates are connected to a battery through an indicating device which will register the presence and magnitude of current flow and a switch for opening or closing the battery circuit. Such an arrangement is shown in Figure 47. M is the meter, S is the switch and B is the battery. We show a great enlargement of the paper and the metal plates, but we wish to make special reference to the fact that the two metal plates are in contact with the paper, one on each side and further, that the two plates are not in metallic contact with each other.

If we observe closely we note that when the switch S remains open, having never been closed in the circuit, the meter pointer indicates zero. However, when the switch is closed, the meter needle deflects momentarily, kicking "up" rapidly and then gradually decreases until it is again zero, although the switch S is still closed as it was when the first large deflection occurred. What has happened? If this meter is a current indicating device, the momentary deflection indicates a momentary flow of charges in the circuit when the switch was first closed. For a short period subsequent to the closing of the switch decreasing values of moving charges were registered. After a while, motion of charges in that circuit ceased and the current meter registered zero. Such is, of course, the explanation for the action of the meter, based upon the law that electric current is in charge in motion. The answer, however, does not explain why such a transient state should exist.

Another puzzling question is the momentary current flow through the circuit when the circuit is not a complete metallic link. How can current flow through the system when the two metal plates are separated by paper and paper is a non-conductor? The only possible answer is that the current flows only through the external circuit. Let us see.

If we assume a certain difference of potential between the points A and C of the battery B, and further assume that A is — and C is +, then all points in contact with these ends of the battery will have like polarity. When the switch is closed, the plate 2 is connected to the battery terminal C and is positive with respect to plate 1, which is connected to the negative end of battery B. At the same time, the paper located between these two plates is subject to an electric strain since it is within an electric field, the charges upon the plates 1 and 2. Now, when the voltage is applied to plate 2 by closing switch S, there is created an electrostatic field between plates 1 and 2 and because of the maximum difference of potential between these two plates, there takes place a sudden flow of electrons from the negative plate to the positive plate through the external circuit. This flow occurs in order to make the potential of the plates the same as that of the battery.

This means that the reason for the flow is the difference between the potential across the plates and the potential across the battery. This is maximum at the instant that the swich S is closed, hence the maximum flow of charges. As the flow of charges takes place, the potential across the plates increases and the difference in forces which causes the flow of charges gradually diminishes, and the flow of charges diminishes. After a short period sufficient charges have moved from the negative plate to the positive plate to adjust the potential of the two plates to that of the battery. Since there is no longer any difference in the potential between the two plates and the potential across the two battery terminals, there occurs no further motion o fcharges through the external circuit and the current meter again indicates zero. Thus, the current flow in the circuit, or the flow of charges in the external circuit, occurs in order to adjust the potential between the plates to that of the battery. Hence the sudden current indication when the switch is first closed and the gradually receding value of current until it becomes zero.

During this time, the electrons in the paper are under an influence. While the charges have been deposited upon the plates by virtue of the applied potential and the potential created across the condenser plates, the electrons within the paper have been displaced. This action is in contrast to that taking place in the external circuit. Whereas there is a flow of electrons or a drift of electrons in the external circuit, the electronic activity within the paper insulation between the plates or the dielectric is not a flow of electrons. Were the constituency of the paper such that the atoms would under normal circumstances part with an electron, the paper would be a conductor rather than a non-conductor. In non-conductors the electronic affinity is so great that only displacement of the electron is possible and the electron moves away from the atom, but does not leave it entirely and travel to another atom. This motion of the electron likewise influences the charges upon the plates and we have two forms of currents. The conduction current in the external circuit and the displacement current within the dielectric.

After sufficient time has elapsed, the charges have been so distributed upon the plates that no further conduction current or displacement current will flow. The battery may now be removed without disturbing the charges upon the respective plates, or without disturbing the positions of the electrons displaced in the dielectric. Such a structure consisting of two or more active surfaces and an insulating medium or a dielectric is now said to be charged with a certain quantity of electricity. During this state of charge, there is a surplus of electrons upon one of the plates and a dearth of electrons upon the other plate.

Now, if we consider the action taking place in the circuit when a voltage is applied to such a device, we can say that electricity is being stored within the device. Such is actually the case because the application of the voltage to the device resulted in a flow of charges from one plate to the other, which remain in that position until disturbed. If we remove the battery which has charged the structure and connect the two plates with a wire so as to allow the flow of electrons from plate 2 to plate 1 until both again bear equal charges, the structure is being discharged and the current flowing through the conductor is the discharge current. Such a device is known as a condenser, or we might say that the name condenser is given to such a structure of plates because a condensing action upon the charge appears to take place.

The above does not mean that a condenser must consist of two metal plates separated by paper. The insulating or separating medium may be air, just as well as paper, and the action will be the same. The displacement of electrons will take place in the atoms of air located between the two plates, and the conduction current in the external circuit will flow as readily when air is the dielectric as when some solid material separates the two plates.

two plates separated by linen paper. These plates are of tin foil or aluminum foil and are many feet in length. The dielectric material is likewise many feet in length and the complete unit is coiled.

Referring once again to the effect when the voltage is applied, we recognize the flow of conduction current until the potential across the plates of the condenser equals the value of the applied voltage. Any reduction in voltage applied after the condenser has been charged at a higher voltage will result in a new flow of charges until the new state of equilibrium is reached. Thus, the application of a varying voltage will cause a varying charging current. If the applied voltage varies between maximum and zero, the charging current will likewise vary between maximum and zero. This is an important item and should be remembered.

During this variation of applied voltage there is a continued variation in the displacement of the electrons within the dielectric.

A variation in charging current can also be created in another manner. If two plates, say 1 and 2 in Figure 47, are a certain distance apart, they can be charged within a certain period of time. When charged, the meter M will indicate zero current. Let us say that the difference of potential when charged is 20 volts. If we now reduce the separation between the two plates the positive potential upon plate 2 is reduced by means of induction from the negative potential upon plate 1. Simultaneously, the negative potential upon plate 1 will also be reduced. This state means that the difference of potential between the plates 1 and 2 is made lower than that of the voltage applied. This, in turn, means that a motion of charges will again take place between the plates through the external circuit and a new displacement of electrons will take place within the dielectric until the plates again bear the potential difference of the battery. The charges upon the plates now are much greater than when they were separate a greater distance.

Capacity. There is a constant relation between the charge of a condenser and the difference of potential between its plates. This is evident in the last paragraph. Assuming any one set of plates, being charged by a battery, the difference of potential between those two plates when charged will be the same irrespective of the separation between the two plates or the medium used to separate the plates. On the other hand, the charge of the condenser depends upon the difference of potential no matter what the separation between the plates or the nature of the dielectric. If the separation is reduced and the difference of potential remains the same, the charge is increased. Hence, there must be a factor which is allied with the condenser, its charge and the difference of potential or the voltage. This relation of charge Q to potential difference V is called the capacity C of the condenser. In other words, the relation between the charge and the voltage produces the factor representative of the physical makeup of the condenser. Such is illustrated by the example about the variation in the distance between the plates. The relation between C, Q and V is

$$C = \frac{Q}{V} \quad \ldots\ldots (49)$$

$$V = \frac{Q}{C} \quad \ldots\ldots (50)$$

The charge, or the quantity of electricity stored in a condenser is, with a constant physical makeup (or capacity expressed in another manner, to be mentioned soon) directly proportional to the voltage. If the voltage is doubled the charge is double. On the other hand, if the voltage is constant, the charge is directly proportional to the capacity. This relation is shown in equation 48.

The capacity C varies inversely with the voltage when the charge is constant and is proportional to the charge when the voltage is constant. The voltage (see equation 50) is inversely proportional to the capacity when the charge is constant and proportional to the charge when the capacity is constant.

We know that the charge is applied to a condenser when a current flows in the external circuit. This current depends upon the voltage and the makeup of the condenser. If we determine the magnitude of current flow for any one combination of voltage and condenser we can determine the quantity of electricity stored. From previous explanations a current flow of 1 ampere for a second represents 1 coulomb of electricity. If we have a voltage of 1 volt and with any one condenser, this value of voltage causes a flow of 1 ampere per second, the physical makeup of that condenser is such that its capacity for storing electricity is 1 farad. Expressed in another manner, if 1 ampere per second (1 coulomb) is required to raise the potential across the plates of a condenser by 1 volt, that condenser has a capacity of 1 farad. Hence equation 48 can be rewritten as

Q (coulombs) = Capacity in farads x volts

and the capacity of a condenser in farads is the equivalent of a number of coulombs within the condenser per volt difference of potential between its plates. If a condenser stores two coulombs of electricity for each unit volt difference of potential between its plates, the capacity of that condenser in farads is

$$C = \frac{Q}{V} = \frac{2}{1} = 2 \text{ farads.}$$

The unit farad is too large for practical use. The design of the condensers generally in use is such that decimal values of the unit must be employed. These decimals are

$$\text{micromicrofarad} = \frac{1 \text{ farad}}{1{,}000{,}000{,}000{,}000}$$

$$\text{and the microfarad} = \frac{1 \text{ farad}}{1{,}000{,}000} = .000001 \text{ farad}$$

General values used in sound equipment vary from about 50 micromicrofarads to about 5,000 microfarads and it is customary to convert all values into fractions or multiple of a microfarads, thus

50 micromicrofarads = .00005 microfarad

Some other common values are

1,000 micromicrofarads=	.001 microfarad=	.001 mfd.
2,000 micromicrofarads=	.002 microfarad=	.002 mfd.
10,000 micromicrofarads=	.01 microfarad=	.01 mfd.
250,000 micromicrofarads=	.25 microfarad=	.25 mfd.
500,000 micromicrofarads=	.5 microfarad=	.5 mfd.
1,000,000 micromicrofarads=	1. microfarad=	1. mfd.

The letters mfd designate microfarad and the letters mmfd designate micromicrofarad. In cases the Greek letter μ is used to denote micro or millionth part.

Factors Controlling Capacity.—There are several factors which influence the capacity of a condenser. These are three in number, namely

1.—Area of the plates
2.—Separation between the plates
3.—Character of the dielectric material

(The first, area of the plates, is the equivalent to the number of plates, since any increase in number increases the area of the active surfaces.)

As is evident, all of these factors are governed by the physical design of the condenser. An increase in the area or the number of plates with a uniform separation increases the capacity of a condenser. One cannot say that capacity increases with number of plates or area because an increase in the separation between the plates of a large number of plates may result in a value of capacity less than that of fewer plates with reduced separation.

A decrease in the separation between plates or uniform area or of any one number of plates increases the capacity of the condenser and conversely an increase in the separation between plates decreases the capacity.

All of the above must be considered in connection with the dielectric material. The presence of a dielectric other than air will always increase the capacity. The dielectric constant of air is classed as unity or 1 and all other materials are compared with air. As it happens, condensers used in sound systems are generally of one character with three possible types of dielectrics. These are

2.—Linen paper.
3.—An oxide film.

By character, we mean that the capacity is fixed at the time of manufacture by rigid assembly of the elements, hence such condensers are known as fixed condensers. More practical information will follow at the end of this lesson.

The Dielectric Constant.—The change in capacity when a solid dielectric is used instead of air varies as a constant K, according to the character of the dielectric material. Hence the expression to denote the constant K for any material is where C_k is the capacity of the condenser with the solid dielectric and C_x is the capacity of the condenser with air as the dielectric. Thus, if we had a condenser consisting of two plates separated .125 inch with air dielectric and the capacity was measured and found to be .0001 mfd and a piece of mica was inserted to fill the same space between the plates and the capacity was found to be .0006 mfd, the ratio

$$\frac{C_k}{C_x} = \frac{.0006}{.0001}$$

As a point of information, the dielectric constant for dry linen paper varies between 2 and 2.5; for mica between 5 and 7, and for some films of oxide it may be as high as several hundred.

Even gangsters make mistakes in their identifications of the people marked for "the spot." At least the gangster in the Vitaphone variety, "My Mistake," is guilty of such a faux pas when he almost gives "the woiks" to Donald Brian, who is the mistaken victim. Pat O'Brien is the gunman, with Arthur Hurley directing.

No sooner had the miniature golf course opposite the eastern Vitaphone studio been completed than Murray Roth took possession in the name of Bigger and Better Shorts and, of course, Warner Bros., and made a comedy entitled "Tom Thumbs Down" with a cast including Harry McNaughton, Bobby Jarvis and Sue Conroy. Stanley Rauh wrote the story.

What is the Brooklyn Vitaphone studio to Burnet Hershey? It's his Utopia, you dope, ya. Some rhyme, eh? Here's why. Burnet, who has been a benedict for only a month, has already done what thousands of his comrades have dreamed about but never could do. He brought his wife, the former Adele Allerhand, to the studio and got her a job in one of the shorts. Director Roy Mack says she shows great promise.

We were over at the Paramount short subject department chinnin' an' chattin' with Walton Butterfield and Howard Bretherton when we learned that ice cream was in order down on the main set where Norman Taurog was directing "Manhattan Mary." We got down there faster than you could say Mort Blumenstock and found that the folks had liked the ice cream. Larry Williams was the last to have any, but upon spying us, hastily disposed of his share so that our only alternative was to go outside and buy some. We didn't have any ice cream.

Rube Welch has got his work cut out for him. Having just finished originals for Ben Blue, Marion Harris, Frances Williams and Gina Mallo, he is now at work on a story for Harry Richman and another for Frances Shelley. Rube says he's losing weight, but he likes it.

The folks working on "The Best People" sat under Fred Newmeyer's direction are becoming veritable night hawks. About half the picture has been shot long after the birds, bees, flowers, little children and ye studio sleuth has gone to rest.

New York Plans Screens in Front Of Billboard Ads

Albany—Erection of screens on state property in front of billboards constructed on privately-owned land in the vicinity of the new Hudson river bridge at New York will be ordered by the state superintendent of public works, Col. Fred S. Greene, who charges that billboards spoil the natural beauty.

Col. Greene has long been an advocate of billboard taxation, two bills having been introduced by him at recent legislative sessions. Both were killed.

RKO Opening Twin Toledo Theatres on Saturday

Toledo—Two addition to RKO's string will be made on Saturday with the opening of new houses here, located side by side in the downtown section. The Rivoli seating 2,700 will have a vaude-picture policy, while the Palace, a 1,400 seater, will show pictures only.

Another point of interest in connection with the dielectric material is its ability to withstand electric strain. The action of the voltage applied across the plates causes a displacement of the electrons, the tension between the displaced electrons and the associated atoms being governed by the voltage applied. If the voltage is too great for the dielectric material, the electron is freed from the atom and conduction current flows through the dielectric, rendering the complete unit unfit for further use. Such action is the equivalent of a rupture of the dielectric. The dielectric material has been punctured.

As a rule, mica, as a dielectric, allows the application of higher potentials than are possible with paper dielectric units. Once again many other factors enter upon the scene. Be that as it may, the fact remains that condensers as a rule are designed to withstand certain definite potentials and are so rated. In other words, a condenser unit bears two ratings, possibly three. First, the capacity in microfarads or fractions thereof. Second, the operating voltage at D.C. potentials and in some cases the operating voltage at A.C. potentials.

The usual symbol for a capacity consists of two parallel vertical or two parallel horizontal lines as shown in Figures 49A and B. The horizontal lines in 49A indicate the connections thereto and the same applies to the vertical lines in Figure 49B. The significance of the unit is not changed by the alignment of the lines which indicate that it is a capacity. When the unit is variable in character an arrow crosses the elemental line as in Figures 49C and D.

Further details relative to the action of charging, discharging and the utility of condensers will be discussed in Lesson 15.

High and Low On Music Row

FRANK GOODMAN, president of Universal Publishing Co., has returned from Yurrup where he succeeded in gaining handsome fees for the British rights to his catalogue from Campbell-Connelly and for the Central Europe rights from Francis Salabert. Goodman also told us that "Melancholy," which was one of the recent hits on this side of the Atlantice, is now sweeping England.

Frank Kelton, formerly with Robbins, has accepted the general managership of Davis, Coots & Engel, and Harry Engel can be credited with making a smart move in appointing Frank, who is one of the most popular executives in the music business, to that post. Harold Lee, formerly manager of Witmark's Chicago office, has been made sales and exploitation manager of Davis, Coots & Engel.

This firm has a potential trio of hits in "I Still Get a Thrill," written by Benny Davis and Fred Coots, "Good Evenin'," by Al Hoffman, Tot Seymour and Charlie O'Flynn, and "In My Heart It's You," by Max Rich, Al Hoffman and Charlie O'Flynn.

Remick will publish "Maybe It's Love," theme song of the Warner college picture of the same name. Sidney Mitchell, Archie Gottler and Geo. W. Meyer are the writers. "June Kisses" and "I'm Needin' You" are beginning to cause some activity among the stock clerks while a new modern arrangement of that old favorite, "Japanese Sandman," is proving popular with the boys wielding the batons.

Harold Spina, formerly with Harms, is now harmony man for Universal Publishing Co. and will also act as the right hand man to Paul Jonas, professional manager. We're here to say that Harold is an asset since he can do anything in the music business.

With "I Remember You from Somewhere" already successfully launched into the present list of money makers, Danny Winkler, general manager for DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, has ordered a concentrated effort on "Don't Tell Her What's Happened to Me," a new torch number, written by DeSylva, Brown & Henderson. Al Salomon, of the special service department, says, "My files will prove the fact that organists are finding favor everywhere and are being rehired."

Denton & Haskins have what they believe to be another "Stein Song" in "Bartender Bill," written by Bill McKenna, writer of "Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" and "Down in the Old Neighborhood," where, no doubt, the much sought-after Kelly was found.

L. B. Curtis Publishing Co. has just started work on a new song, "When I'm Away from You," a pretty ballad written by Sunny Clapp, writer of "Girl of My Dreams."

We knew it would happen sooner or later. Leo Diston, Mitchel Paris and Frank Perkins have "putt" their heads together and have "ironed" out a song called "I've Gone Goofy Over Miniature Golf," which is "driving" the comedians nerts trying to pronounce miniature. Mills Music Co. is the publisher.

Opinions on Pictures

Madame Satan

(M-G-M)

Very Movie-Like; "Oke" as B.O.

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

PICTURE fans have learned to expect a Cecil B. De Mille outburst periodically. Here it is. "Madame Satan" is the satisfactory title hung upon his latest. It has already been previewed twice in different sections. Both times the audience reaction has been favorable, with reservations.

When the picture is finally released it will be a feature-run offering which should gross good busines. It has all the regular De Mille adjuncts—splendor, daring, spectacular effects and modernity.

But "Madame Satan" has one thing few of De Mille's former pictures have had—a rip-snorting comedy vein which relieves many tense situations. In this connection Roland Young blossoms forth. He proves a riotous comedian in the droll part of "best friend" to Reginald Denny. Young captures the major portion of acting honors with his clever and natural execution of an excellent part. He provides enough laughs to save the picture from flopping in many weak spots.

De Mille, with the help of Jeannie MacPherson, who wrote the story, dragged the same old plot, dear to his heart these many, many years, from the shelf and dressed it up in 1930 clothes. Kay Johnson is the conscientious loving wife who finds that her husband is stepping out with a show girl who supplies the things his wife neglects. Miss Johnson is wholly acceptable in the part while Denny does a husband role satisfactorily enough.

Getting through the opening scenes of the husband and friend coming home soused, the fight between wife and husband, the split of the family and the battle between wife and show girl, the story gets to the point where Kay declares that "if he wants 'em hot she'll show him some real heat." This she proceeds to do —more or less.

One of the highlights has Young staging a mammoth masquerade party aboard his dirigible moored at a tall mast. Here is where the spectacular effects come in. Some really fine ballets are offered with the interior of the Zep as a setting. An electric dance in which the characters simulate everything from sparkplugs to lightning bolts proves unique, although slightly impossible. Of course, all these dances mean nothing to the plot except to add the De Millian touch of grandeur.

The "struggle" scene comes after "Madame Satan," having successfully charmed Denny from the actress with a display of human fireworks which intend to convey how hot she really is, unmasks and reveals herself as the "forgotten wife. Denny is astounded, but contrite. He is charmed but annoyed and falls into his mate's arms joyously. It's all very nice, but just then a storm strikes and lightning, presumably by way of censure of the dirigible's merrymakers, tears the balloon from its moorings. The controls are shattered and the Zep tosses madly among the clouds.

The ship's captain orders all aboard to don parachutes while Abe Lyman's band, looking sadly as the others jump overboard and float toward the ground, plays lively tunes.

The parachute jumping business gives the audience a real thrill. Passengers who balk at taking the leap are bodily heaved overboard. In this sudden situation, where both face almost certain death, the man and wife realize their true love for each other.

Then it develops but one parachute remains. The wife begs and pleads to stay with her husband but he flings her overboard. The ship breaks up and he dives overboard. Wife screams and covers her eyes.

And, believe it or not, he lands in a perfect swan dive in the city reservoir and suffers only an injured shoulder. At least that's what the final scenes would have us believe as they sit at home cooing in their love revival while the old friend, slightly battered, comes to call. Lillian Roth is a quite satisfactory siren. Tyler Brooke is also noticed by the audience as a woman-crazy member of the dancing party aboard the Zep.

All you need with it will be a news reel.

Viennese Nights

(Warners)

An Artistic Operetta

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

HERE is where a musical steps right up and takes a bow. This picture may not hit everybody, but it is surely worth a lot of plugging as something both unusual and worth while, because Sigmund Romberg and Oscar Hammerstein have made a splendid job of their initial effort to say it with songs, and also orchestral music. If your audiences are getting tired of just plain talk, and are all against the ordinary jazz level of pictures, they should go for this.

Romberg knows his waltzes, and he has put some excellent and haunting numbers into this pathetic love story of a composer and a girl with an overambitious father. Viennese atmosphere supplies abundant quality in the production, and the music is staged with movement and a lot of really natural action. For those who like color photography, there is an additional appeal. The entire film is shot in this medium.

The plot has some bad points. There are middle sequences where the scenes become very sketchy in trying to bridge a long period of years. Bringing the story down two generations, and skipping one of them entirely, is a little confusing, but the beginning and the ending of the picture help to redeem this defect. The entire procedure is not unlike "Maytime," which those who saw that stage show will appreciate. There is plenty of sympathy to the idea of "Viennese Nights" for much the same reasons as in the once very popular theatrical production.

The comedy is very well balanced and is competently put over by Bert Roach, especially, and by Louise Fazenda. The names of these two may well be played up. The singing roles are presented by Alexander Gray and Vivienne Segal, both of whom far surpass any of their previous efforts. Jean Hersholt is a figure in the cast as the heroine's father, and Walter Pidgeon enacts the hero's rival. Alice Day is the girl of the happy modern romance that closes the film.

The big musical feature of particular appeal to the audiences who are interested in more serious endeavors along this line is the symphonic poem played by a full orchestra at a concert toward the end of the film. This is a remarkable novelty of its kind. The orchestration is a big step forward.

The songs in "Viennese Nights" include most importantly the theme number, "I Bring a Love Song" and "You Will Remember Vienna." The others include "Here We Are" (cafe selection), "Good Bye, My Love," "When You Have No Man to Love" (comedy number done by Miss Fazenda), "Ja, Ja, Ja" and "I'm Lonely."

Two light comedies without music should run with this to help balance the program.

Animal Crackers

(Paramount)

Fast Comedy

"ANIMAL CRACKERS" is a good photograph of the stage comedy of the same name. In total, it is film vaudeville headlining the Marx Brothers, with the thin thread of plot serving little more than to string the antics of the brothers into a connected whole.

Their nonsense, rightly, makes up the picture. Most of their comedy is comprised of fast patter, but the bulk of it is obvious enough to be caught and appreciated by any audience. It is foolery of the ludicrous variety, occasionally veering to the shady. Laughs were frequent and hearty at the theatre where the picture was caught.

The plot, such as it is, has to do with the replacement of a valuable painting by two imitations and the subsequent efforts to trace the authentic one. Groucho Marx is an African hunter, returned from an expedition. With his secretary, Zeppo, he is a guest at the estate of Margaret Dumont, where Louis Sorin, as a wealthy art connoisseur, is to exhibit the authentic painting. Lillian Roth, daughter of the hostess, is in love with an ambitious young artist, who has made a copy of Sorin's original while a student in Paris. Seeking to prove his own ability by substituting his work for the authentic one, it is arranged that Harpo and Chico Marx, hired entertainers, exchange the pictures.

Another guest, however, whose daughter has also painted a copy of the same picture, replaces the second one with her daughter's work. The substitution is discovered and the hunt for the authentic picture eventually leads to Harpo, who is exposed as a "collector," not only of pictures, but of silverware as well. He escapes arrest by spraying the entire house party with a sleep-inducing liquid, but is about to depart, eyes the prostrate form of a girl who has enchanted him, whereupon he lies down beside her and sprays himself with the liquid.

The essence of the picture, of course, is not in the plot. Its entertainment is in the wise-cracking patter of the Marx Brothers and their occasional musical stunts. It is foolishness of a high order, as such nonsense goes, and there can be no doubt of its entertainment merits. In the larger centers the Marx Brothers' name should be sufficient to sell the picture. In the provinces it can be sold as straight comedy of the sure-fire laugh variety.

Photography and recording are excellent. The supporting cast, which serves as little more than a background for the fun and puns of the Marxes, is satisfactory.

Newsreels and musical shorts will complete a fine program.

The Spoilers

(Paramount)

Fine Entertainment

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

"THE SPOILERS" in audible form is great entertainment. It has plenty of drama, humor and action and those who liked the silent versions of this tale of the Alaskan gold rush will enjoy the talker version more so since sound adds greatly to its values.

With Gary Cooper in the leading role and with a supporting cast of Kay Johnson, William (stage) Boyd, Betty Compson, James Kirkwood, Harry Green and Slim Summerville, the picture should reap heavy grosses in the week run houses and subsequent bookings. This talker, made from the Rex Beach story, has all the necessary requisites for a record breaker and should do fine business.

The fight which made the initial version of "The Spoilers" memorable on the screen is done as well as, or better than before. Aided by sound, it is a real thriller. Cooper does perhaps the finest work of his career under the experienced direction of Edwin Carewe. The strong, silent man from Montana carries the role of Roy Glenister in dynamic manner.

The story deals with the gold rush to Alaska in 1900. Cooper and Kirkwood are returning from the States to Alaska when they rescue Kay Johnson from a group of sailors and give her their stateroom on the ship, which is crowded with gold-seekers. Cooper, unused to a girl of such refinement, falls in love with her. Upon arriving at Nome, he finds the U. S. government has taken over the handling of claims. The U. S. Judge, Lloyd Ingraham, he discovers, is the uncle of Miss Johnson while William Boyd is the Federal agent, and a rival suitor. Cooper, who is a leader of the miners, is at first aroused at the attitude taken by Boyd, but Kay convinces him that the government should handle the legality of the claims and Cooper decides to let them do so without interruption from his men. However, when his claim is taken over and operated by Boyd, he is ready to fight.

Betty Compson, as a faro dealer and former sweetheart of Cooper, tells him that Kay is on the side of the Federal men and that they plan to rob him and his men of their takings. Cooper then decides to take things in his own hands. He and his men rob the sluice boxes to get money to send a lawyer to the States to fight their case.

As the miners are about ready to rob the bank of the money taken from them by Boyd, the soldiers from a nearby fort appear and quell the riot. Cooper then plans to take over his claim by force. Boyd, anxious to get rid of Cooper, plans to dynamite the soldier-filled barracks and blame Cooper. The soldiers are warned of this plot by Miss Johnson at the risk of her life, and are saved.

Cooper, finding out that Boyd planned what was almost a wholesale murder, goes after him. They meet in Boyd's office and there the fight takes place. It starts in the upstairs office and ends in the street below after a rough and tumble battle down a long flight of stairs. This knockdown dragout affair has had few if any equalls in the talkers and rarely has been equalled in silent pictures. Every second is thrilling and convincing.

Cooper emerges the victor just as the lawyer sent to the States returns with warrants for the arrest of the crooked officials. Cooper then learns from Compson that Kay has been on the level and that jealousy caused her to tell him the story she did about Kay being hand in hand with her uncle and Boyd. Cooper goes to Kay and apologizes. In the fade-out they are in each other's arms planning the inevitable wedding.

Harry Green and Slim Summerville take the comedy roles and handle them exceedingly well. James Kirkwood, as the hardboiled miner, is most convincing, as is Miss Compson in a small but important role. Kay Johnson's acting is above reproach. She is excellent as the love interest. Boyd is particularly menacing as the crooked government agent. His acting is forceful.

Edwin Carewe, the director, has introduced some marvelous camera shots and his direction, in toto, is very smooth. The first part of the picture is rather slow but when cut and ready for the exhibitor should be filled with plenty of action throughout.

Use comedy and cartoons with this one.

"Liliom" Clicks

Hollywood—Presented as one of those unusual romantic gems similar to "Street Angel" and "7th Heaven," at a preview at Riverside, "Liliom" by audience reaction to it demonstrated that it will rate high in audience interest. Charles Farrel is a hit as the star, but has plenty of competition from Rose Hobart, a newcomer from the stage.

Miss Hobart nearly walks away with the picture and very definitely demonstrates starring potentialities. She has a personality which cannot be overlooked, plus a voice with warmth pand sincerity. The remainder of the cast is fine, each well fitted for his respective part. Frank Borzage directed in his usual masterful manner. The picture looks like an extended run attraction and should be a big winner in week stands. The title is tentative.

Good Light Farce

A MERRY mix-up, with Rex Lease as a young heir, forced to pretend he is married to a gold digger in order to collect his legacy. He had been scheduled to marry another, but a rubber check he had passed threatened him with a jail term if he didn't do Sam Hardy's bidding and go through with the fake gag with Hardy's sweetie.

The girl happened also to be the sweetie of a hardboiled motorcycle cop. Lease, Hardy and the girl go to the mountain haunted house, but not before Lease is pinched by the cop, only to make his getaway. Then when Lease's sweetie appears on the scene with his rival, and the girls begin disappearing after a series of mix-ups, there is plenty of excitement.

Lease must be married by midnight. Shortly before, he finds a secret passage and rescues his fiancee. They are married by the administrator, who is also a justice of the peace. His uncle, posing as a paralytic, is exposed as the ghost and jumps out of a window pursued by one of the mountain lions he had used to help him in his scheme to cheat Lease out of the legacy.

Plenty of complications and some good laughs. Paul Hurst carries the bulk of them, aided chiefly by Sam Hardy, both doing good work. Lease is good as the boy, and what little Vera Reynolds has to do she does well. The chief feminine role is that of Nita Martan and she puts it over in fine fashion.

Nothing big, but a good light program offering, which carries interest and laughs. However, it lacks name values.

Musical shorts and news will provide balance.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany. Directed by Frank Strayer. Dialogue director, Leander DeCordova.

The Sea God

(Paramount)

Way Off

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

SOMEBODY at Paramount will be lucky if he isn't indicted for the murder of a good box-office bet in the production of "The Sea God."

It has all the promise of topnotch entertainment and, instead, falls far short of the mark. Richard Arlen and Fay Wray are the only name bets available.

The picture offers a wide range of exploitation possibilities, but unless it is considerably improved between the preview showing and release, disappointed customers are certain.

Such production mistakes as "The Sea God" seem an adequate explanation of box office slumps. One executive of a theatre chain was heard to remark after the preview that "maybe it isn't so much miniature golf as our pictures."

In "The Sea God" there is a wealth of opportunity for good scenic shots. A boat race between the two rival traders and seekers for the heart of Fay Wray would offer, you might think, an opportunity to instill an added bit of spice. Instead, it merely serves as a rather dreary interlude with Arlen stopping to save a man who furnishes him information regarding a rich pearl field.

The heavy, Robert Gleckler, will cause titters with his "10-20-30" type of villainy. The only thing he lacks is a pair of handle-bar mustachios and a long-tailed coat.

The big bet, however, is lost when Arlen appears among the cannibals in his diving suit after walking ashore from beneath the water following an attack on the boat which resulted in the capture of his crew. They figure Arlen as a sea god and are prostrated in worship of this strange creature from the bottom of the ocean. In this manner Arlen manages to save the heroine.

Most of the cannibal tribe have faces of kindly deacons of the African Methodist Church or gentle Pullman porters when the camera shows closeups, and the sequences where Arlen cows the bloodthirsty warriors in his deep sea garb apparently offered considerably more possibilities than the production heads chose to use.

Numerous other bits carry an appearance of unreality—the plucking of the large pearl oysters from the clean sands of the ocean bottom and the boat race in which the sails of the ships bellied full on a sea that is calm as glass are two of the most noticeable instances.

Strong comedy and other shorts should be used to help this one.

Good Western

(Reviewed by James P. Cunningham)

ACTION is the big demand of today and this picture has it. And how! It's a speedy, shootin' western with some fairly good acting, mystery, comedy and heart interest. For the small towns it should be a fine bet, while action houses in the cities also should find it to their liking.

Bob Steele is a good hero, like a flash on the draw and can ride. Good looks and a good singing voice also are in his favor, making up what he lacks in acting ability. He has a big following among the outdoor fans, built up since FBO days, when he was the 16-year-old "western kid." Al St. John as a cowboy might at first seem all wet, but he has a sympathetic part in this and puts it over well. Charles King (not the M-G-M player) is a good heavy. Nita Rey is satisfactory as the heroine. Slim Whittaker, Shorty Hendricks and Emilio Fernandez are good, without a great deal to do, save Whittaker, whose chief job is to pick arguments with Steele, which he does to his sorrow.

This opens with Bob pursued by a sheriff's posse. He takes refuge at a rancho. The foreman, himself an outlaw, helps cover up his trail and gives the youth a job. He warns Bob to stay away from the girl at the rancho, but the two are attracted to each other. Bob is a boastful cowboy, who is roundedly disliked by all but one of the others. He promises to stay away from the girl, after he cleans up one of the foreman's henchmen in a framed fight. However, just before they leave to rob a bank, he sees the girl, tells her of his love, and gives her a note to read after he has gone. The bank is robbed and the gang goes across the border, where the foreman is keeping the sheriff prisoner. The latter is slowly dying from a shot in the back, suffered at the foreman's hands.

It develops here that Bob is the sheriff's son, having joined the gang to learn his father's whereabouts. The foreman prefers to give Bob a licking before killing him, and in a terrific fight Bob is victor, Slim coming to his aid to hold the other outlaws at bay. Meanwhile, the possee, summoned by the girl, arrives and takes the gang into custody. Slim, however, is killed.

Western fans, particularly kids, will eat up this one. J. P. McCarthy has given it some good direction, with suspense maintained. Not for the de luxe houses, but the small towns will cheer it, particularly as Saturday fare. Sell Steele as the grown-up, who has been a western star since he was 16 years old.

Something New

Novelty with a capital is offered by Tiffany in its new chimpanzee series, judging by the first of these two-reelers, "The Little Covered Wagon." Phil Goldstone turned out this highly entertaining subject, which should crash all kinds of theatres because of its novelty and laughs. He produces a very realistic illusion that the chimps are talking, and the manner in which they handle cards and revolvers is nobody's business. There should be a real demand for these new shorts.

HYNES

The Bad Man

(First National)

Hokumish

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

WHY do they do it? First National took O. P. Heggie, a rather excellent trouper, gave him a juicy part and then had him "hoke" a fair picture to death.

"The Bad Man" will draw a certain amount of trade. Those who remember the old play and the silent picture will perhaps come back for more. Walter Huston has built considerable following in past pictures and may help perk up receipts.

He deserves all the credit for making the picture what it is. The character star slips into the toga of the Mexican bandit hero, Lopez, in a quite satisfying manner, although there are moments when it seemed as if he was tempted to "hoke" with the rest of the cast.

But Heggie, as the fussy old busybody uncle of the hero, is positively impossible. He plays the role about in the same manner that Chic Sale must have played his first rube part at an amateur night performance twenty or thirty years ago. The part is so apparently hokum and so absolutely out of character that it throws the rest of the production entirely off key.

As far as that goes the entire picture is pretty completely boloney. Lopez, the Robin Hood Mexican bandit, swoops down upon the ranch owned by Rennie, who, incidentally, certainly seems out of place as a cowboy hero.

He is about to make off with the wife of Rennie's guest, the former sweetheart of the hero, when he recognizes the ranch owner as a man who saved his life.

Lopez manages to eliminate the unnecessary husband by having him "accidentally" shot and killed, having previously relieved him of $10,000, which paid off the mortgage on the ranch. Several persons were attempting to get the ranch, it seems, because there was supposed to be oil on the land. Lopez eliminates them handily. Once or twice he is interrupted by rangers who are chasing him, but he ducks them and comes back only to be killed at the finish.

Huston plays the character excellently, while Dorothy Revier manages to look enough like a heroine to be acceptable. Marion Byron has a small part which she does sufficiently well, as does Guinn Williams. Arthur Stone, as Pedro, the man Friday for Lopez, is excellent in a rather crude characterization.

It will require the support of strong shorts.

Produced and distributed by First National. Directed by Clarence Badger. From play of same name by Porter Emerson Browne. Adaptation and additional dialogue by Howard Estabrook. Edited by Frank Ware. Photographed by John Seitz. Length, 7,124 feet. Running time, 79 minutes. Release date, Sept. 14.

Old English

(Warners)

Distinguished; Class Picture

IT'S two out of three for George Arliss. "Disraeli," his initial talker, added tone to the talking picture and convinced some of the scoffers that there was still hope for motion pictures. "The Green Goddess," far below "Disraeli's" level, nevertheless added to Arliss's achievement as an actor of distinction. Now "Old English" comes along to rival the first of the trio.

This veteran of the stage and its craft gives a distinguished performance. You won't forget his suavity, his finesse and readiness to meet an obligation even when its fulfillment means writing finis for him. Arliss and his performance make "Old English" what it is: a class picture for those who like their entertainment on a plane considerably higher than the average product emanating from Hollywood today.

For the exhibitor who wants to determine exactly what he may expect when this attraction reaches him, the answer is easy. If he played and made money with "Disraeli," this Arliss effort is a cinch and walk-away. If he didn't, stay away, because "Old English" is fashioned in the mode of its predecessor.

It is too bad that the rest of the cast didn't measure or even approach Arliss's performance. Ivan Simpson, as Joe Phillin, brother shipowner and friend, has little to do, but he does that little with a nicety and a finish that rates for him considerable praise. The rest of the cast is decidedly inferior, but isn't and couldn't be inferior enough to dim the lustre of Arliss's superb work.

This is a story with an English background. The city is Liverpool and the time the early 20th century. You see Arliss as Sylvanus Heythorp, shipbuilder and operator, whose business fortunes in the winter of his life are gaining steady momentum down grade. His creditors are pressing him. Yet, despite his age—he's 80—he fights. Always the gentleman, always firm, he finds himself confronted with the problem of providing for his son's children, Betty Lawford and Leon Janney. The position is difficult. The children are the offspring of the love match of his youth. He feels he must protect them yet hasn't the funds to do so.

Here Phillin enters the picture, is persuaded to sell his vessels to Arliss's company for $300,000 with a side agreement that he will turn a ten per cent commission over to the "Old English's" grandchildren. The deal appears to be in the clear only to be upset through the gossip of the children's mother and the vindictiveness of a lawyer who is after Arliss's business scalp.

Arliss realizes the game is up, dresses for his last dinner, throws his doctor's orders into the discard, digs into the cellar for his choice wines and brandy and dies peacefully and at repose in his easy chair by the fire.

The story is not weighty, and the dialogue not brilliant. It is Arliss's acting nuances, his flair for dignity in gestures and the understanding which he imparts to the characterization which lift the picture into the category of those-that-must-be seen.

A short dealing with the sea would provide fitting atmosphere.

Produced and distributed by Warners. From play of same name by John Galsworthy. Adaptation and dialogue by Walter Anthony and Maude Howell. Edited by Omen Marks. Photographed by James Vantrees. Length, 7,926 feet. Running time, 88 minutes. Release date, Sept. 27.

The Sea Wolf

(Fox)

Red-Blooded and Box-Office

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THIS is a picture. Two-fisted, he-man and totally minus the whitewash which Hollywood often applies to yarns with guts, "The Sea Wolf" emerges as a film that promises much for doddering box-offices.

Jack London's famous story has lost none of its power or its ability to grip. Life is existence in the raw on "Wolf" Larsen's hell ship and that's the way the picture gives it to you. Milton Sills stages a comeback that will remind audiences of his fine work in "The Sea Hawk." Larsen is the type of role that Sills does thoroughly and best.

The story thread is undoubtedly familiar. Larsen, Lorna Marsh and Allen Rand are the principal characters. Larsen is the master and dictator of The Ghost, known and feared by sailing men throughout the seven seas. Lorna Marsh is the prostitute whose bearing indicates that somewhere in her past she had seen better days. Rand is the young boy, obviously well-reared, but rum-sodden, hopeless and headed for the bottom of the heap.

Larsen, advocate of the doctrine that might is right, makes a play for Lorna in a Japanese coastal city, but the girl, her mother-instinct perhaps aroused, goes for Rand—particularly so when Larsen knocks him out.

Rand finds himself aboard The Ghost, shanghaiied by Larsen's mate. The girl, having first turned down an offer to accompany Larsen, learns what has happened and decides to accept the sea wolf's offer. This places the three aboard the same ship, bound for a long cruise.

The major portion of the story deals with the conflict that develops between Larsen and Rand over the girl. Larsen knows that he hasn't a chance, but when he feels the moment has come, determines to take the girl, knocks out Rand and is about to succeed when "Death" Larsen, brother and mortal enemy of "Wolf," heaves into sight and gives battle.

"Wolf" loses out. In the excitement, Lorna and Rand, with the aid of one of the crew, ship on a small boat and determine to make for the nearest land, which is Japan.

After days adrift the lovers sight a ship. It proves to be the one they had left. They go aboard, only to find the vessel deserted with masts and rigging gone and the only occupant "Wolf" Larsen, wounded and blinded. The last move in the drama concerns Larsen's efforts to prevent the couple from taking the food they need to again reach land. Larsen realizes he is dying, but attempts to set fire to the boat, using his bunk and the pages of the books he admired and knew so well as the funeral pyre. But the effort proves abortive and Larsen, understanding that his end is near, instructs the couple how to navigate the boat to land.

Sills does a great job as the sea wolf. Two-fisted, hard-hitting all the way, he lives the character.

Norna Marsh is played by a new comer, Jane Keith, a former steno who has been doing bits in Hollywood for two years, and now gets—and deserves—her first big chance. She is a blonde, extremely attractive, has a well modulated voice and real acting possibilities. Raymond Hackett is Rand. He does very well. Running Sills close honors for histrionics is John Rogers, who plays Mugridge, the cook who later gouges Sills' eyes out in revenge for long abuse. He gives an exceedingly clever and well rounded performance and is responsible for the laughs.

The dialogue by S. N. Behrman, stage craftsman, is intelligent, well wrought and entirely in keeping with the story values. A workmanlike job is the scenario by Ralph Block.

Cartoons and comedies will balance.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Story by Jack London. Directed by Alfred Santell. Dialogue by S. N. Behrman. Scenario by Ralph Block. Photographed by Glen MacWilliams. Length, 8,000 feet. Running time, 89 minutes. Release date, Sept. 21.

Duplicate Success

Hollywood—An unusually enthusiastic reception was awarded Pathe's "Holiday" when it opened at the Carthay Circle theatre here the other night. Critics and audience were pronounced in their admiration for the picture and rate it as one of the best made for the audible screen. The house was sold out without the studio purchasing any tickets, as is usually the case, the public buying all the $2 and $3 tickets. Cast was given tremendous ovation upon appearance on the stage following the premiere. Prediction is that picture will run eight weeks in this spot. Edward H. Griffith directed it.

Boosts Prices

Seattle—In the face of keen competition and sub-normal conditions, generally, John Hamrick last week inaugurated his fall and winter admission price schedule at both his Blue Mouse and Music Box theatres. Now effective, admission prices of 25 cents prevail from 11 A.M. until 1 P.M. daily. Thereafter, until closing time, rates are 50 cents, and loges 75 cents. These prices are effective every day in the week, including Sunday. Summer prices called for a 35 cents admission rate (50 cents for loges) between the hours of 1:00 and 6:00 P.M.

How Could You?

Charleston, W. Va.—Calling anyone names is out of his line, and if he went in for that kind of stuff he would be making talkers now "instead of taking chances on breaking my neck twice a day with a circus." That is the reply of Tom Mix to charge of John Berress, Minneapolis salesman, that Tom shook his fist in Berress' face, called him names and placed him in fear of his life.

Man Trouble

(Fox)

Mediocre; Often Misses

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THE trouble with this underworld story isn't confined to the title. The secret of where the fault belongs must rest in the archives of the Fox studio. On the basis of what the screen holds forth, "Man Trouble" is long-winded, bromidic, lacking in story power and certainly minus the sustained suspense one expects in an underworld melodrama.

The beginning and the end get over in satisfactory fashion, but the wait between the two extremes runs into far more footage than the celluloid content can hold.

The effort marks the return of Milton Sills, who has been absent from pictures for about a year. It also reunites Sills and Dorothy Mackaill, who did a number of semi-talkers for First National in the days when silents were being revamped with a touch of sound to make them saleable. Their reappearance may help in exploitation.

Sills plays Mac, the big gunman from the West Forties, and plays the role with all the tradition of the ham actor. He impresses as the tough egg too spasmodically and too infrequently during the 84 minutes that "Man Trouble" requires to run its footage to get the part over. When he begins to rage and indulge in desk-pounding and cigar-hurling he is forceful and, therefore, makes a dent. Elsewhere he just acts and does that not too well.

The story has Mac leaving his cabaret to bring in a load of liquor which his henchman hasn't the guts to ride and incidentally saving the life of Dorothy Mackaill. He takes her to his apartment, learns she hit the skids trying to land as a singer and gives her a job in his cabaret. At the same time he falls for her like a load of bricks.

But Dorothy is virgin-pure, takes a long time to appreciate the fact that Mac is trying to make her and makes up her mind that she simply won't be made. In the meantime George Graham, newspaper man, played by Kenneth McKenna, consumes up perfectly good space to bubble over about Christmas in the country with the "loneliest man in the world," said lonely man, of course, being McKenna in person.

Dorothy, being country-bred and full of memories, writes him and is persuaded to join him in his visit to Aunt Maggie and Uncle Joe. Aunt and uncle mistake them for a married couple and, while Dorothy makes mild protests, McKenna insists he cannot spoil their Christmas. In the meantime and by way of plot thickening, a drunken reporter working on McKenna's sheet, happens in on the platonic lark and is forced by Sills to spill what he has learned.

Sills hops his auto chariot and makes for the country, the snow and the carol singers where Dorothy, to save McKenna, promises to return to the cabaret. McKenna, back in the city, learns from reporter buddy the true state of affairs, faces the camera and expounds his faith in Dorothy. He hotfoots it to the cabaret, confronts Sills, who plans to send him on the ride that knows no returning. But Dorothy learns of a plot concocted by the opposing bootleg faction to bump Sills off, and tells him so. Sills doesn't believe it, but instructs his cronies to let McKenna and Mackail free if he doesn't return in an hour. But Sills does, after shooting up the mob, tells Mackaill she is the first person to come through for him, turns them churchward and does a dying swan song to the floor.

The dialogue, credited to George Manker Watters, and Edwin Burke, is undistinguished in the main and terrible in the farm house sequences. Bromide after bromide about the blessings of marital bliss and the charm of the simple life are pulled. Someone should be made to toe the line for it.

Needs strong short—very strong.

Produced and distributed by Fox. Story based on "A Very Practical Joke," by Ben Ames Williams. Directed by Berthold Viertel. Adaptation and dialogue by George Manker Watters and Edwin Burke. Rasputin—the Holy Devil

(State Rights—Silent)

(Released with Score)

For Class Audiences Only

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

COMBINING the best in German photographic angles and directorial twists with an unmistakable trait of Soviet propaganda, the reason for which is hard to understand inasmuch as the picture is touted to be a product of German studios and not of Russian origin.

"Rasputin" has its moments and, principally because of choppy continuity, sinks to a low form of picture making in contrast. That marvelous piece of literature from the pen of Dosie Koffler is scarcely followed. While it is true that the important highlights were conveyed to the screen, it leaves too much to the imagination even of the alleged highbrow, or "sophisticated" little theatre audience for which it is intended in this country. The great characterization and strong undercurrent of emotion in the life of that powerful character, "the holy devil" of Russia, can be appreciated on the screen only by those familiar with the book. For others, the tale is too loosely woven to grasp their full meaning.

Nikolai Malikoff's portrayal of the monk Rasputin is remarkable. His support is splendid, right down the line to the most unimportant bit played. "Class" audiences undoubtedly will find the work of the cast and the superb photography sufficiently engrossing to redeem the production's unacceptable features.

Shots of the early stages of the war are obviously library stock scenes and some of them are too ghastly for use in any public attraction. Scenes of bodies and close ups of dead horses on the field of battle are unnecessary.

The story concerns the great physical and mystical healing powers of Rasputin, who is brought to the Czar's court from an inconspicuous life in the countryside, to subdue a wave of unrest which is beginning to show itself among subjects of the throne. This accomplished—or prolonged—the holy man confines his activities to the seduction of ladies in the court and out of it. His capabilities as a lover are known far and wide, causing justified concern to the czar and his officials. The czar, however, through the great influence which Rasputin exercises over the czarina, soon becomes a pawn in the hands of the "holy devil" and he runs things pretty much as he sees fit.

The populace, which at first had accepted Rasputin as the mighty healer, soon turn against him when evidence of his wild orgies and seductions become unbearable. Several plots are made against his life. Eventually, he is murdered, but before breathing his last prophesies the fall of the throne. The world war is on, and history of Russia with regards the revolution and abduction of Czar Nicholas repeats itself.

Plenty of light comedy needed as contrast.

Produced by Martin Berger. Distributed in U. S. via State Rights market. Directed by Martin Berger. Story by Dosie Koffler. Photography by Laszlo Schaffer.

What, Another One?

"You're goin' in at your own risk, Mister! I warned you this picture ain't so hot!"

—Life.

News House Clicks

Los Angeles—Fans here will go for the exclusive newsreel idea, it was indicated in the first week of operation of the Newsreel Theatre (formerly the President), which grossed $4,700 in its first week. The 700-seater is shooting at two-bits straight. It is operated by Fox West Coast. William Murphy, former Publix representative at Salt Lake City, is manager. The theatre recently was remodeled and wired.

Bordoni, Hampton, and Dance Team In from Paris

Abroad the Ile de France, which docked this week from Paris, were Irene Bordoni, Hope Hampton, one-time screen star and wife of Jules Brulator; Edna Ferber, author and scenarist; Alexis Ruloff and Joan Eaton, dancers; Jose Lopez Rubio and Eduardo Ugarte, Spanish dramatist-authors en route to M-G-M's Culver City studio; and Mrs. Howard Dietz, wife of M-G-M's publicity chief.

The Little Covered Wagon

(Tiffany)

Should Be a Wow

SOMETHING brand new in the line of comedies. M-G-M recently crashed through with big comedy values in its series of trained dogs. Now Phil Goldstone brings out this new series with trained chimpanzees, a gang of talented animals which should prove a big box-office bet. This is a ten-twenty-thirty meller, the old covered wagon being attacked by Indians, and the foundling growing up to cheat the tough crook out of foreclosing the mortgage. Goldstone made one mistake in not scaling some of the settings to the size of the chimps, but otherwise this novelty subject should click in a big way. Directed by Sig Neufeld. Running time, 22 minutes.

For any type bill.

(Vitaphone Varieties, No. 1,038)

Entertaining

THE second of the Robert L. Ripley series and interesting from start to finish. It evoked a buzz of comment in a large Broadway house, proving its audience appeal. Ripley does a monologue, reciting bits of weird facts, following by drawing a few sketches. Two of his subjects are shown in the flesh—a 15-month-old baby who can roller skate and a man who has not slept for 78 years. The latter not only said so himself, but produced newspaper clippings to prove it, believe it or not. Running time, 10 minutes.

Will help any bill.

His Big Ambition

(Vitaphone—Potters)

Good

LUCIEN LITTLEFIELD and Lucille Ward rarely miss in the "Potters" series. Their newest short is no exception, containing a perfect entertainment quality in the comedy line. "Pop," after abusing the family, realizes how he has made his dependants suffer by not working and decides to join the laboring class. His antics as a drug store cowboy provide hilarious screenfare. Running time, about 19 minutes.

Fine with a dramatic feature.

Audio Review, No. 35

(Pathe)

Very Sweet

TAKE the children to see this issue by all means. Intimate views of the home life of the pheasant, some shots of marshes, and dancing by marionettes may thrill them. For the adults there is "A Day of Rest," depicting the mad Sabbath dash for relaxation. Running time, 10 minutes.

Use with strong supporting units.

Fair

"HOLD ANYTHING" is the title of this cartoon, but the artist must have tired while making it, for it is repetitious throughout. Several bits of new business were injected into it, but the music didn't help a bit. Running time, 7 minutes.

Will get by with a heavy feature.

A Royal Flush

(Pathe)

Ouch!

THEY turned out better comedies than this 15 years ago. For ham acting, sickly gags and puerile story this one deserves a leather medal. There's not a laugh in it. Directed by Frank T. Davis. Running time, 19 minutes.

See it before you book it.

Short Subjects

Coast to Coast

(Visnagraphic-Talker)

Rates a Play

ONE of the best made subjects of its type, highly deserving of a spot on the bill of any type theatre—from the palatial first-run de luxe stands down to the lowliest neighborhoods. This high entertainment value is created through the clever mixture of scenic marvels, unique production angles and the timely subject theme; airplane transportation of the current age.

Col. Charles Lindbergh, as an official of the T. A. T. air lines, sponsoring the subject, appears in several sequences, thereby adding greatly to its pulling power. The colonel is shown at work inspecting motors and in the air on a transcontinental trip.

Shots taken over various scenic wonders crossed by plane from New York to the Coast are marvelous. Sound and dialogue are perfect and direction splendid. Running time, about 23 minutes.

Note: This subject may be procured (without charge except express tariff) from Visnagraphic Pictures, 247 Park Ave., New York. The Pennsylvania R. R., owners of T. A. T., and the latter company will stage a publicity campaign in connection with the showing.

School's Out

(M-G-M—Our Gang)

Swell

AND how they roared all the way through this short at the Capitol in New York!

It's somewhat like painting the lily to praise an Our Gang comedy, but this one deserves a special award of merit. It is enacted by our favorite cast—and what a great bunch of troupers they are. Unspoiled and unaffected, their voices registering perfectly, they give splendid performances under the able direction of Robert McGowan.

When a handsome young man (Creighton Hale) calls to see their pretty young teacher (June Marlowe) the kids fear that they will lose her through marriage, so they frame him, telling him that she has false teeth and a wooden leg and that she has been married three times and accouched 21 children. He goes in swimming and they swipe his clothes, with disastrous effects. He turns out to be the brother of the teacher, bringing the happy ending. Packed with fresh gags and sparkling dialogue. Running time, 21 minutes.

Use it to bolster a weak bill, and advertise it.

The Legacy

(Vitaphone Varieties, No. 4,270-1)

Good

BETTY COMPTON, stage star, decorates this short—and how! Her singing and dancing will not set the world afire, but she sure is easy on the eyes. She is cast as a vaudeville player who inherits a hotel abandoned shortly after Mr. and Mrs. Abe Lincoln stopped there. With the help of a mob of actors and actresses "at liberty" they put it in shape, mowing the lawn and cutting down the trees that had grown up in the lobby. At this point the story is dropped and the chorus girl-chambermaids and the bellboy-hoofers keep the guests entertained with music and dancing. It's frothy, but it steps along and manages to be entertaining. Running time, 15 minutes.

Okay where a musical short is desirable.

Football with Knute Rockne

(Pathe)

Fine

THE fame of Knute Rockne and his Notre Dame footballers, the intense popularity of the game with the public and the novelty of this series should combine to make these six one-reelers hot box-office draws, especially during the season and particularly in every town big enough to support a high school. And they constitute a natural for college towns.

"The Last Yard" and "The Hidden Ball" are the titles of the first two of the series and they reveal mysteries of the gridiron which will interest every type of audience. Facing the camera in a semi close-up, Rockne gives a general dissertation on the game, illustrates his points by putting his squads through formations, shows how famous plays were executed and in general imparts inside stuff about the great American game that will add to the enjoyment of spectators.

There are some unusual shots, including a worm's-eye view of the team in a huddle and some mild humor supplied by the wise-cracking huddlers. A portion of last year's Army-Yale game is shown, and Notre Dame's band and rooters liven things up in another sequence. Pathechrome is used throughout. Produced by Terry Ramsaye. Directed by Clyde Elliott. Running time, 10 minutes each.

Good in any spot. Plug them.

Many Happy Returns

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1055-56)

Fair Pee Wee Drama

WALTER CONNOLLY, Madge Evans and Ferdinand Gottschalk, stage folk, figure in this two-reel drama of a neglected father who, in spite of his standing as a "good provider," remains forgotten and alone on his birthday night. He stages his own party, serving and conducting conversation with imaginary members of his family who are away pursuing their own pleasures. Concerned over his master's strange behavior, the family butler sends for the absent members of the family, who arrive in time to stage the real birthday party. The midget drama is well acted and staged. Running time, 17 minutes.

Will go well with farcical or musical type features, and can be spotted in with good comedies.

Good Nonsense

"CONGO JAZZ" is the second of the Vitaphone Song cartoon series produced by Leon Schlesinger. It is a good synchronization of animal antics and meaningless tunes that will be good for a couple of laughs from any audience. It also incorporates a number of those vulgarities which are bringing the cartoons more and more to the attention of censor boards across the land. The drawings are by Hugh Harmon and Rudolf Ising. Musical score by Frank Marsales. Running time, 9 minutes.

Spot it in anywhere.

School Daze

(Vitaphone—Musical)

With Emphasis on the Daze

ANOTHER release in that ever-growing grop of Vitaphone song and dance skits. No attempt has been made to hold the interest with the slight story thread, Director Carl McBride depending entirely upon the common variety of wise cracks, harmony and girlie revue to put it over. Two years ago, when sound was still novel, this sort of material would have clicked. But those days are over. The only redeeming feature is a classroom setting, a take-off from that old vaudeville gag. Running time, about 12 minutes.

Strong short support needed here. Run this one on a light comedy bill.

Pat-on-the-Back Ad Racket to Be Put on the Spot

Chicago — Local theatre equipment and supply concerns are beginning to rebel against the "theatre-opening" racket, a favorite pastime of circuit and chain operators here.

The gag has been to schedule a page of "congratulatory" advertising in one of the dailies on the occasion of a theatre's opening. Equipment and supply houses, of course, pay for the page and the theatre reaps the benefit. The thing was considered legitimate for de luxe house openings, into which important money had gone. However, the smaller chains took it up, with the result that it has been plenty overworked of late, with the equipment and supply houses threatened with loss of accounts in the event they did not kick in. Re-opening of an old house after slight alterations is now considered excuse enough for a chain to work the racket, and it is at this that the equipment and supply houses are rebelling. The result is that plenty of difficulty in getting the congratulatory page filled is now being encountered.

That's Why

Chicago—Abe Feder purchased the Rose Theatre some months ago with the announcement that the house would undergo an extensive "ritz-ing" process prior to reopening. However, the Rose has been sold to Max Gumbiner without its having been reopened at all. Across the street from the Rose is Gumbiner's Crescent Theatre.

Hot News

Chicago—Maurice Chevalier, caught breathless at a railway station here, explained that he was rushing back to Paris to comfort his mother-in-law, fallen ill there. Well, here's hoping she reads it, anyhow.

Jean Harlow, caught at the same station, refused photographers' requests to pose for a picture with Chevalier unless Mama Harlow was cut in on it, too, 'cause "you know how they are in Hollywood—they'd have me divorced the minute they saw it." So the photographers contented themselves with a trio and a couple of solo flashes.

Wider Streets, Cause Theatres Heap of Trouble

Chicago—Street widenings in Chicago are creating problems for theatre owners here. The operators of the Lincoln Hippodrome at Ashland and Lincoln, faced with the loss of the house due to the widening of Ashland Ave., met theirs in a novel manner.

It was necessary for the city to condemn a minimum of 25 feet of the Hippodrome's property, which would take that much from the width of the house, from front to rear. Immediately the slice had been made, which took 400 seats and a section of the stage from the house, the owners laid plans for reopening, instead of rebuilding. A new side wall goes up and the stage will be adjusted to the new dimensions of the house. Reopening is set for October, with the house essentially the same as before, except for a reduction of 400 seats.

Olympic Theatre, at 47th and Ashland, affected by the same street widening program, will be rebuilt almost in entirety. Rebuilding of the Oak on Western Ave., also being widened, will cost the owners $150,000.

Anna Gets Her Wish

Chicago—Anna, Ill., a small downstate city, is probably the last of the southern Illinois municipalities to approve Sunday shows. The issue won at a special election recently by a vote of 607 to 154.

Fish Story

Chicago—Charlie Ford, editor of the Daily News-Universal newsreel, tells this one on Pete Fish of Chicago.

Fish, a candidate for some minor office at a recent election here, came into the newsreel offices the other day looking for his picture, taken at the time a number of other candidates were photographed during the campaign. The picture was not where it should have been, and Charlie David, cameraman, made an exhaustive search for it. He went through can after can of film (1,000 feet to a can), holding the film up to the light. But he did find it, finally. It had been filed with the Grant Park Aquarium pictures.

They're Signing On the Dotted Line in Chicago

Chicago—Business is beginning to take a spurt here, with theatre re-openings the rule all over town. Contracts are being signed for new product at every exchange, and even the country salesmen are contributing to the fun by getting some nice contracts into the provincial mail every now and then. First time some of the exchange managers have heard from the farm and fireside boys since spring, so relief is widespread throughout the branch offices here.

Salesmen report that little or no opposition to the new contracts is being encountered. Even Warner and First National representatives, who are obliged to peddle an extra contract for score charges, are not complaining.

An occasional muttering against the new Paramount contract makes itself heard every so often. The new Par contract divides the company's product into classifications A, B and C. The complaining exhibitors contend that they have no way of knowing what pictures properly belong in what classification, and that the contract amounts to "blind" buying. Paramount exchangemen, however, point out that the company's entire product must be purchased and that, inasmuch as a definite number of pictures goes into each classification, the contract, in sum, is a fair one.

Warners Book "White Cargo" in Chi House

Chicago—Warners are the latest M. P. P. D. A. member to play "White Cargo," the Hays' banned production, in local theatres. The British film has just finished a successful run at the Symphony, a newly acquired Warner property here.

Fox and Publix have also booked and played the picture here, with good results financially.

Chicago Optimism

Chicago—Tom Gilliam, genial city sales director for First National, is the holder of Film Row's endurance smiling record for the third successive year. Here they both are—Tom and the famous Gilliam smile which, this year, persisted through a summer during which business was so quiet you could hear the dandruff dropping on the exhibitors' shoulders. It also stuck through the disastrous crop failures of August which wiped out Tom's entire agricultural holdings. They consisted of a potted geranium and a selected litter of hay fever microbes.

Tom Gilliam

Myrtle Wins

Chicago—Myrtle Collins, Chicago Exhibitors' Association secretary, returned from a Lake Geneva vacation with this photo of herself and a threat that, unless it were published in this department, she'd switch to another trade paper. Why, Myrtle! You seagoin' chiseler, you.

Extra! Filming "New Morals" in Chicago

Chicago—For the first time since production of "That Royle Girl," this city has been selected as location for a feature picture. Victor Schertzinger is here to film Paramount's "New Morals," starring William Powell. The story was adapted from Frederick Lonsdale's play, "Spring Cleaning," by Bartlett Cormack, former Chicago newspaperman.

Figuring in the production will be such familiar Chicago locales as the yacht anchorage off Navy Pier, Oak Street Beach and Lake Shore Drive, the stock yards, Lincoln Parkway hotels, Michigan Avenue and the Union station.

Schertzinger and Powell both promised that no allusion to machine guns would be made in the picture, which, locally at least, is something to look forward to.

Brunswick Finance Plan

Chicago—Arrangements have been completed by the Brunswick Radio Corp., Warner subsidiary, and the Commercial Investment Trust whereby the latter will act as the official financing organization for Brunswick dealers and distributors covering radio sales made on the installment plan.

People Vote for Sunday Shows; Can't Get Them

Chicago—An action for an injunction to prevent the Evanston police from enforcing the Sunday theatre closing ordinance in the north shore suburb has been filed by attorneys representing the Varsity Theatre, one of Evanston's two picture houses. A hearing on the action is slated for August 28.

Evanston, which has been voting on the question for the past two years, authorized Sunday shows at the last election by the narrow margin of 56 votes. The city council, however, took no action to repeal the old prohibitive ordinance because five out of the town's seven wards had voted against it, the majority having been piled up in only two wards.

Fitzgerald Gets Chi Fox Theatres

Chicago—H. J. Fitzgerald, division general manager of Fox Midwesco, has been placed in charge of the circuit's houses here, bringing the total number of houses in this division to 60. The chain has been augmented by the acquisition of the Odeon and Davison at Deaver Dam, Wis., formerly operated by Jack Yeo.

Monroe Reopens

Chicago—After being closed for a week for remodelling, the Monroe, lone Fox Loop house, reopened with a new Magnascope screen. This is the first of the Loop houses to install the oversize screen. Prettying-up of the theatre was accomplished in time for the Monroe to join other Fox houses nationally in observance of "Harley L. Clarke Week," which will be observed in the circuit's houses nationally from Sept. 7 to 13.

Never a Groom

Chicago—Dave Dubin, as Windsor Pictures representative here, was responsible for putting money in some box-office tills around the middle west that formerly had been used for clandestine purposes by renegade mice and their weak but trusting lady friends. The occasion was the happy months when "Her Unborn Child" was as much in demand as a good bootlegger's phone number. (By "good" we mean one who is not wary of extending credit to his clientele.) Dave, handsome, well dressed, wealthy and robust, is, nevertheless, one of those fortunate persons who have been "often a best man but never a groom."

Rockne Football Shorts Get Hand

Chicago—A private screening of the first issue of Pathe's Knute Rockne football series was staged before an audience at the Granada Theatre, South Bend, Ind., this week. The purpose of the screening was to obtain advance expressions from football coaches and newspapermen.

In the audience were Coach "Pop" Warner of Leland Stanford, managing editors and sporting editors of South Bend newspapers, football coaches of Mid-western universities, who were in attendance at Rockne's summer coaching school at Notre Dame, Mayor Hinkle of South Bend and C. H. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Motor Co. The picture was enthusiastically received by this audience.

Agreement to Settle Building Trade Tilts

Washington—Contractors throughout the country and representatives of labor unions have agreed to take their future disputes before a tribunal to adjust jurisdictional fights between unions over the performance of certain types of construction by certain trades.

Controversies of this type in the past have held up construction of hundreds of structures, including many theatre buildings.

Arlen Title Changed

Hollywood—"The Santa Fe Trail" is the release title of "The Law Rides West," a Paramount talker. Picture has Richard Arlen, Rosita Moreno, Eugene Pallette, Mitzi Green and Junior Durkin in the cast. Otto Brower and Edwin H. Knopf directed.

Gets Warner Post

Hagerstown, Md.—Robert Elliott has been appointed assistant manager of the Warner theatres here. He was formerly advertising manager of the Record Herald, Hanover, Pa.

Killing

Chicago—Says a former stock yards worker who entered the local film business recently: "I knew nothing about slaughter till now."

Questionnaires Produce Good Results in Mo.

St. Louis—Legislators nominated at the recent Missouri primaries here are considered friendly to film interests. The eastern Missouri and southern Illinois unit recently sent out questionnaires asking candidates to outline their views on legislation affecting picture business.

Des Moines to Drop Ticket Tax

Des Moines—Because of contentions that such a levy would be illegal, due to the amusement tax already paid by theatres, a proposal to exact a ticket tax probably will be abandoned by the city council.

The latest effort is to obtain revenue through a tax on signboards, particularly electrical ones. The suggestion is for a tax of 50 cents per square foot.

However, because it is not possible to discriminate against the theatre, such a tax probably will be unfeasible and would provoke too much opposition.

STRIKING SHACKLES FROM THE CINEMA ART

As the director guides the action on the "set", he is oblivious of everything but the story being enacted before him. When a distributor acquires a film for his program, he is thinking of the effectiveness of the story the movie tells. Neither concerns himself over the machinery which made that movie possible. For modern cinemachinery has freed the artist and audiences to create and to enjoy... the essence of art.

For more than 23 years, Bell & Howell Standard Cameras, Printers, Splicers, and Perforators have been factors behind the scenes of the finest movies. And because of the great precision and dependability for which Bell & Howell cinemachinery is famous, Bell & Howell likes to feel that its pioneering and engineering have helped to strike the shackles from the creation of the motion picture, allowing it to flower into the fullness of the art of our present day.

Hollywood Nice Place and Stars Okay, Says Tony

Sorehead writers who visit Hollywood and develop an ingrowing grouch because they're not treated like royalty will get no sympathy from William Anthony McGuire, playwright. The creator of such successful plays as "Whoopee" and "The Three Musketeers" is now out on the Coast writing screen stories—and tickled about it. And he makes no bones about his liking for Hollywood and the boys and girls in the studios, as witness this letter recently received by Mark Hellinger:

"A great place, Hollywood. It's a cross between New Rochelle and the Bronx. Right now they are greatly excited out here because the recent census shows that several hundred thousand people have come to California since the previous census. The only trouble with that situation is that all the newcomers are here on options— and God help California on the next census. When the songwriters leave, Los Angeles will drop down below Topeka, Kansas.

"Well, I've finished my first picture story. Rumor has it that Ziegfeld collapsed when he heard that I had finished before my schedule date. It seems he made wagers to the contrary.

More "Ziggy" Wires

"Speaking of Ziegfeld, his office is just across a narrow court from mine—and he wires me every day! Yesterday he wired me about the Marilyn Miller show and I wired him back to look out of his window so I could answer him.

"He did, and we had a nice conversation. We said goodbye—and ten minutes later he wired me to verify the conversation!

"It has been great, however, to see him walking around the lot. They tell me that he and Goldwyn have made a great picture out of 'Whoopee.' I understand that Goldwyn at first objected to Indian women, but after seeing Ziegfeld's glorified Indians, he has decided to do Pocahontas as a super-feature. Provided of course, that he can get Al Smith to play John's original part.

"Of course it's very beautiful here. Flowers everywhere. Wild roses growing around the window in front of me. It's all right for the window—but to a guy who has always paid heavy for roses, they make themselves awfully cheap.

Misses Astor Tablecloths

"A lot of the boys are here from New York and that makes it harder to get acclimated. Just when I was beginning to become Western and commencing to enjoy the atmosphere, I bumped into Sam Shipman. Sam was without a collaborator, but was arguing with himself through force of habit. Shipman says he hasn't eaten lunch since he left the Hotel Astor because he can't find a place where they'll let him write on the tablecloths.

"Sam's first picture assignment out here was to write a talkie version of Dickens' 'Oliver Twist.' After beginning the story, the picture was called off for some reason or other. Sam was terribly sore when that happened because he had already gone to the trouble of reading the book!

"There are a lot of big shots from the East here that I never heard of in the East. There are a lot of big shots from the West here, too, that I never heard of in the East either. So I guess that makes everything even.

No Republican Stars

"I've gotten quite a kick out of the picture openings, where the extras all line the streets to see the stars drive by. And, believe me those stars don't miss a single on-looker. They bow to all of them, as democratic stars should do. There have been no Republican stars since the last election.

"I enjoy going to those openings and seeing the picture stars because I have never seen them on the screen. They're a fine looking bunch of people and carry themselves as successful people should. I have yet to see anything to bear out the silly tales I've heard of Hollywood dissipation. The liquor, of course, is too dangerous for anybody to drink—but, even so, I must stick up for the social behavior of Hollywood."

Cheating Abroad

London — Cheating on percentage bookings, one of the big sources of distributor worry in the United States, is causing concern to distributors here.

"Unborn Child" Becomes "Her Great Mistake"

Hollywood—A 1,500 seat house in one of the outlying Los Angeles suburbs finds business rather dull due to heavy competition and for that reason is doing its utmost in putting on a show that will bring in the customers. The bill for the first half of last week was as follows: "The Storm," a full length feature; "Dancing Sweeties," another full length feature; two comedy shorts, a news reel and a cartoon. On top of this two "previews" were held during the three days' run, said "previews" being unreleased pictures that had been shelved in exchange offices as having no sales value.

One of the "previews" some weeks ago was called "Her Great Mistake," or some such title, and when the picture was shown patrons found it to be none other than "Her Unborn Child," which had shown at a theatre a block away some months before.

Just enough legitimate previews are shown in the house to keep the customers guessing, but fan magazine writers who have to attend all previews are finding the house a tough spot to visit with all the phoney "first showings."

Owensboro Favors Sunday Films, Straw Vote Shows

Owensboro, Ky.—Sentiment here favors Sunday shows and other Sabbath activities, a straw vote conducted by local newspapers shows. The majority is more than two to one in favor of a liberal Sabbath. For three months ministers here have fought against Sunday shows, and R. P. Thomas, local exhibitor, retaliated by causing arrest of 146 residents working on Sunday. In a number of cases heard, only one fine was assessed and that a $2 levy against Clyde Hall, assistant manager of the Empress and Bleich.

START OFF RIGHT!

HERE we are getting dangerously close to the start of a new season. If we believe in signs, or the many things we hear, then it should prove to be a mighty important season for show-business.

The old b.o. is supposed, according to Hoyle and the studio chiefs, to take a decidedly better jump into the black. Pictures ought to be better; haven't the production heads had a long time to find out just what the public wants?

Business conditions in the commercial world are due for a far more profitable twist than they have been for the last year or so.

Now it's your turn to start forming a couple of resolutions. Don't wait until New Years. By that time you may be pounding the pavements. Lay your plans for the coming fall season so that every one of the bosses in your organization can feel that, in you, they have a showman who appreciates their confidence and can handle responsibilities.

Take each and every attraction to play your house and give it separate and special thought. Do your damndest to get the most out of it.

Get your staffs together for regular weekly meetings. Make them understand the part each and every one of them must play in the coming campaigns. Shoulder them with a little responsibility. You'd be surprised how the real guts in a man comes to the front when he must handle some important task. Get their line of thought out of the rut that they are just so much hash and can be replaced over-night.

We could advise from now to doomsday on what a good showman might do to be deserving of the title, but we'd rather stop where we are and turn to a different slant altogether.

DON'T keep riding along on the tide of good luck. If business in your house has been good, improve it. If your immediate superiors have looked upon you with favor, make 'em say it with dollars. If life has been peaches and cream, you must be on your toes to keep it that way.

Don't take too much for granted. We've seen much too many men like that, and we are mighty sorry to say that not a few of them have asked us to help them find new jobs.

Not that they aren't capable men. That's the pity of it. They all know their business; but, they had an idea they knew more than it. So they let their houses go to pieces, secure in the knowledge that "The king can do no wrong." Listen to this:

Jobs are scarcer than hens' teeth these days. WE know it, and how—! So if you're sittin' pretty, make sure that you stay that way right into the new season by taking advantage of every suggestion to improve your theatre's receipts and operation.

R. S. A. Had To Get Up Early To Take Movies Of Flyers

As wide-awake as a negro in a haunted house, R. S. A., the demon exploiteer operating in St. Louis, was right on the job when Jackson and O'Brine, the endurance flyers, took off on their record breaking sustained flight from the local airport.

On the morning of July 21 at 7:11 A. M., R. S. A., who had been tipped off that the flyers were to ascend was right there at the field with his cameraman, to get motion pictures of the take-off. He also had Judge Rosecan there, representing the city of St. Louis, the Mayor being out of town. The judge flipped a coin to see which flyer would handle the stick, every one shook their hands, the wives gave them a fond farewell and off they went. At the sound of "contact" R. S. A.'s camera started grinding and the pictures were shot. Eight hours later, at 3 P. M., special ads in the newspapers and a large bulletin board outside the theatre informed the natives of St. Louis that while they were sleeping peacefully, Jackson and O'Brine had taken off; and the theatre had the first and only pictures.

At four o'clock, one hour after the announcement was made, the house was jammed to capacity, "and," states R. S. A., "the house seats only 4,500." The cost of the entire stunt was borne by the gas and oil company furnishing the flyers with fuel. In return for the company's courtesy, R. S. A. ran a shot in the film record of the take-off which showed one of the company's trucks backing up to the plane and showing the name of the company painted on the side of the truck.

Some showmanship, wasn't it? And here's another little stunt he pulled in conjunction with his campaign for "Rain or Shine." A dozen girls, outfitted with old-fashioned dresses and umbrellas, promenaded about the main streets. The umbrellas carried copy reading: "'Rain or Shine,' I'm going to see Joe Cook in 'Rain or Shine' at the (theatre) now." A local department store paid for the umbrellas and a few thousand special heralds which were distributed. The gag was a riot. People were laughing aplenty at it and even the policemen were forced to smile.

"Well," says R. S. A., "that's all for now. And until I pull a couple of more, we'll have to say 'Au Revoir'."

Unique Window Display on Comedians Was Holden Stunt

Give Earle Holden any sort of a picture and he'll give you a ballyhoo, and a couple of stunts to boot, that will put the picture across to good box-office receipts. If you want any more proof as to the ability of this showman who manages the Fairfax Theatre in Miami, Fla., it is necessary only to consult this little story of his recent activities on "Anybody's War," which included among them a window display that was a corker.

The display was in the window adjacent to the post office, which was a very good location, and consisted of a large number of potatoes with the two heads of the Black Crows and their feet giving the effect that they were covered with potatoes. This depicted a scene from the picture. Also included in the window display were stills from the picture, a razor and an art card carrying copy relative to the picture, stars, theatre and playdates.

He also secured an old damaged car, which was brought to the street directly opposite the theatre and turned over on its side. A sign was placed on the car reading, "The driver of this car was in a hurry to see and hear Moran and Mack, the Two Black Crows in ANYBODY'S WAR—Fairfax Theatre Now." The sign made mighty fine reading and undoubtedly helped to popularize the attraction.

A black-face ballyhoo was on the street two days before showing and two days of showing of picture—the man being dressed like Mack in the picture—wearing a sign on his back telling about the picture and the uniform he wore being about three sizes too large, as well as an old pair of shoes and an extra large razor.

A special front for this picture was rather appropriate in that he showed the heads of Moran and Mack and cut-out projectiles on a special beaverboard covering the sides and reaching across the top over the box-office. Stills and copy were also displayed on this excellent lobby front.

Every one of his stunts were sure-fire as far as creating talk went. And, as most of his fellow members know, all of his stunts click to big grosses, which is what Earle is always after. Right, Earle?

Harrison Amazed Patrons With His Realistic Scene

A novel lobby that ranks with some of the best we have seen in some time is credited to J. P. Harrison, manager of the Waco Theatre in Waco, Tex. In lieu of a photograph, which, unfortunately, we were not able to obtain in time for publication of this story, we will have to attempt to convey a word picture to you of this unique display.

At the right side of the box office was an exact scene from the picture. The artist painted life size pictures of Gary Cooper and the villain. The scene depicted was that showing a portion of the interior of the saloon with Cooper seated at the table with the villain standing by with a drawn pistol. Cards were placed on the table as well as a whiskey bottle, glasses and guns and a sprinkling of sawdust on the floor. A card nearby stated that this scene was from the "Texan"—playdates, etc. To complete the scene, an old oil lamp hung from the ceiling—directly above the table.

On the left side of the box office was a large scene of the woodlands with camp fire. A picture of Gary Cooper and Fay Wray was placed on the display as were special stills. A lariat rope was draped about the display and four colored Indian blankets were at the base of the woodland scene. Copy giving title, stars and playdates were also painted on the display.

The idea of the two different scenes was for the saloon scene to catch the eyes of the men and the woodland scene, the eyes of the women (psychology, huh?). Above the box-office was a large piece of beaverboard painted like an Indian blanket with cut-out letters on it spelling out the title of picture and names of stars.

The result was a knock-out interest arrester; and when the people paused to look at it for the length of time that they did, Harrison was sure that he was going to do good business on the picture as a result of it. And we are glad to say that he wasn't disappointed. Let's have some more of these "J. P.," so that we can pass them along.

F. LaBar Achieved Some Fine Effects On Special Fronts

If any one was searching for unique lobby displays, it would be a shame for them to pass up the ones turned out by F. La Bar at the Plaza Theatre in Asheville, N. C.; and the reason may be seen in the photographs which accompany this article. Look them over and judge for yourself whether or not they possess selling power. The displays were used for "The Silent Enemy" and "Anybody's War."

A wigwam tent was placed under the banners just as one approached the steps leading to inside lobby. The tent contained various articles used by the Indians, also de luxe stills and an Indian with hand raised in manner to signify 'welcome.' Inside the wigwams, were sticks and red lights to make it appear as though a real fire was burning. Another wigwam similar to the one in inside lobby—covered with stills, Indian relics, etc., was placed in the outer lobby surrounded by a covering of snow. The snow effect was gained by using a very cheap grade of salt.

And here's another thing that went into the selling of the film: A slogan stunt in the Times which consisted of a double truck on Sunday prior to opening of picture also helped to publicize "The Silent Enemy." The slogans of 52 merchants were listed on the double truck and persons were asked to identify the merchants to whom the slogans alluded to. 25 tickets to the Plaza were at stake. The winners announced from the Plaza stage on opening night of "Silent Enemy." Then on the following day, another double truck was again run carrying the slogans and merchants using them as well as winners.

The theatre's part was the donating of the 25 guest tickets. The theatre's ad on "The Silent Enemy" dominated the top center of double truck on both occasions at no cost to the theatre other than the guest tickets already mentioned.

In the top photo in this article we'd like to point out that the six sheet on "Anybody's War" atop the marquee was painted by the theatre artist in the inner lobby, with curious crowds standing around watching him work. This tended to excite interest in the picture more than usual and at the same time get in an additional plug. For the showing of the film, the entire front of the theatre was blocked by the piling up of sand bags—leaving an aperture in the center where cut-outs of the Two Black Crows appeared. Entrance to the theatre was gained on either side of the sand bags. The bags were filled with sand picked up about the city and they created a lot of comment from the passersby many of whom stopped to look more closely at the novel make-up, and in this manner, being partly sold on the picture already.

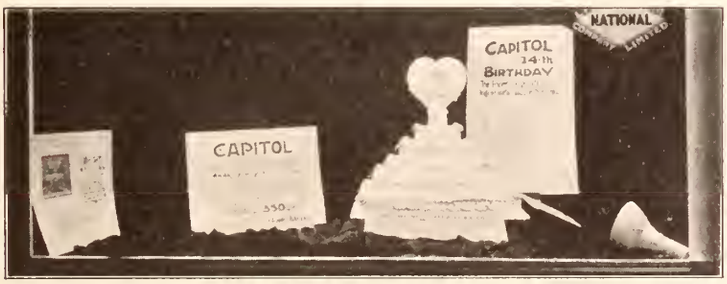
This work is typical of the showmanship La Bar displays daily; and we are sure, since he is numbered among our active members, that he is going to furnish us with some more of these interesting accounts, in order that we may pass them along to his fellow members as an aid to their own merchandising.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB



Capitol Birthday Celebration Was Planned By Fields

Moose Jaw, Sask., Canada, has not yet recovered from the whirlwind campaign that E. P. Fields, manager of the Capitol Theatre, engineered for the recent celebration of the theatre's fourteenth birthday, in the Canadian town.

What a celebration! Fields covered almost every possible angle. He tied in with the local broadcasting station and got messages across twice a day for a week previous to the anniversary. He secured a double page of space and advertising in the local newspapers, that meant a lot to both the merchants and himself—to say nothing of the good-will that was garnered from the newspaper as a result of this move. In order that you may see a sample of what Fields did in the line of advertising this picture, we are showing one of the ads run during the campaign.

Continuing his tie-ups he secured 2,000 souvenir booklets—the advertising in which paid for the printing. He placed signs on all of the main roads leading into Moose Jaw, besides placing them in all directions at the city limits. Through contacting the Beechnut Gum Company and the Life-savers Corp., he secured free gum and candy samples which were distributed to the patrons. Large cards were placed in nearly every store window in town plugging the special features. He arranged with the local florists to supply him with flower souvenirs for the opening day—a move, incidentally, which made quite a hit with the lady patrons. The front of the theatre was also tastefully decorated in keeping with the occasion and the photo will give you some idea of how it looked.

We are also showing, with this article, a picture of the birthday cake, the largest one ever baked in Moose Jaw. Its weight was 350 pounds and the ingredients which went into the baking of it were donated by the local merchants. A card alongside of the cake, which was placed on display in a window location, apprised the lookers-on of this fact. Besides the newspaper publicity that he secured on his campaign, Fields also received a good deal of word-of-mouth comment, and this, too, tended to help him turn in one of the best week's business, which, for that time of the season, and in view of the fact that crops had been unduly poor that year, that he had enjoyed in a good while.

He received wonderful co-operation from the merchants and citizens all during the campaign; and when a showman can get along with people the way he does, it is small wonder that he is one of the representative showmen of Canada. Keep it up, "E. P.," and let's hear some more good news from you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

IMPORTANCE OF THEATRE PROGRAMS!

Our arguments in favor of the use of house programs brought all kinds of reactions and results in much discussion on this subject.

Many members agreed on our stand, while others disagreed. We took all of the angles into consideration and the final analysis was:

USE HOUSE PROGRAMS, by all means.

We cleam that the value of a well laid out program compares in importance with trailers or any other house advertising medium ever employed. And, besides, it offers several advantages not otherwise gained through other mediums. Especially the "Managers' Chat Column," the various announcements about your theatre's service angles, as teaser copy for a coming attraction and many other equally good ideas.

Then we come to what is, perhaps, the most important angle of all. The Mailing List which has proven its importance and effectiveness the world over. Your program is the basis for the starting of such a list and the larger it grows the more people are being kept acquainted with what your theatre is doing and showing.

We have reproduced hundreds of house programs on these pages for the purpose of letting our members and readers see the type of stuff other managers are turning out. If yours has not been shown yet, put us on your mailing list and we will be glad to reproduce your program as well as set forth the highlights, as we see them, in connection with such programs.

Orlove Promoted Free Refreshments For Theatre Patrons

Again proving that the commercial businesses are more than willing to co-operate with showmen on any stunt that will be of of mutual benefit, Louis Orlove, manager of the Uptown Theatre in Milwaukee, Wis., secured a valuable tie-up with a local business enterprise, for the distribution of refreshments to his patrons.

The Company consented to serve the patrons with samples of their products on the mezzanine foyer from August 4 to 17 inclusive.

"The refreshments served consist of portions of their cheese products, Swiss, Pimento, and American, on soda crackers and a sample of one of the following drinks, three kinds of beer, including the famous Blue Ribbon, and ginger ale (wonderful) and sweet drinks of eight different flavors made from pure fruit juice.

A white serving counter covered with a white table cloth was placed in the foyer across which two ladies served the refreshments. Two pure white refrigerators were used to keep the drinks cool. A beautifully decorated display showcase with all the products completed the mezzanine layout. In the lobby on the main floor a refrigerator with glass doors displaying the products was placed with a card stating that refreshments were being served on the mezzanine floor.

"No sales talk was given by the women in charge of the counter nor were any orders taken.

"The advance advertising consisted of a two-sheet card in the lobby one week in advance notifying the patrons that refreshments would be served absolutely free August 4 to 17. A trailer was run on the screen one week in advance announcing the coming of the event, and when the serving was started this trailer was replaced with another which stated that refreshments were now being served.

They made up 15,000 13 x 18-inch heralds printed on both sides using cuts and selling copy on all the pictures to be played at this theatre during the length of the tie-up.

"At the end of each first evening show an announcement was made from the stage informing the patrons that refreshments were being served absolutely free on the mezzanine floor.

The Company sent their window trimmer out in the territory to trim 42 windows with their products. In each of these windows a card with the following wording was centered in the display: 'An Innovation, Pabst Products offer their refreshingly cool delicacies and drinks FREE at the refreshingly cool Uptown Theatre, Aug. 4 to 17 inclusive.' In addition to these 42 windows, they also tied up the A. & P. Tea Stores for a similar display in five of their stores in this neighborhood."

It is very seldom that these nationally known chain grocery stores can be crashed for a tie-up of this sort and Mr. Fred J. Chlupp, head of the sales promotion headquarters in Milwaukee, certainly deserves to be congratulated. Incidentally, it might interest you to know that Mr. Chlupp rated a nice little compliment from Louis on his "ace" work; and we are sure that when he says so—a man must be good.

Forrester Passes Along A Police Tie-Up of Value

Making use of a stunt that can be used on any picture, Eddie Forrester, manager of the World Theatre in Kearney, Nebraska, secured some great publicity for his house, as well as lots of good-will through a tie-up with a local clothing company as part of his campaign for "Safety In Numbers."

A suit of clothes was given to a local young man whose suit measurements compared the nearest to those of the star, Charles Rogers. 2,000 heralds were prepared, for which the theatre paid. 1,000 of these heralds explaining the details of the contest and providing a blank in which the measurements of the person entering the contest could be written, were distributed from house to house. Some were thrown from an airplane, which was one of a fleet making a tour of Nebraska by air, and was witnessed by great crowds.

The police department co-operated with Forrester by supplying him with 5 numbers daily of automobile drivers who were seen using extreme caution in driving about town. These numbers were published in the local daily, and the owners of the license numbers used in the newspaper received two tickets to see "Safety In Numbers" by calling at the box-office.

One dozen roses were sent to a popular girl living in the dormitory of a local college. These roses supposedly came from Charles Rogers, for they carried a tag signed with his name and offering a free admission to the girl receiving the roses. And with 2,000 girls living in the college dormitory, plenty of talk was occasioned.

These stunts, used by Kearney, are all of them, tried and proven business boosters and may be worked on (as we said before) almost any picture you care to use them for. We want to thank him for passing them along so that we can see what he is accomplishing out in Kearney and we hope to hear more of his work in the near future.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

LOOKING OVER THE FIELD WITH "CHICK"

Before returning to the hotel to mop our tired brow, we stopped off at the Fox office again and this time we contacted Bill Champion (appropriate name too) Publicity and Advertising Director for the Seattle Division. Here, again, we find one of those men who understand newspaper ads and layouts and everyone of his creations (not a bad name for them) should be of great value to the thousands of other showmen the country over all anxious to get some live tips on good newspaper stuff. Wait until we show you some of Bill's stuff. You'll agree.

Paramount Capably Managed

WAS determined to see the show at the Paramount in Seatle before I left for Vancouver and points north, so taking friend Freedman at his word, we hiked over to the theatre and—open sesame—at the mere mention of our name, the doorman was all smiles and Freedman's capable assistant (darn my rotten memory for names) came forward to assure us that the house was ours. Whereupon, we immediately suggested that he wrap it up and send it home. We have an idea that it would be a good improvement for Times Square. If we had the theatre, all we would need would be the site—and of course, there are plenty of those things on Broadway. Woddafairytale.

Anyway, it was a corking fine show and the house is certainly managed to perfection. One of those things we are constantly raving about. You know; a theatre where the staff manages to perform their duties without a lot of ballyhoo and excitement. You are conscious of service without having it crammed down your throat. And everything in ship-shape condition.

Freedman the House Manager

Was only a short time ago that Zach "came west young man" and he sure likes this part of the country. But it was like sitting back home at the watchamacallit fire-place talking about familiar places and faces. That was our conversation with Freedman, and a real pleasure it was too. We'll have to be hearing more from and about him, he has the stuff in him that we like so well in the Club. Yes, Zach? We'll be looking for the application by return mail.

Canada the Next Stop

For many years it was the accepted opinion among many American showmen that their brother managers in Canada lacked many of the essentials and ability so badly needed to entitle them to be called real showmen. Even on this trip I met some boys who felt that Canadian showmen were unprogressive and still practiced the antiquated principals of showmanship. I can't pass judgment on how true these opinions were years ago, but our own Club pages have cleared up the point for the present, and I hope, for all time.

"My Country 'Tis Of Thee" and "God Save the King" are two songs with different words but the same music. American showmanship and Canadian showmanship are two different expressions but basically they, too, have the same music. That music being the real honest-to-goodness methods of managing theatres and selling their attractions.

The Club pages have featured, on two separate occasions, special Canadian sections, both were unusually interesting and demonstrated that the type of showmanship employed by our brothers north of the border was on a par with our own and in some cases far better. You need not take my word for it, just dig up your back issues of the Club sections and go through them carefully.

We could, if space permitted, feature Canadian sections at least once a month, but in view of the fact that we are playing to an audience the world over, and Canada represents but one portion of that audience, we have, lately, been running their activities right along with the other mass of stuff sent in continuously. We know that they appreciate our reasons for so doing and they show their sportsmanship by contributing more than ever before.

The pretty Dominion Theatre with its novel entrance on to the mezzanine floor somehow or other reminded us of the dormant Plymouth up in Worcester. You've gotta be good to be about 3500 miles from a spot and still have it brought to your mind in the wink of an eye. But to get back to the Dominion, the house has an inviting entrance and foyer and they even beautified the useless inside box office by putting a pretty little fountain in it. Altogether, the impression was very pleasing and those of the staff whom we encountered were all at ease and discharging their duties without the unnecessary addition of stiffness or over-military bearing. Score one for Canada.

Inquired for friend Ackery, but tough on us, he was not around this evening and the following day we were too tied up driving around the town to catch him. Before leaving Vancouver we phoned, but once again we missed him as he was out to dinner, or something else that sounded like food over the phone.

Coast Goes for Vaude.

Most of the houses were featuring good pictures at this particular time, but, not so strange to relate, the biggest line at opening time was at the Orpheum where vaudeville (pardon, varieties) holds forth. It might be well, at this time, to say that all along the coast from Los Angeles up to Vancouver, we always found the better business at the vaudeville (pardon, varieties) houses. As a matter of fact, taking some of the cities where there was more than one large house, the theatre offering stage attractions, particularly vaudeville (pardon, varieties) always played to the better and most consistent business.

No less than four independent theatre operators confided that their only hope was in vaudeville (pardon, varieties) but it was impossible to secure any.

Strong for the M. R. T. C.

Vancouver, like many of the other cities we've been hitting, is mighty strong in its Club membership. We number no less than fourteen members in this city alone, and maybe that number has been increased since we left New York. There is J. W. Ackery over at the Victoria, Coles at the Regent, Copley holding forth at the Broadway, Dearth pepping things up, and how, at the Capitol, "Doc" Doctor managing the Grandview, Gow, Williamson, Petch and others all too numerous to mention in this one dispatch. I'll tell you more about them in the resume stories of this trip after I get back where typewriters are typewriters and not rotten Coronas.

When the Club first started functioning as an important part of show-business, among the Charter Members we found a goodly few from Canada. These few, augmented by almost SEVENTY-FIVE PERCENT of the present group of Canadian showmen, are our best and most active members. Which, as we figure it, is a definite indication that they are regular guys and corking fine showmen.

Hardly Any Difference

Forgetting for the moment the usual "shootin' gallery" type of theatre to be found in most any city or town, either in the United States or Canada, we found very little, at first glance, to convince us that we were in another country. On the contrary, if we wanted to draw the line a little finer, we could honestly say that for the type of houses we visited, the boys in Canada seemed to be running their houses better than those in the States. But we are not covering some ten thousand miles for the purpose of finding fault with anybody's methods of operating their theatres, they all have their many and varied problems to contend with and since we don't know what those problems are, how can we understand the reasons for something or other being, in our opinion, off color?

In Vancouver we found, grouped on the main street, theatres of all types, styles and species.

The Reason Why

WE might pause for a few moments at this time to explain to some of the boys we failed to meet along the line that the reason is solely lack of time. We cannot afford more than a few days at most of the stops and in that time we are fortunate if we can make a dozen calls. So just bear with us and overlook our apparent neglect. Had we the necessary time we would manage to visit every theatre in and around each city we get into, but under the circumstances we are doing the best we can.

And then, even though we missed you, it might have been a break for you. Perhaps you wanted to talk about some condition existing around your theatre. Perhaps you wondered how to construct a certain kind of front. or use an especial stunt. Oak! You don't have to have me there personally. Drop a line to Club headquarters and we'll present your views on the pages. And let your fellow members help. How's that?

Calgary Bound

I'VE covered a lot of territory on this trip and passed through, what is supposed to be marvelous scenery, but I've yet to meet up with anything that can surpass or equal the trip from Vancouver to Calgary. We'll hit that latter town before long and I'm hoping that all the boys won't be on their vacations at the time I arrive. I do want to take a look at Harold Bishop, Larry Graburn, John Hazza, K. M. Leach and Charlie Straw. Here's hoping my hopes come true. And then in the offing (if an exhibitor may wax romantic???) there is Regina with none other than good old Pete Egan, Dave Borland and J. Graham, besides some of the others in that town who we want to ask about the mass of fine material that they should be passing along through our Club pages. And we want to see what we can get in the line of show experiences that these men have had; so that we can give you a first hand view of the reason why they are keeping the Dominion right up in front of the showman world.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

SCHOOL DAYS SUGGESTIONS!

In a very few weeks the country's schools will be re-opening for the fall session. Are you planning some stunts at your theatre that will tie in with the occasion? Are you going to give away imprinted blotters, pencils, erasers, textbooks, briefcases to your kid patrons? If so—it's time to get busy. If not— then you should.

One of your most profitable good-will angles, and one that will stick for some time, is to hand the kids something that they can take to school with them. It is unnecessary for you to pay out any large sums of money to do it. Your local dealers may be very willing to co-operate with you. There's a good many ways in which they can be worked in. They, too, want all the good-will they can get.

As a suggestion we'd like to point out that in return for advertising on a card in your lobby and on special tickets, your local dealers could supply you with brief cases and pen and pencils sets. Announce that on the Saturday matinee before opening you will give away the school supplies to the kids holding corresponding tickets, the tickets being procured with every purchase at the stores—and admission at the theatre. You could also work in a full page or a double page spread in your local newspaper on this angle, in which the dealers and the theatre wish the kiddies good-luck during the coming season and announce that they are donating the gifts to be presented at the theatre. In order that no kids be disappointed it would be a good move to hand out a ruler to each kid in the theatre, as they can be bought at a minimum cost.

There are ways in which you can display showmanship on this angle. It's up to you. You know your town and you know what will click with your public.

Jean La Roe Engineered Latest Gag Successfully

The mailmen around Columbus are wondering whether Christmas, this year, has come rather early. The reason for their bewilderment lies in the fact that Jean LaRoe, peppy little lady who handles the publicity for the J. Real Neth Theatres in the Ohio city pulled another contest stunt that netted her enough answers to swamp any mail carriers.

When she played "Mamba" at the Neth house Miss La Roe tied up with the local newspaper and they agreed to run a concealed picture contest in which the participants were supposed to discover a hidden photo of the star or featured player and then color the entire photo.

Did they go for it? On the first day, 860 answers were received. The second day found the mailmen perspiring over 1,046 letters addressed to the local newspaper and the third day they carted nearly two thousand more. The total number of answers for the three days were 3,003, with 52 more coming in after the deadline.

Incidentally, we found out one of the reasons why Miss La Roe is so popular around Columbus. We had a nice little chat with her when she dropped into Club headquarters last Monday; and we'd like to say that the mailmen have no reason to complain—and perhaps they don't. Who knows?

J. Mortimer Lewis Pulled One That Proved "The Cats"

Boxing alley cats, professional pugilistic exhibitions and three other sensational exploitation stunts, engineered by J. Mortimer Lewis of the Ocean Hall Theatre on Atlantic City's famous Steel Pier, were used on his recent exploitation campaign for "The Big Fight" and they packed so powerful a wallop that a special detail of police reserves had to be called out to handle the crowds who surged from the boardwalk and the beach to witness them.

In a diminutive ring, set against velvet drapes carrying effective poster cut-outs in the lobby of the Casino, a pair of boxing cats, all rigged out in nifty collars and real boxing gloves, did their stuff. A male referee and his charming assistant stood by to see that no infractions of the rules took place, while the cheering crowds did some tall rooting for their favorites.

Every evening during the run of the picture, between the hours of half past seven and eleven o'clock, professional boxers put on a fast exhibition of the "manly art." Each round lasted one minute, with intervals of three minutes between encounters. The bouts were staged in the open air, on the boardwalk of the pier, with "Big Fight" banners and posters planted on every spot near the ring.

To draw the attention of the automobile trade, thousands of yellow cards, prepared in the form of a summons, were tagged to every parked car. The tags were facsimiles of "tickets," with copy reading: "This is not a summons but an invitation to come to the Steel Pier to see 'The Big Fight'." The reverse side carried the likeness of Jack Dempsey, who starred in the stage version of the Belasco production, and some teaser copy.

As a regular street throwaway, "Big Fight" tickets were distributed, made up in standard form, with "Tiger" Guinn Williams and "Battler" Tony Stabeneau as the opposing contenders. This throwaway plus fifty cents entitled the holder to a ringside seat at any time during the engagement.

SAMUEL SILVERMAN Says:

"Have been following your MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB for some time. . . . I think that it is one of the best ideas that has ever been promoted in a long time. It should prove to be of immeasurable assistance to any and all exhibitors who want to keep right out in front."

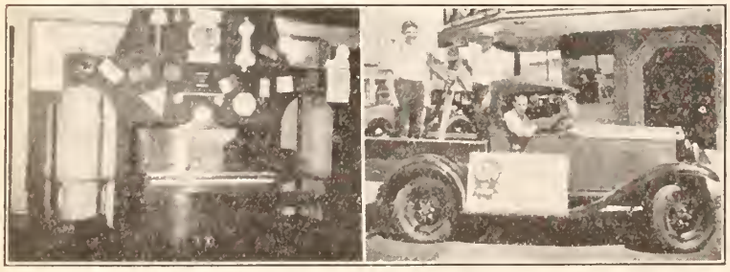
Know North Platte Gag Was Business Booster For Miller

Here's one that has been a favorite for some time; and it most always manages to click to good box-office receipts. Of course, it entails a lot of work; but what stunt doesn't? However, Chet Miller, manager of the Fox Theatre in North Platte, Neb., decided to use it and he certainly put it over in fine fashion.



Labeling the gag "Know North Platte Contest," he set out to work up interest in the town and theatres by going about the town and photographing the various buildings and leading business enterprises. Nearly every merchant in town had his business photographed. There would be side, front and back views; some of the houses being taken from the side, some from the front and others from the back, making identification difficult. Chet himself went about town shooting the various scenes and he may be seen in one of the photos which accompany this article.

CONTEST BLANK

Each week the theatre showed the pictures of twelve business houses. The stunt ran for a period of six weeks. The local merchants furnished the various prizes in merchandise which were given away to the patrons fortunate enough to guess or identify nearest correctly familiar spots in their town. Over five hundred dollars worth of merchandise was promoted by Chet from the local dealers, who, in view of the fact that they did not have to pay to get in on the stunt, donated freely of their articles. In addition to this, they also paid for space in a special two-section edition of the local paper that Chet prevailed upon the editors to run. The donations of the merchants included a piano, hat, hand bag, toilet set, chime clock, a free dinner for a family not exceeding five, permanent wave, furniture, groceries, free subscriptions to the local paper, flowers, candy, and many other articles too numerous to mention.

Along with this story we are also presenting one of the contest blanks which were given to the patrons as they entered the house. After the reel was run they marked down their selections and put them in the box placed in the lobby for just such a purpose.

In order to stimulate interest a special weekly prize of two Scrip books was donated by the theatre. The stunt went over very well and in addition to all of the free publicity and added business, Miller also secured plenty of publicity. If you should want to use this stunt but are stumped because you do not want to spend money for a movie camera and the film, a timely suggestion is that in which you can use slides instead of film. The slides can probably be made up at small cost and the stunt should more than repay you for any money expended. Think it over, and if you think it will click in your house, by all means use it. And if you want any more dope on it, we are sure that Chet will give it to you. Are we right, Chet?

George A. Miller Sold "Swing High" In Cooperstown

Even though he is located in a town that does not permit any great exploitation work being pulled off, George A. Miller, manager of Smalley's Theatre in Cooperstown, N. Y., manages to turn out a creditable ballyhoo for his campaign on "Swing High."

In the photo we are showing, you can get an idea of the effectiveness of the stunt. Theatre employees were dressed up to represent clowns and sent about the streets with the regular ballyhoo truck. In order to add still more pep to it, Miller secured an old-time bicycle from the private collection of Mr. Smalley. A young boy was used to pedal it about the streets, following the truck whenever possible.

In his clown costume the boy attracted considerable attention, and as he stayed pretty close to the truck, the horn of which was blown at intervals in order to attract attention, a great deal of interest was shown. The entire stunt proved to be a box-office builder and as it did not cost a cent, everyone participating being on the theatre's payroll, it was sure to satisfy. We are glad to note that George, despite the heat, is still trying to keep his house up to normal and we know that if he continues the same brand of showmanship he has displayed in the past business is bound to be good. How about it, George?

Read Sherred's Ad; Perhaps You Will Want To Use It

No matter how hot the weather, anyone visiting Carl W. Sherred at the Mishler Theatre in Altoona, Pa., will always find him to be in the same condition as his house, the sign outside which proclaims "Cool and Comfortable"—so with Carl working like that he is sure to turn out an angle or two that will be found profitable.

When he played "The Three Sisters," he decided that a stunt would be necessary in order to stimulate interest in the film. Knowing the drawing power of good-will he arranged to invite all of the mothers in Altoona to witness the picture at no cost to themselves the only stipulation being that they be accompanied by daughter or son. A notice to this effect was placed in the ad run daily in the local newspaper and we thought that since we had a copy of the ad on hand you would like to see it, so we have reproduced it.

Having been in show business for a number of years, Sherred is well qualified for the position he now holds and his activities on the Club pages more than prove our statement. If you will look this ad over you will notice that he plugs his shorts and other attractions in addition to the feature picture. All of his work is done on the same style. Whenever the opportunity arises for him to get in special notices on his house, he takes full advantage of it. We are glad to see that he is still displaying his corking showmanship and also to know that his other interest, the stock company at the local Park Theatre, is making out all right. Let's hear from you again, Carl, so that we can pass along your work to the rest of the Club members and readers.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Shooting Gallery In Lobby Produced Plenty Of Comment

Our lady member, Theresa Nibler, manager of the Electric Theatre in Springfield, Ohio, can help herself to another showmanship medal for the work she did recently on "The Border Legion" when she erected a shooting gallery in the lobby of the theatre.

She fixed up an old shadow box and hung the marker in the center; the persons hitting the bullseye being admitted as guests to see the picture.

The marker was hard to hit as it hung free, and as the wind blew, it would move back and forth so that only an average of one out of every two hundred shots hit the bullseye. Daisy air-rifles were used to shoot at the target.

So great was the interest manifested in the stunt that even the ladies stood in line awaiting their turns to take a pop at the moving target. The shooting gallery was run each day during engagement of picture from 2 until 4 in the afternoons and from 7 to 9 in the evenings.

Each person was entitled to two shots and as the crowd about the shooting gallery grew denser this was cut down to one. The idea was a natural from the minute it was put into action and Miss Nibler is again to be complimented on her showmanship. And, by the way, Miss Nibler, since all of the Club members are interested in knowing what you are doing, we hope to hear from you again in the very near future, and in addition to your contribution why not give us a photo and a little information on your career in show business so that we can publish it in order that those showmen who were not members when you first enrolled can be introduced to you?

J. R. Peters' Street Ballyhoo Helped Him On Feature Selling

Though he is located in a neighborhood house in Indianapolis, Indiana, it doesn't stop J. R. Peters, manager of the Ritz Theatre from keeping right in front with the leaders of the deluxers in the city.

Whenever the larger houses display some fine exploitation, Peters will be found right alongside with a stunt equally as good. When he played "Lord Byron of Broadway," he decided to go right into enemy territory, especially since he had a first run, and give the city a flash of what he was showing.

He tied up a local automobile dealer and the dealer loaned him a brand new model. He then hired a man to dress in full evening outfit, gave him a cane and suitcase to carry and started the ball a-rolling. On one side of the suitcase a sign proclaimed that the man was "Lord Byron of Broadway" and in town for a brief visit at the Ritz. He was driven about the town by a colored chauffeur.

The car was driven slowly about the business district and wherever the crowds were thickest the man would get out and walk around. He visited the finest restaurants and hotels in the city and consequently was much discussed by the downtown public. Peters made up some small stickers which carried copy: "Have you seen 'Lord Byron of Broadway' on the streets?" Watch for him To-day and To-morrow," and they were pasted all over the city. The same teaser copy was also run in the local newspapers.

The cost of the entire stunt, in view of the fact that a capacity business was done, was exceedingly small, and Peters proved that his merchandising could rank with any.

R. S. A. SPIELS AGAIN!

"There's too many talk men broadcasting what they have done in Oshkosh—just a lot of talk. What is talk. You open and close the mouth rapidly while the bellows in the throat pump out the gas in the brain; and when it's all over what does it amount to? Just a bundle of words, which don't increase the box-office receipts.

J. Lloyd Dearth Of Canada Doesn't Mind "Dot Ditches"

Even Canada is not immune from the Tom Thumb Golf Course invasion. And just to prove to you that the showmen up around there have plenty to contend with we are showing a photo of a golf course upon which J. Lloyd Dearth, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Vancouver, B. C., set to work with a vengeance.

Through his tie-up Dearth was enabled to place cards, similar to the one we are showing in the photo. In every pigmy plot he placed a notice on the approach to the most difficult hole that a free ticket to the theatre would be awarded the person making the hole in "one." To date, an average of one pass a day has been given to patrons on each course and when you stop to figure it out we are sure that you will agree it is pretty cheap advertising.

It is certainly a pleasure to know that the Canadian showmen are right on the job taking care that no one gets in to lure their business away. This angle used by Dearth has been pressed into service by a good many showmen and we are of the opinion that if you haven't tried it yet (providing the courses bother you) it would be a good plan to give it a chance. We want to thank Mr. Dearth for letting us see what he is doing and we are sure that since he is displaying such interest in the Club he will continue. Keep up the good work, Lloyd, and let's hear some more from you.

Lawter Conveyed Approval Of Film By Telephone Calls

Feeling that his coming attraction, which he had witnessed at a preview, merited it, A. H. Lawter, manager of the Jefferson Theatre in Huntington, Ind., decided to use the phone to convey his personal endorsement of it to his patrons.

Accordingly, every resident of Huntington, who possessed a telephone, was called and informed that one of the finest pictures ever to be made for the screen, was soon to be shown at the local theatre. As the town is a small one, Lawter's message more than went across. It did not cost him very much as a special rate was obtained, which, in view of the tremendous good-will value of the stunt, meant a lot.

This angle, if used in a small town, is always certain to be productive of good results and we would suggest that you put it away for future reference, and if, and when, local conditions permit, that you use it. Thanks, "A. H.," for passing this along to us as we feel it will be welcomed by a good many showmen who might have been looking for a stunt of this sort. Keep up your good work and let's hear from you some more so that we can keep the rest of the Club posted.

ANOTHER ANGLE!

Taking a tip from Herman Bamberger, live-wire manager of the Kentucky Theatre in Louisville, Ky., a number of our members are watching their newsreels more closely.

The reason lies in the fact that Bamberger, being well aware of the Watson-Bamberger (no relation) baby mix-up and its subsequent nation-wide newspaper publicity was enabled to cash in at the box-office by advertising that they could be seen in his weekly news release.

A boy, wheeling a baby carriage which carried copy relative to the scene, was dispatched around town. Considerable interest was aroused. As a result Bamberger did a land-office business that evening.

You, too, can cash in on this idea. Keep your eye on your newsreels and your shorts. You can never tell when there'll be something of local interest in them. And when it appears—hit the line hard! The added business and word-of mouth publicity will more than make up for any extra work.

Irving Feinman Is NowLocatedAtThe Culver, Brooklyn,

While located at the Cross Bay Theatre in Ozone Park, L. I., New York, Irving Feinman, go-getting showman who managed the house, turned out some great work; and, true to his promise to continue being an active member, he gives us a chance to look over the last stunt he pulled before his transfer to the Culver Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y.

With "Mammy" to plug in two houses, the Cross Bay and the Ozone Park, some tall showmanship was necessary, so he hastened to tie up with a local automobile dealer. He persuaded the dealer to lend him a truck for three days. On top of the truck he mounted a slice from a painted giant watermelon which had beent part of a ten-day lobby display, and which you may see in the photos. The truck was driven around the city and a group of American Legion Orchestra men concealed inside furnished music during the trip. He also sold the dealer the idea of printing ten thousand co-operative heralds to be distributed at the two houses. In addition to this, the dealer also furnished six watermelons as prizes for a watermelon eating contest which was held on the stage of the theatre.

These novel ideas created a great deal of comment in the town and were productive of a box-office boost for Feinman. In the photo at the beginning of this story you can get a flash at Irving and his assistant. As they both sport mustaches, we can't tell you that the showman with the mustache is Irving. However, he is on the right in the picture and on the left of his assistant, reading left to right.

"Golden Calf" Float Spoke Plenty For Craite's Ability

Whether or not a showhouse is the only theatre in town, it is absolutely necessary that a showman go out and sell his feature. That is the theory by which I. J. Craite, manager of the Fort Theatre in Fort Atkinson, Wis., works, and he has found it to be of tremendous help.

No matter what picture he is endeavoring to sell, he tries always to put a novel touch to it so that he can bring in a couple of more dollars. One of the photos we are showing is a recent ballyhoo used for the William Haines film "Navy Blues."

He promoted a truck and secured the services of one of the local jazz bands. The members of the band were arrayed in yachting caps and while the truck cruised about the town and the outlying vicinity they furnished some real "hot" music, plugging the theme songs in the picture aplenty. Banners strung on both sides of the truck proclaimed that the fleet would dock Sunday at the Fort Theatre with William Haines in "Navy Blues." As the truck was driven around town and the strains of music wafted over the scene, many windows in the residential sections were raised and many necks in the business locale craned, as the residents of the town hastened to see the meaning of the music.

In the other photo you will notice a unique ballyhoo that was the subject of much comment. The local Moose lodge held a celebration and announced that they wanted floats for their parade. As a result, Craite submitted the one we are showing which acted as a plug for "The Golden Calf." It is interesting to note that his float was adjudged the best of the 30 entrants and was most applauded and cheered with the result that the picture received more than usual attention.

These mediums proved to be very effective for Craite and the publicity he obtained, with its subsequent patronage result, more than repaid him for the slight expenditures. We are glad to note that this showman is going to be a very active Club member, and we hope that when he sends us in his next contribution he will also include his photograph.

Prendergast Has Some Great Tie-ups In Jamaica, B. W. I.

Being located in Port Maria, Jamaica, British West Indies, doesn't mean a thing to E. N. Prendergast, manager of the Lyric Theatre, who, though handicapped as to theatrical material to use in plugging his films, still manages to turn out some very showmanlike work and keep the public flocking to his house.

To try out a novel plan some time ago, he arranged to book in, on Sunday nights, five pictures which he considered of exceptional merit. He then ran a notice to the effect that the public was invited, at the conclusion of the films, to write any criticism of them, with prizes being offered for the best letters. The competition proved to be very interesting and hundreds of answers were received.

When the winning letters were selected, Prendergast had them printed on plain paper and distributed for miles around, thus bringing his house to the attention of the natives and at the same time showing that his theatre offered nothing but first class attractions, and not because he said so, but because the patrons thought enough of them to put their views down in black and white. As this angle had never before been covered in Port Maria considerable interest was shown. Prendergast passes this along in the event that some of his fellow members may be looking for just such an angle.

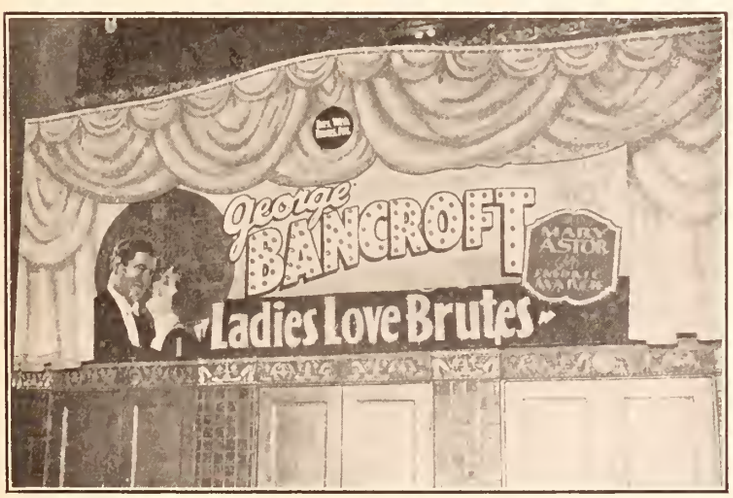
Boucher Secured Publicity For The Silver Anniversary

With such popularity as Frank Boucher, district manager of Warner Brothers' Maryland Theatre, enjoys it was only natural that he would secure a good deal of publicity from the local newspapers on his campaign for the Warner Brothers' Silver Anniversary.

He secured a special six-page section in one of the leading Baltimore papers, that was devoted entirely to text matter and ads on the silver anniversary. As an additional plug he made up a giant telegram, that required four messenger boys to carry it and sent it to the Mayor of Baltimore.



The message, sent by Henry Warner, president of the Warner Corporation, said: "Please accept my thanks for your kind letter of July 31, felicitating me on Warner Brothers' Silver Anniversary. I extend a cordial invitation to participate in this anniversary during its celebration by our theatres in your fair city. Regards."

This stunt hit the second page of the newspapers and Frank received a three-column picture on it. And when you can do that with a well known sheet, securing valuable space at no cost to your house, that's doing something right. Frank has been active for so long, we know that he takes it all in the day's work. So let's hear some more from you very soon, Frank.

Lobby Flashes Of Merit May Be Found At Gary's House

Lobby Flashes, more than any other medium constitute a large part of the show merchandising of to-day. In recent issues of the Managers' Round Table Club we have shown you a good many ways in which showmen used available lobby space. Sometimes the space would be devoted to a plug on the coming attraction in the form of a stage setting; sometimes for special cut-outs and if you recall, we gave you an instance recently of how Hugh Borland turned his lobby into a race track.

The photo we are showing here will give you an idea of what R. C. Gary, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Des Moines, Ia., does to use up the space over his exits. A special cut-out is placed there to plug the attractions for the coming week. And when we say special we mean special. In the photo you may be able to see how he plugged the star of the film by studding his name with canary colored electric lights.

As the patrons were leaving the theatre, it was a sure thing that the lighted lamps would draw their attention to the display and that much done, they were already more than half sold on the film, due to the fact that Gary is another showman who believes in using catchlines that sell and his business has more than once proven the strength of the copy he uses. And by the way, after he finishes with the display as an advance plug, it is taken outside and used on the front during the run of the picture. By doing something like this you not only boost up interest in your attractions but also keep the expenses low.

WALLY ALLEN SHIFTS!

Congratulations are in order for Wally Allen who is now connected with Oscar Doob's office, handling publicity and exploitation for the Loew Theatres in New York City.

This energetic showman was connected for quite some time with the Publix organization as exploitation chief for Jacksonville, Tampa, Miami and the other Southern Florida cities.

Those members who have followed his work on the Club pages from time to time know what he is capable of doing in the line of turning out exploitation and publicity that will bring them into the theatres. We extend him our heartiest congratulations and we are sure that he is going to have some new ideas to pass along to us in the very near future.

Local Newspaper Tie-Up Promoted By Amos Clicked

Late bookings have long been the bane of a showman's daily life, and it was due to just such a predicament that Charles H. Amos, manager of the Imperial Theatre in Asheville, N. C., who always planned publicity campaigns for every picture well in advance, had to work fast to get in a few plugs for "Romance."

One tie-up with the local newspaper was perhaps the outstanding stunt of the short campaign—and one that resulted in untold publicity for the picture.

Through the co-operation of the paper, a "find the line" contest was used. Anybody could enter the contest and all that was necessary was to find the ads in which each of the lines listed (below) appeared. Copy the ads and lines, or cut them out and paste them neatly on a sheet of paper, indicating which line goes in which ad. The ten nearest correct and neatest answers received each day were given a guest ticket to Greta Garbo's latest "Romance."

Amos' showmanship was seen in the vast amount of answers which the postman deposited on the desk the next morning, proving that when a showman is pressed for time, it makes no difference; he always manages to get something out of it. And the something in this case was additional business.

Syd Oshrin Shot Local Events To Present At Allerton

With a neighborhood clientele such as Syd Oshrin, manager of the Allerton Theatre in the Bronx, N. Y., has built up, it is small wonder that he knows practically every way to keep them coming into his theatre, week in and week out.

Syd found out long ago that one of his best mediums was to put the patrons' pictures on the screen. So when an advertising company was pulling some sort of a proposition in conjunction with the local dealers, in which they took pictures of the interiors and exteriors of the dealers' stores, Syd hopped in and persuaded them to take pictures of the Confirmation and Graduation exercises which the schools and churches were holding at the time.

The company went about the neighborhood shooting the local events and, aided by Syd's publicity, they did a wonderful job. When the day rolled around that marked the opening showing of the picture at the Allerton, hundreds of kids were lined up to see their faces in the movies. And not only the kids, but plenty of adults were also on hand, as they, too, had been "shot" when the local dealers' stores were pictured. The entire campaign went over, as Syd puts it, "like a house afire," and was a financial success since the storekeepers paid the entire cost.

In addition to this sort of stunt, Syd is continually boosting up the house's good-will by weekly invitations to a local sanitarium. Good work Syd! Keep it up.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Hiehle Is Master At Bringing Them In From The Sticks

If every resident for miles around isn't aware of the fact that the Midland Theatre in Newark, Ohio, has a cooling plant it won't be the fault of Edward W. Hiehle, the manager of the house, who has taken every means during the summer to keep the public informed that they can cool off at the theatre.

As a contact plug for his rural business Hiehle printed up a number of cards, measuring 3½ by 8½ inches, in black on green stock that carried a message about his cooling plant. To stimulate interest still further, the bottom of the card bore a coupon inviting the holder to attend the show at the Midland. The coupon was addressed to the residents of the neighboring county and was void unless accompanied by one paid admission. In other words, the holder of the coupon paid for his friend's ticket and received free admission for himself. Since he knows local conditions very well, Hiehle knew that this stunt would click just as well as if he offered an entirely free admission.

In addition to the cooling card Hiehle also sent out his monthly program which is made up in attractive colors on the same style cardboard as the herald. As Ed is a very active showman, we look forward to hearing more about his work and we hope in the very near future to pass it along. What do you say about it, Ed?

McKoy's Selling Is Still Leading Biz. To The Box-Office

We believe, in view of the work turned out by James H. McKoy, manager of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., for "For the Defense," he is well qualified to at any time hang out a shingle declaring that he gives lessons in showmanship.

On the main floor he constructed a large box that was covered with black velour (4x3x3). A panel next to this called attention to the display and requested that patrons gaze into the future entertainment. On top of the box was a very large gold fish bowl turned upside down. Inside the box along the top were a number of colored lights on flashers. And beneath the lights was a miniature court room made with the people cut out of stills from the picture—using only the main cast. These stills were mounted on cardboard before cutting out with a cut awl. A card by each character told about their connection with the story.

The stunt was a knockout and our only regret is that we haven't a picture of it to show you. However, in conjunction with this article we are showing a couple of illustrations that will give you an idea of what a versatile showman McKoy is.

A badly wrecked automobile was secured, bannered and placed in front of theatre on opening day of picture and remained there throughout run of picture. Copy on the banner read, "A Woman Was Driving This Car—The accident killed one man; revealed to Wm. Powell that the woman he loved was double crossing him. Yet in court Powell perjures himself to protect this woman. Can love be the plea FOR THE DEFENSE? See Wm. Powell in 'For the Defense'—Olympia—Now showing."

A window display with the Florida Light & Power Co. was made up as an electric refrigeration window "For the Defense of Your Home and Health." All of these angles, in fact, were the necessary ones to put the picture across; and it is really no surprise to us to know that every one of them clicked.

Free Advertising From Department Store Was Winner

An interesting tie-up was employed by J. Malone, manager of the Garden Theatre, Paterson, N. J., as the basis of his show selling campaign "In Gay Madrid."

Malone arranged with the Mart Co., the largest department store in Paterson, for a novel tie-up, in the following manner:

Whenever the thirteenth of the month falls on a Friday, the store advertises "Lucky 13th" special sales, and as the picture opened on this day, and Dorothy Jordan, the feminine lead, has thirteen letters in her name, large cut-out letters were made which were hung in different but prominent parts of the store throughout the building. Below each letter was a card with copy reading "'In Gay Madrid'—Garden Theatre Now."

The store also bought large display space in the newspapers in which they called attention to this stunt, and to the fact that those arranging the different letters to spell the name of a famous star who appeared at the Garden Theatre, that week, would receive free tickets to see the picture. In this display, only the name of Ramon Navarro was used exclusively.

As this stunt had not been used before in the city, it attracted considerable comment from the customers of the store.

Irving Bergman Has Some Good Ideas For Show Selling

One of the reasons for the continued good business at the Fox State Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., is that the exploitation turned out there is just what the neighborhood pays attention to. Another reason is because Irving Berman, the manager, is always on the job seeing that his shows are sold properly.

No matter what picture Berman plays at his house, he is always sure to dig up a stunt or two that will mean a few dollars extra in box-office business. Whether the picture has had a Broadway run or if it is only an ordinary Western, it is sure to be plugged because he feels that any picture that plays his house is deserving of a little work on it. Of course, he is a bit handicapped as to exploitation; but the work he turns out more than serves his purpose.

When he played "The Cuckoos', he dressed up a man in a bathing suit and barrel, outfitted him with a derby, a cigar and rolled socks, and sent him walking about the town. A sign on the barrel said: "I am cuckoo and you are cuckoo, too, if you don't see "The Cuckoos." The stunt created a lot of comment from the local residents, and wherever the man went plenty of laughter was sure to result. Then there's "The Florodora Girl" ballyhoo. We are showing this one in the photo accompanying this story.

Berman secured an old relic that had been a classy car in the days of the Florodora Girl. A woman was hired to dress in the costume of the halcyon era and be chariotted around town. As the car went at snail's pace the sign on the back of it giving picture and playdate was easily discernible. As a result of this stunt business was increased perceptibly during the run of the film and proved once more to Berman that exploitation, whether on a large or small scale, will always pay.

We want to thank him for passing this account so that we can be kept posted about what the Brooklyn showmen are doing and we hope to hear more from this live-wire very soon.

10,000 Youngsters Were On Hand For Circuit Free Picnic

Catering to ten thousand kids at a party is quite some job, as Jules S. Wolfe, manager of the Christie Theatre in Toronto, Ont., Can., will testify, but nevertheless that is just what he did not so long ago when it was decided that the circuit of which he is a manager would hold a joint picnic for the members of the "Children's Matinee Club."

Wolfe was assigned the task of securing publicity and tie-ups for the many houses of the chain. The picnic was held on the Canadian National Exhibition grounds. In addition to inviting the kids, the parents were also extended an invitation and this helped to swell the ten thousand head quota a good many more. Through his tie-ups Wolfe was enabled to secure special street cars for each house. The cars bearing the guests left their respective houses at the appointed time and as they whizzed along the street carrying immense banners announcing the occasion they mere the objects of much staring and comment.

Local companies donated twelve thousand bottles of pop in addition to 150 gallons of ice cream, which were dispensed to the guests. The only cost to the theatre for the entire affair was the expense involved in the purchase of the prizes awarded to the winners of various games. Wolfe informs us that the amount of publicity gained and the good-will created more than repaid them for their trouble. We are very glad to pass along this account as we feel sure that Wolfe's fellow members in the Club and brother managers in Canada are more than interested in learning how he sells his shows. Let's hear some more from you real soon, Jules, so that we can keep posted on your work.

Cohen Costumed Mannequin To Sell Crawford Cinema

When you have a lobby display like the kind the cut shows you can be pretty certain that it is going to attract a lot of attention. It did for Irving Cohen, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Grand Island, Nebraska, and if you can work the same stunt it should click for you too.

Through a tie-up with one of the leading department stores in the city, Cohen secured a wax mannequin completely attired in a stunning wedding outfit and placed it on display in his lobby. A beautiful piece of art work served as the background and the flash that the entire display created would have had anyone stopping; so it is small wonder that people were asking each other whether they had seen the display at the Capitol. And when play dates for "Our Blushing Bride" rolled around, Cohen's box-office benefited plenty as a result of his work. All that the entire stunt cost him was a credit line for the dealer, which was placed in the foreground of the display.

Here's an opportunity for you to do some promoting for your house and if local conditions warrant you ought to turn out work of this sort that will be productive of word-of-mouth comment and additional business for you.

Wally Allen Made Use Of Stationery As Byrd Film Plug

As usual, when showmen get a picture that presents as many merchandising possibilities as this new film, "With Byrd at the South Pole," offers, they are going to do a lot with it. Take Wally Allen, the former publicity man for Publix, working down around Florida.

Wally turned out some great stuff on the picture. His first gag was the imprinting of the stationery used by the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville. Alongside the letter head he placed two cuts, in blue. The left cut showed a picture of Byrd and the right hand one, a midget advertising mat. Over the head, "Florida Theatre," he printed the playdate. In this manner the picture came in for some fine publicity whenever the stationery was used. And as you may easily deduce, this angle can be worked on any picture at all, and it is especially good should you decide to use the personal letter slant. In addition to this, Wally also managed to crash the front pages of the local papers by supplying them with pictures of Commander Byrd's expedition. The papers gave the company a credit line.

He arranged a soda fountain tie-up in Lakeland that went over very well. He made up a bunch of stickers which carried copy reading: "Try Our South Pole Sundae—It's a Byrd." The stickers were placed at all of the leading fountains and the comment which they created bid fair to re-act towards the box-office.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"Tiny Tins" Used On "Tiny Turfs" By Wm. L. Hendricks

"Tom Thumb Golf is Tom Thumb Golf," says William L. Hendricks, managing director of the Capitol Theatre in Steubenville, Ohio; "but tell Howard Waugh for me, that when I play on the pigmy plots, I am transported around. And to prove it, I am forwarding indisputable evidence in the form of a photo showing me and a couple of other 'hard working men,' giving the local course the once over in a couple of Austin cars that I promoted to plug Jack Oakie, in 'The Sap from Syracuse.'"

Hendricks is right. Here's the photo and there's the cars. Ever play golf in a couple of Austins? No? Well, we know another showman who has gone this gag one better. Who? Howard Waugh! Howard tipped us off the other day that he uses the Austins to play polo with.

A very humane person at heart, Howard could not see the poor ponies suffer; so he decided that if he must play polo (and he knew he must) it would be necessary for him to adopt some other method. He could have chosen roller skates, kiddie coasters, kiddie cars or any of the other menaces to a juvenile's existence; but they were all too tame for him. He had outgrown them the way he outgrew last year's suit (from a too hearty indulgence in food). Then when the Austin made its appearance, small wonder that he was overjoyed. The rest is history; or we should say his story—for that's how we secured the dope on his use of the Austin for polo. But enough, let's get back to William L. Hendricks, who, after all is entitled to this space; and he deserves it, even more perhaps than Waugh, to whom tie-ups are a racket; and he an acknowledged racketeer.

The cars driven by Hendricks and his party made their way about the golf course stopping at every hole. Now and then they would be stuck in a sand trap or some equally dangerous "hazard"; but it was just the work of a moment to lift the cars out of the difficulty. The eighteen holes were played, the stunt was over, the picture was made. As a result this story is ended; or maybe it isn't, since Waugh is certain to answer Hendricks on this gag. So watch the Club pages and read the latest developments in Hendricks' war with Waugh.

John Ward Featured A Novel Herald For "Caught Short"

Unwilling to be caught, even though he was playing "Caught Short," John V. Ward, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Niagara Falls, Ont., Canada, turned out a very effective novelty herald in conjunction with his campaign for the selling of the picture.

A bunch of plain letter envelopes were imprinted with the words: "Confidential — Tips on a Sure Thing," and handed out to the patrons. Upon investigation, the envelopes were found to contain a card, measuring 2¾ by 4½ inches, printed in black on orange stock, which carried copy plugging the film. The copy headed by a catchline read: "A Dividend in Laughs! Take Our Tip. Before you invest another cent in entertainment clean up with these gals. See how they played Wall Street. Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in 'Caught Short' with Anita Page. An all-talking picture that is a laugh panic. If necessary borrow the admission price. Plenty of dividends in hilarious laughter. (Theatre and Play Dates)."

As the stock market has only recently been a topic for considerable discussion, the heralds were doubly interesting and the fact that Ward's business jumped up during play dates more than proved to him that the slight expenditure the cost of printing involved merited his using the stunt.

Harry Herman Introduced Town To Best Grin Stunt

Disdaining to take a tip from Robert W. Service, who offers advice about grinning in one of his poems, Harry Herman, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Waterloo, Iowa, decided to take Jake Oakie's grin and popularize it in his town.

He tied up with the local newspaper and they agreed to assist him. The paper employed a roving photographer, who went around the streets of Waterloo, taking pictures of Waterloo's most infectious grins. These smiling faces made good local art work when published in the Tribune. Five dollars was paid by the Paramount Theatre to the person adjudged as having the most infectious grin. The theatre also paid for the amount of the engravings. In return, the Paramount theatre and the motion picture, "The Sap From Syracuse," received stories and illustrations five days in advance of the picture's opening and two days during the current run.

And with all of that publicity to his credit it was no surprise to Harry to see them lined up a half hour before the box-office opened on the first day of the picture. Good work, Harry.

Ray S. Nowitzky Displayed Showmanship On This

An angle that was not overlooked in connection with his showing of "With Byrd at the South Pole" was productive of good publicity for Ray S. Nowitzky, manager of the State Theatre in Reading, Pa., when he cashed in on the radio angle which proved such an asset to Byrd at Little America.

As a stunt for his opening show of the Byrd picture, Nowitzky arranged for a man named Francill, who was billed as "The Radio Wizard," to give a demonstration of radio control in the booth of the theatre. Of course, the newspaper men were to be present. So promptly at the apointed starting time the man was on hand to start the show by radio control. In order that you may have a better idea of how the gag was engineered, we are showing a photo of the stunt which took place in the booth of the theatre.

The specialty landed in all of the local newspapers and the house, as a result, came in for some valuable publicity at no cost at all. Another gag that caused wide-spread comment was the freezing of colored cakes of ice by radio control. According to Nowitzky there are many possibilities for radio tie-ups on this picture and we are glad to pass along these few tips. Another stunt, which Nowitzky tells us will work pretty good is to have a radio expert lecture on the usefulness of the radio with Byrd. "And," he concludes, "if these stunts are used properly, you may even get front page space. . . ." And seeing that Ray has landed his house on the front pages a number of times, we feel that he must certainly know the stunts' value. Keep up the good work, Ray and let's hear from you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

More New Members

J. J. SCHOLER manages the Orpheum Theatre in Phoenix, Arizona, for the Publix outfit. Mr. Scholer has been in the show game for quite some time and as a result has been turning out some great work. As we know that he is a live-wire we are sure that he will want to be represented on our pages often in order that his fellow members and managers can see what he is doing. And the best way to accomplish this, "J. J.", is to be an active member.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HARRY ECCLES is the general manager of the Gem Theatre and the other King Enterprises in Oakland, Cal. Mr. Eccles has some nice things to say about the Club and he also wants to be remembered to his old friend Walter Dell Fleck, who, he found out through the medium of the Club, is now in Waterloo, Iowa. With a general manager's position under his belt Mr. Eccles must be pretty busy, but we are sure that he will find time to keep us posted on his work.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

E. L. ROSS manages the Rialto Theatre in Madison, W. Va. The Rialto is a pretty little house of three hundred and sixty seats —equipped with Western Electric and showing the best in films. With such a background it must be a pleasure to Mr. Ross to sell his shows and we'd like to hear from him every now and then so we can pass along accounts of what he is doing to bring them in.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOE HERMAN is the assistant manager of the Culver Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. He comes proposed for membership by Irving Feinman, manager of the house. Recommended by a showman of Irving's calibre, we feel that Joe is in for a lot of learning on the subject of show selling. And we know that under Irving's tutelage it will only be a matter of time before he is handling a house of his own. Keep us in touch with your work, Joe, so that we can see how you are progressing.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HAROLD LLOYD manages the Capitol Theatre in Leamington, Ontario, Canada. He has been in the show game for 18 years and for a time was connected with one of our regional chairmen, Pete Egan. Lloyd proves that he is going to be very active by giving us an account of a recent co-operative page he promoted from his local merchants, that went over very well. Good, Harold, and when you can get results like that we know that you are going to pass along your methods to your fellow showmen and members of the Club.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

MAURICE DAVIS is the owner-manager of the M Street Theatre in Washington, D. C. Doing all the booking and selling of his shows, Davis is afforded an opportunity to display some work that is out of the ordinary and we hope that he will favor us with future accounts of his show-selling so that we can pass them along.

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

MURRAY ALPER is the manager of the Commodore Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. Judging from the work displayed by the showmen who handle the Fox houses in this city, Murray must be turning out some good stuff in order to keep right in line with the leaders. What do you say about passing some of it along to us Murray?

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

L. W. BEVEL manages the Princess Theatre in Harriman, Tenn. Since we have seen accounts of Mr. Bevel's work we know that he is a very active showman. In addition to handling the house, he also paints his own displays, and if you'll keep your eyes on the Club pages we are sure that you will find his work there.

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

BOB E. "Smiling" LEWIS manages the Paradise Theatre in Westallis, Wisconsin. Westallis is a pretty little suburb outside of Milwaukee, and make believe that Bob doesn't sell his shows. Being an original showman he introduces a lot of novel angles in his work; and we are going to show you one or two in future issues of the Club pages. Right, "Smiling" Bob?

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

GRAHAM JEFFRIES is the manager of the Fotosho Theatre in Miami, Fla. Located right in with the rest of the live-wires of Miami, Mr. Jeffries is stepping along to keep up with the leaders. As we plan to run some of this showman's work in the near future, we hope that he will furnish us with a photo and a little dope on himself so that we can give him a regular intro. What do you say, Graham?

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

T. W. THOMPSON the manager of the Avalon Theatre really needs no introduction on these pages, as his famous trailer prologues have already acquainted his fellow members with him. Mr. Thompson is planning some more of his novel stunts in conjunction with his trailers and we'd like to hand you an advance tip that they're pretty good. Well, "T. W." now that you've passed through these doors we know you'll continue being very active, so we look to hearing from you again real soon.

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

WILLIAM T. BURNS is the manager of the Rialto Theatre in Roslindale, Mass. While we have never been in Mr. Burns' town we have gone through it during our survey in New England and as we now recollect, it offered some opportunities for showmanship of a high calibre. However, Mr. Burns, why not give us the low-down on the situation and at the same time let us have your photo and a little dope on yourself so that we can pass it along to the rest of the Club?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

C. S. McLENNAN is the manager of the Rialto Theatre in Kingsville, Texas. Since he has been selling shows in this town, the residents have certainly been given a glimpse of some fine showmanship. Why not shoot some more of it into Club headquarters "C. S." so that we can give your fellow members the low-down.

What are Sound and Color Worth?

. . . NATURALLY they are worth anything you can afford to pay for them. Here is a series of special tinted films that lend charming color, and give strikingly faithful sound, at the cost of black-and-white. "Eastman Sonochrome Tinted Positive Films" is the name. They supply the two prime features of the modern motion picture without any penalty of price.

This miniature indoor golf course is playing to capacity!

it is surely a short course to long profits

A Miniature INDOOR GOLF COURSE is your course to real profits.

The American people have made sport a characteristic expression of their national life. In the last quarter-century they have invested hundreds of millions of dollars in their pastimes. Today they are enthusiastically taking hold of Miniature Golf.

Present owners find that their Indoor Golf Courses offer an all-year, every-day, every-night, rain-or-shine business . . . with a constant supply of waiting-to-play-and-pay customers . . . a business requiring small initial outlay and minor upkeep . . . no shelves to stock—no returns or credits—but an hourly, daily, weekly, monthly, all-year, cash-in-advance business.

Everybody's playing. Everybody's paying. Earnings run as high as $2500 to $5000 a month.

One owner writes:

"We opened on June 19th and since that time our weekly average receipts have been close to $1500. What inspired me to drop you this line was that last evening we had to refund between 75 and 100 admissions between 8:30 and 11:30 as the course was packed and we had 50 people waiting in line to tee off on the first tee. Also wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the 100% service you have rendered us since the installation of the course and I can safely tell you that the service after installation in any line today is what everybody is looking for."

You, too, have this opportunity for proved profits at a minimum cost . . . be among the first to harvest the generous profits from an Indoor Golf Course.

Indoor Golf is for all ages . . . both sexes . . . pleasure-giving . . . amusing . . . instructive . . . creates the competitive instinct. Make money in a business where the customers are always happy.

7 SUCCESS PICTURES IN A ROW!

Success Pictures, Seven in a Row!

By

Arthur James

INFORMATION of the first importance to the motion picture exhibitor is invariably word of success pictures. On returning to our labors after watching the apples grow and contemplating the progress of the vegetables in the country, our first thought was the success picture situation.

WE WERE pleased but not surprised to note that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has stepped in with a success series that begun with "Caught Short" which was followed by "The Divorcee" as a preliminary to "The Big House" and Norma Shearer's new triumph "Let Us Be Gay." Added to this is Joan Crawford's "Our Blushing Brides" and now Greta Garbo's "Romance," and on the immediate horizon is another successful entertainment with William Haines as the star and "Way Out West" as the vehicle.

THERE we have them, seven in a row! And we would fail of our plain duty to the picture industry if we did no[t] rec[ord] thus prominently, these pict[ures] successes for their infor[mation]

TWO of them, "Th[e] B[ig] House" and "Romance," we saw at neighborhood houses New England during our holiday. What might be called the "sticks audience" reaction to both these offerings, marked them as definite successes aside from and plus any Broadway triumphs. We had no doubt whatever about the mass appeal of "The Big House" but as "Romance" is a different type of picture we were interested to watch the audience as well as the picture and to observe that the high, the middle and the low responded emotionally to the picture. And how they responded!

REPORTS from all the sections where these pictures have run corresponds to our own observations and this is extra good news in this heated season.

AGAIN we repeat, success pictures help not only the companies who produce them but the entire industry, as they restore the public quickly to the habit of attendance on motion picture theatres. M-G-M is not only doing a service to itself but to the entire industry in presenting product of this amazing and satisfactory type.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD

Survey Reveals Unusually Many Pictures Held Over This Summer

Films' High Merit Wins Extra Weeks Despite Business Status

Season Marked by Number of Repeat Engagements in First-Run Houses of Same City

(Special to the Herald-World)

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Holdover pictures this summer have hit an amazingly high mark, especially when the general business depression is taken into consideration. This would indicate that the public and the theatre men do not agree on the entertainment and box office quality of the product being offered, for some theatre men have blamed inferior pictures for the slump in receipts.

During the last weeks, a HERALD-WORLD survey shows, there has been a noticeable increase in the number of holdover pictures, with theatres throughout the country benefiting from this box office product.

One particularly interesting phase of this situation is the number of pictures which, after playing one first-run situation for a week, are transferred to another first-run house in the same city for a second week. A few examples of this follow:

"Let Us Be Gay" (M G M)
First week—Chicago, Chicago
Second week—Oriental, Chicago

"Caught Short" (M G M)
First week—Chicago, Chicago
Second week—Roosevelt, Chicago

"The Divorcee" (M G M)
First week—Chicago, Chicago
Second week—Oriental, Chicago

"The Big House" (M G M)
First week—Bleecker Hall, Albany
Second week—Leland, Albany

Other instances of repeat dates will be given in the survey. The following are holdover pictures which have played the last eight or ten weeks:

"Song of My Heart" (Fox)—three weeks, United Artists, Chicago.
"Common Clay" (Fox)—three weeks, Roxy, New York.
"Common Clay" (Fox)—three weeks, Roosevelt, Chicago.
"Let Us Be Gay" (M G M)—one week, Majestic, Milwaukee, and three weeks repeat engagement, Garden, Milwaukee.
"Our Blushing Brides" (M G M)—two weeks, Michigan, Detroit, and one week repeat engagement, Madison, Detroit.
"The Big House" (M G M)—five weeks, United Artists, Detroit, and one week repeat engagement, Madison, Detroit.
"The Big House" (M G M)—four weeks, Criterion, Los Angeles, and one week repeat engagements at Hollywood Pantages and Boulevard.
"Romance" (M G M)—week, Loew's State, Los Angeles; week, Criterion.
"The Big House" (M G M)—12 days, Imperial, Long Beach.
"The Unholy Three" (M G M)—three weeks, United Artists, Portland.
"The Big House" (M G M)—two weeks, Warfield, San Francisco.
"The Big House" (M G M)—two weeks, Fox, Seattle.
"The Big House" (M G M)—four weeks, McVickers, Chicago.
"Romance" (M G M)—one week, Stanford, with three-day repeat
"Caught Short" (M G M)—two weeks, Stillman, Cleveland.
"Blushing Brides" (M G M)—three weeks, Stillman, Cleveland.
"The Big House" (M G M)—two weeks, Columbia, Washingtoo.
"Let Us Be Gay" (M G M)—two weeks, Columbia, Washington.
"Caught Short" (M G M)—two weeks, Capitol, New York.
"Blushing Brides" (M G M)—two weeks, Capitol, New York.
"The Big House" (M G M)—two weeks, Capitol, New York.
"Holiday" (Pathe)—two weeks, Boyd, Philadelphia; week, Karlton.
"Holiday" (Pathe) two weeks, Stanton, Philadelphia.
"Holiday" (Pathe)—two weeks, Metropolitan, Boston.
"Little Accident" (Universal)—three weeks, Stanley, Philadelphia.
"Rain or Shine" (Columbia)—two weeks, Rivoli; repeat, Cameo, for extended run.
The survey does not include roadshow presentations, but does reveal the day of the holdover pictures is still here and that box office product is being made.

First of the BIG 4 Talking Serials!

Show Goods Amazing Fine

By Arthur James

MORE new product that crashes the consciousness, reaches out and catches audiences, holds 'em hard and brings 'em back for more! This time it's Universal stepping her stuff and it's levelled at the rising generation. The age range of appeal is from seven to seventy—and the keynote is action. We're talking about "The Indians Are Coming," "The Leather Pushers" and that Slim Somerville war comedy, "Parlez Vouz."

WE'LL take the comedy first. It's a war comedy that wages war on gloom and kicks pessimism in the upper regions of the plus fours. It has a surprise finish that will send an audience into double stitches and the laughter that lingers and cries out for more. There's a belly laugh in every foot of this comedy.

"THE Leather Pushers, a sensational success in the quiet days, are at least twice as good in sound. Sam Hardy is eminent in a great cast and action, snap, vigor, vim, go, speed and dash are woven on strands of love and romance against a warp of class and a woot of talent. It's grand entertainment that betters its own best as the series progresses. This, like the comedy, is gaited for any theatre in the world as an audience delighter. Sure fire—we calls it!

NOW for the Indian series. This is western action, condensed, boiled down and fast. It gives six reels in two and the high speed doesn't skimp or skip the story. Col. Tim McCoy stars in an attractive and generously peopled cast with the big outdoors, daredevil riding, action, suspense and more action, dressed, mounted and right down to primitive life lived freely, lived fast and fine; more grand entertainment and more fetching box office. Universal never turned out short material that approaches this, and for attraction quality, neither have the others.

THIS is the sort of product that the theatres need right now and from now on. Sophisticated plays have their place in the scheme of things but if we were running one theatre or five hundred we'd play this straight, place and show for results, money and all around satisfaction. It's product that's good for the whole industry as it's a customer satisfier.

Otterson Faces Showdown as Producers Ask Solution of Sound Patent Tangle

Oooooh!

One of the young accountants on the staff of General Talking Pictures ran breathlessly to the desk of his superior waving long rows of figures which had apparently taken him at least a month of Sundays to compile.

When high moguls of the outfit grasped the full meaning of the sensational and staggering array of numerals, they were at a loss whether to kill or kiss the over-enthusiastic pen-pusher, for they revealed the fact that General's damage claims in its patent fight against Western Electric would net the Schlesinger-DeForrest combination exactly $112,000,000—that is, if Western loses its appeal of the decision made at Wilmington several weeks ago.

The Schlesinger interests in Africa and Europe are reputed to be in excess of $250,000,000. This, plus $112,000,000, would give them $362,000,000. Oh, well!

MacPherson Break with DeMille Is Definite

Los Angeles — Probably returning to Paramount, the company with which she and Cecil B. DeMille were first connected, Jeanie MacPherson definitely split with the latter's unit. Although salary differences are given as cause for the breach, Miss MacPherson and "C. B." have been reported at odds over a period of weeks.

Sol Lesser Taking Over Many Considine Duties

Hollywood—Joseph M. Schenck is transferring to Sol Lesser many of the duties formerly handled by John W. Considine, Jr. This is the only new development in the report that Lesser is succeeding Considine.

M-G-M-Gloria Swanson Dickering on Contract

Hollywood—If financial arrangements can be agreed upon, Gloria Swanson probably will sign with M-G-M. Negotiations still are in progress.

Producers Worried by Question Of Facing Financial Liabilities

Call for a showdown on the matter of patent rights and the question of liability in case of possible infringement will be made by important production heads upon John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products. A delegation of studio chiefs now is en route to New York from the Coast, accompanied by Edwin Loeb, prominent film attorney.

The studio chiefs are disturbed over first blood in the form of the recent decision won by General Talking Pictures in the Federal Court at Wilmington. This decision upheld the alleged basic Ries patent used for sound on film recording and reproduction. Appeal now is being prepared by "Erpi."

Producer representatives who are coming East to ascertain just how licensees stand are Jesse L. Lasky, Louis B. Mayer, Jack Cohn and a representative of Carl Laemmle.

The conferences will seek to determine just how the licensees stand, in view of the decision. Also, the producing representatives want to know where liability will fall in case of patent suits, if the position of General Talking Pictures is sustained.

Prices Lowered; Salesmen Sweat

St. Louis—Terrific selling competition is reported by salesmen in this territory as a result of existing business conditions.

One exchangeman told Motion Picture News that with some product which tops last year's he is having real difficulty getting into a lot of situations, because some companies are glad to take less money than they got for their last year's line-up.

This demand for top dough is putting salesmen on the spot with exchange managers and home offices which continue the bigger and better rentals idea of other years.

Scanning Pacts

Attorneys for a number of licensees of Electrical Research Products have been studying their contracts with the electric firm, with a view, it is said, to determine their exact rights under the agreement. Some of them, it is reported, are of the opinion that several loopholes exist which would permit cancellation if the licensee so desired.

During the 5-5-5 conferences there was dissatisfaction expressed over the rigid terms of the agreements, particularly the clause covering music royalties. This clause dictates that the music be played only in theatres licensed by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, a stipulation which exhibitors bitterly resent.

Ritzy Undress'g Room OK For Ritzers, Not for Will

Hollywood—Will Rogers' sumptuous bungalow dressing room is fast cluttering its ornate corners with cobwebs. Built when Will went to work with Fox, the "chewing gum cowboy" gave it the once-over and declared: "Nerts! Rent it to half dozen supervisors and story executives and leave the chandelier for me. It looks like a good shirt rack."

The comedian usually appears at the studio in overalls or an old torn and bedraggled black suit with white stripes. He wore a tie once on the lot—hurriedly borrowed when called to attend a story conference.

Hersholt Not Velly Chinke So Out of "East Is West"

Hollywood—Because rushes showed that Jean Hersholt did not look like a Chinaman, although his acting was okay, Edward G. Robinson has replaced him in "East is West." Robinson was rushed here by airplane, the script being rushed to him by plane while en route. New sequences are to be added. Robinson has been guaranteed $5,000 weekly, with two weeks at that figure seen as certain.

NEEDED: MORE GLUE ON EXECUTIVES' CHAIRS

ADOLPH ZUKOR is talking:

"In my opinion, one of the chief causes of the business depression we have been experiencing for the last few months lay in the attitude of business men toward their tasks. Caught up in the greatest period of prosperity the world has ever experienced, they felt that this country and their businesses had reached the ultimate in development, and, lulled into a false security, they allowed their attention and energy to be dissipated into channels outside their business.

"The present situation will be cured when business men realize that they must study their problems with an eye to the future as well as the present, and then apply themselves with all their energy and thought to the working out of their policies. Hard work—and by hard work I mean tending strictly to our own business with foresight and energy—will bring us out of our present difficulties. If we all buckle down to our jobs, prosperity will be back again before we realize it."

Wisdom's Pearly Words

SELECTED by former Ambassador James W. Gerard as one of the sixty-four men who "rule the United States," the head of Paramount expresses these ideas in response to a New York Times inquiry of how the leaders would set about overcoming the current trade depression.

Directing his observations toward industry at large, Zukor, nevertheless, hits with deadly accuracy some of the cancerous conditions which have projected this business into its recent chaos.

"Channels Outside Their Business"

ZUKOR talks about false security and the dissipation of attention and energy into outside channels. There he stops.

In language more comprehensible to the trade, that might mean several things—all of them correct. For instance, the religious zeal with which the stock market was followed while the routine of business was overlooked; the outrageous neglect on the part of many men in posts who squandered their corporation's time in brokerage houses while matters of moment were left idling on their desks.

IN his judiciously phrased language, Zukor urges business men to study their problems with an eye to the future as well as to the present. In the light of what has happened in this business, his thought again emphasizes the costly carelessness of over-expansion, the danger of turning Napoleonic, the deadliness of autocracy—all business crimes of which certain factors in this industry are guilty.

This forum subscribes to Zukor's views because they are steeped in good sense. It is an easy matter to read between the lines and to fathom what must have been running through his mind. Regretfully he picked his words carefully; this writer prefers to be more blunt.

A Fallacy Exploded

JUST what is the lowdown on miniature golf? Everybody has been guessing, but today Motion Picture News supplies the answer.

An exhaustive nation-wide survey, bulwarked by facts and figures, demonstrates conclusively that the drawing power of sand lot golf varies in proportion to the drawing power of the product offered the public.

Exhibitors everywhere agree. When pictures are good, theatre business is good and the reverse, naturally, prevails. No other weighty argument enters into the discussion.

Good Films Have No Rivals

IN some sections the golf fad has been raising havoc with theatre business. But the novelty is fast disappearing and with it, the theatre owner's worry.

The responsibility of the producer in this case, as in any others of like calibre that may arise from time to time, is to make and deliver to the public attractions that will hold up at the till. The responsibility of the exhibitor is to maintain his theatre's standing by rigorously meeting the public's requirements.

Proper showmanship, backed to the hilt by worthwhile attractions, will win every shot. The decline of the golf craze in favor of pictures that click is the proof.

Big Circuits Heeding Clamor of Public For Flesh Shows Due to Film Weakness

High Hat

Hollywood — Lily Damita, who arrived in Hollywood from New York to play the feminine lead in "Fighting Caravans" opposite Gary Cooper, certainly knows how to give the males the high hat, according to one who was aboard the same train.

While seated on the observation car of the limited when it was stopping for water, one of the passengers, an elderly man, unaware of the identity of the fair lady beside him, asked Miss Damita if she was enjoying the trip.

Lily turned her head, gave the old fellow a cold stare and said, "Why?"

The old man stammered a bit and then withdrew to his car, utterly squelched.

Miss Damita, by the way, was greeted at the station by two publicity men and a boy friend. Perhaps she was keeping her arrival a secret. Even her long knickers worn under a sport skirt failed to attract much attention from the natives who were down to see the trains come in.

"News Crashers" Under Fox Ban; Dignity to Rule

Director of publicity is out as a title, so far as Fox Theatres is concerned, with director of advertising or advertising manager to be used instead. The circuit feels that there is a big psychological difference between the designation of press agent and that of advertising man.

"The old time press agent who boasted of how much free space he grabbed, who recounted his adventures running around with newspapermen and who loved to tell how he slipped over this or that stunt has no place in an up-to-date motion picture circuit," it is pointed out.

Accordingly, all men who are engaged for so-called publicity jobs first must qualify as advertising men. The belief is that it "requires more intelligence and more understanding of our business to use expensive space properly than to 'steal' news columns." The effect of the former outweighs that of the latter ten-fold, it is claimed.

Placing of copy in news columns is valuable, but is secondary to the advertising, lobbies, heralds and programs, the circuit feels.

"The advertising man is one who has something to give and the publicity man is one who always has to beg," it is asserted by the company.

Giannini Goes West

Dr. A. H. Giannini of the Bank of America left for San Francisco Thursday. His step-father died while Giannini was America-bound from Europe last week.

Publix, RKO, Warners and Fox Return to Stage Offerings With a Vengeance

Flesh shows are coming back with a vengeance, with strong public demand for stage shows reported in practically all sections of the United States and Canada. With one exception, Loew's, the use of stage attractions is being extended by all chains. Loew's has but 13½ weeks of vaudeville and about a half dozen weeks of presentation time, due to the dropping of the stage show policy in a number of houses.

All of the others are adding steadily to their stage show bookings. Publix, which dropped stage units in a number of houses, has replaced them in most instances, and is resuming stage shows over the Famous Players Canadian chain, where managers are reported as virtually begging for stage attractions.

RKO Has 84 Straight Weeks

Radio-Keith-Orpheum's business is booming in combination houses. The firm is booking 84 consecutive weeks from Coast to Coast, its longest route.

Fanchon & Marco, with 52 weeks of Coast to Coast time, is continuing to add new links to its presentation route. The use of F. & M. acts is credited with helping to hold up business over the Fox West Coast circuit, which goes in for F. & M. shows in a big way.

Warners recently were reported planning a presentation route.

The swing back to flesh shows is attributed to weakness of the general run of talkies, the novelty of which has worn off. Outstanding attractions can get the crowds, but the average film is not strong enough to hold up, showmen say. The combination of pictures and stage shows seems to be what the public demands, it is stated.

Its combination policy is placing RKO in a strategic good spot, for its theatres are picking up on intake, while others have been yelling. The Palace, New York, is the only house where vaudeville is presented exclusively.

Demand for "Phantom" Is Chaney Death Aftermath

Strong demand of exhibitors for "The Phantom of the Opera" is reported by a number of Universal exchanges as an aftermath of the death of Lon Chaney. The picture was reissued with sound effects last year. M-G-M has not noted any particular reaction on the Chaney pictures. So far as any reissuing of Chaney pictures is concerned, the company will be entirely guided by exhibitor wishes in the matter.

Chevalier Slings American Slang Like a Native

Paris—Maurice Chevalier gave the members of the American Club here a real kick at a luncheon when he disclosed in his speech that he had acquired considerable knowledge of American slang. Asserting that "I would be happiest just to be known as America's biggest French pal," he added:

"To me the most wonderful thing about America is the generous, tolerant reception every foreigner gets. If he has got the stuff, he is welcomed with open arms, although before I sang my first song to them I was terribly afraid they might ask after hearing me why that French guy was brought all the way across the Atlantic. I was worried about my accent, also, but after I heard my countryman, Maxine Mongendre, Consul General, getting away with his terrible accent in New York, all my confidence came back and everything was okay."

Leo Still "Vacationing"; Paid Weekly, but No Work

Joe Leo, former head of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, is still "on vacation." His three months' leave of absence, determined upon when Harry C. Arthur was appointed his successor, has now gone into four months with no decision apparently in sight by the Fox theatre department as to Leo's ultimate disposal.

The Insiders' Outlook

OUTWARDLY the excitement seems to have died. Inwardly, much is going on anent the Warners.

For instance, some banking circles that have their own methods of obtaining information wonder into what controlling hands the company is drifting. There are some who see in Dick Hoyt's advent to the directorate the inception of a move which will eventually end with the company snuggling comfortably in the hands of John J. Raskob and the Du Ponts, with Harry, Abe and Jack still filling the management shoes. About this latter point, however, there seems to be some doubt—in banking channels.

However, dopesters do agree that greater financial stability will prevail in the Warner household with Messrs. Hoyt and Sachs—the Sachs of Goldman, Sachs & Company—at the reins. After all, when you realize that in the last twelve months or so the Warners have taken on about $85,000,000 in theatres, plus expenditures of millions additional in music and other deals, a rigorous balance of commitments and earning power is something to watch.

And, while the facts may have no connection, tuck this away in a corner of your mind for possible future reference:

Hoyt and Sid Kent are very good friends.

Hoyt and Harold Franklin know each other very well. Matter of fact, it was the banker who had considerable to do with Franklin's change of address from New York to Hollywood.

That's all of that.

For What It's Worth

The Fox crowd will tell you there isn't a chance in the world and not to be a sap that way. Yet the story that persists is this:

That Harley Clarke has offered to turn back the Fox enterprises to Bill Fox for $5,000,000 less than he paid for it. That means $13,000,000.

On that basis, it sounds like a huge bargain, remembering as you should studio property, theatres, good-will and other factors in a long list of assets.

What the boys who listen to the yarn have overlooked, however, is that any deal such as that naturally wouldn't provide clearance of the obligations amassed by the former regime. Anyway, it is said Fox wasn't interested. And so that, presumably, is the end of that.

The second of two tales concerning the Fox establishment concerns a change in name. When Clarke assumed control, the story that such was the plan was bruited about freely and as often denied. It is understood that, under the arrangement made between Clarke and Fox, there can be no change for the five years that Fox receives his $10,000 weekly. That is, unless Fox is willing to subscribe to such a suggestion.

Whether he has been approached cannot be determined. Whether he would agree is another unfathomable factor. The one point that seemingly indicates he might revolves around the assumption that if Fox Film becomes something else, Fox personally then could resume operations under his own name.

Either way, the trade-mark bids fair to continue as part of the contemporary history of the industry.

Why It Happened

Building for what he thought the future would hold in store, Sam Katz some time ago gave the word to develop Publix's manpower. Additions were made, largely in wholesale manner.

The circuit continued its policy of expansion and probably would have traveled right along if the financial storm signals had steered clear of the horizon. But they didn't.

Money was hard to get and box-offices were sick. So from the high note of optimism which Katz had struck and with nary a warning to his right and left hand bowers, the Publix generalissimo descended to the low overtones of pessimism. Retrenchment was determined upon and out went the word to slash.

The fellows who discovered what throat-slashing feels like were the chaps who had been taken on originally as the fighting nucleus for the days to come. Costly piece of business to build up the manpower equation, but more costly to keep them on.

Therefore, the slash in personnel as well as in other departments to the tune of roughly $1,000,000 a year.

Shaking Them Out

One of the major studios in Hollywood has sixteen folks on its contract list whose options expire before the end of October and will not be renewed. That is, all but one.

This is a typical instance of the economy fever which has hit the Coast colony midships. When talkers came in, even the sky wasn't the limit. Writers, players and what nots were signed in droves. Now the trimming shears have been sharpened and the cloth is being cut down to fit the body.

Studios that formerly took a gambler's chance with a player in the hope that one picture might send him or her over are a bit more reluctant today about signing term contracts. Players with established reputations are the only ones whose pacts are being snapped up. The others are out job hunting.

The entire move is a direct reflection of the terrifically bad summer through which the business has just passed. While clerks and menials have been fired in New York, the waste spot of the industry has been continuing untrammeled.

Now, however, the slashings are reaching into Hollywood. That's where most of them belong.

THE INSIDERS

Questions, No Answers

ONE of The Insiders, who stopped long enough the other day to match notes with a confrere, asked these questions, supplied no answers, and stepped merrily on his way:

Did you know that one of the biggest executives in the industry was discovered on his company's books as an interior decorator, drawing a salary of $75,000 a year; that the bankers unearthed the awful truth and told this headliner to lay off, or else?

That the partners in a company whose name you know well have turned options on their control stock over to a broker and that said broker may see fit to exercise his option shortly?

That several interesting meetings regarding the future of the picture business have been held in Washington of late and that much of great significance may come therefrom?

Unless a certain theatre operator whose houses are losing plenty each week switches his allegiance in inks from red to black by the end of the year, he's slated for the scrap heap?

That the production chieftain of a major studio will have his mantle of power trimmed unless he smacks across a few winners between now and next spring?

That the president of a w.k. and important outfit, has lost favor with the bankers who as recently as three months ago thought him the last word, and that a successor is all ready and quietly grooming himself to step in?

Is it true that Sam Katz and his well known former dancer-wife have reached the parting of the ways?

Warner Control Held in Balance but Brothers to Continue to Run Affairs

Em I Leffing!

It's hard to believe, mates, but the following appeared in one of the better known weekly mags:

"Do you know a million aching hearts, a million lonely girls and a million Cinderellas are dreaming of me."—John Gilbert.

Smith Quits Fox, Joins Trans Lux, to Keep Busy

An ambassador without portofolio situation for an individual anxious to keep busy is reported to be the inside reason for Courtland Smith's resignation as vice-president of the Fox companies to assume the presidency of the Trans Lux Daylight Screen Corporation.

Courtland Smith

Smith, then general manager of Fox Movietone News, probably opposed William Fox more bitterly than any other man involved in the Fox fracas and is credited with having been largely instrumental in bringing Harley L. Clarke into the picture. As a reward for his services, he was made a vice-president, but Truman Talley was assigned operation of Fox Movietone News, organization of which Smith had built up.

Operating from the Hotel Elysee in New York as a base, Smith carried on the post of vice-president with duties understood to have been light. His desire to continue activity is said to have been his reason for resigning from Fox in favor of the Trans Lux post.

His new company has developed a rear projection system for theatres. Further development of the project is declared to be Smith's immediate objective.

U. A. Finishes Feature in Wide Film; All Very Quiet

Hollywood—United Artists is under the wire with a picture shot in 75 millimeters. "The Bat Whispers," produced by Roland West for Art Cinema, is reported to be the film, although at U. A. stony silence greets inquiries regarding the process.

As a matter of fact, nobody will admit that the picture has been made that way, but the inside has it that the shooting was done secretly at night.

Lillian Gish Would Play Opposite Negro on Stage

Lillian Gish would be glad to play opposite Paul Robeson, colored actor, in "Othello," but Jed Harris, the producer, hasn't spoken to her about it, she said upon her return to New York from Europe. She has deserted films for the stage, she says.

Raskob Now Has 150,000 Shares and Still Buying, Report

Whether there is to be change in the control of Warners is a subject of speculation in film and banking circles. With the company apparently eased of financial worries, reports of inside manipulation continue to be heard.

John J. Raskob, one of the principal shareholders, is said to have garnered 150,000 shares and he and his associates are continuing to buy. This gives rise to report that Hayden, Stone and Goldman-Sachs may be acting for some one else in their financial activity in the company, probably for Raskob and the DuPonts.

Under the plan, it is said, Richard O. Hoyt of Hayden, Stone, or John Dillon, representing him, and Walter Sachs of Goldman, Sachs and Company are to handle financing, the three Warner brothers continuing to operate. They are said to have a three-year management contract with the company, terms of which aggregate $500,000 yearly in salary.

Musical Films Hurt

The sudden drop in earnings is partly attributed to several expensively-made musical color films, which failed to bring the expected returns due to the public's swing against entertainment of this kind. Another factor was the rapid expansion and the decline of receipts at company theatres due to seasonal causes.

Most of the films for the coming year are completed and paid for, so the company's outlook is favorable for higher earnings next year. The firm now has about 700 theatres under its control.

Rogers Renews

Hollywood—Charles Rogers, one time known as "Buddy," has signed a new contract with Paramount.

Ein reizvoller Film.

"Melodie des Herzens" zeichnet sich vor allem durch sehr gute schauspielerische Leistungen und überaus prächtige Szenerien aus. Der Glanzpunkt des Films liegt tatsächlich in seinen szenischen Wirkungen, und die vielfach besungene "Schöne blaue Donau" bietet sich dem Beschauer in all ihrer Herrlichkeit und Pracht dar. Lebenswahre Schilderungen über das Tun und Treiben des ungarischen Bauers werden gegeben, und die damit verbundene leidenschaftliche Musik — mag sie auch etwas ungewohnt für das amerikanische Ohr klingen — ist authentisch und originell. Besonders gut ist auch die "Puszta" veranschaulicht, und den Hauptdarsteller Willi Fritsch kann man getrost mit John Gilbert vergleichen.

Was He Mad!

"Bill" Fox, exasperated because he couldn't get his ball in the eighth hole of his new tabloid golf course back of the Roxy, is said to have investigated and found it occupied by a Singer midget who was resting after a weary trek to booking agents.

Chatterton, Para. Female Ace, Signs New Contract

Confounding all other producers and keeping in the ranks its foremost woman star, Paramount this week signed Ruth Chatterton to a new long-term contract.

The Chatterton rise is regarded by film observers as one of the most phenomenal in the history of the business. With a long stage career behind her, Miss Chatterton entered pictures several seasons ago as the lead opposite Emil Jannings in "Sins of the Father." With talkers, stage training asserted its value and the player, picture by picture, demonstrated via theatre grosses that she was rapidly reaching the peak in box-office cards.

Ruth Chatterton

Today, Paramount places her at the head of its list of female attractions.

Schnitzer Sells Idea Of Loaning Fairbanks

Hollywood—After considerable bickering Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has been loaned by First National to RKO for one of the leads in "Beau Ideal" which Herbert Brenon will direct.

West Coast officials of both studios were unable to reach a financial arrangement on the deal and had given it up when Joseph Schnitzer, president of RKO Radio Pictures got hold of Jack Warner while the latter was in New York, and closed the deal.

Ralph Forbes will have the romantic lead in the talker and Leni Stengel, the feminine lead.

Iowa Exhibitors Put Up Dough for New Body

Des Moines—Allied Theatres of Iowa now has $3,300 in the treasury with a membership of 53, reports Clifford Niles, member of the board of directors and one of the important figures in the exhibitors' organization. Niles, who is one of the political leaders of the state, feels that the new organization has leadership that will mean real action from this group in Tom Arthur, president, and L. P. Martin, secretary and treasurer.

Cruze Pictures For Sono Art to Go to Tiffany?

Hollywood—Release of the James Cruze productions now handled by Sono Art-World Wide, through Tiffany being proposed as an aftermath of the deal which will give Tiffany distribution of the 1930-31 Cruze product. The matter is understood to have been broached to Tiffany in New York, but it is doubtful if the latter will go for the proposal.

The Cruze pictures have been booked into a number of situations and it is felt that a mixup would ensue if the proposed distribution arrangement on the current Cruze output were put through. Sono Art is said to release the Cruze pictures on a percentage arrangement.

New Zealand Exhibitors May Effect Tax Switch

Cutting off product as a result of the refusal of American distributors to individually sell New Zealand exhibitors is looked upon in some New York quarters as the "straw that will break the camel's back" and bring about reduction of the exorbitant tax imposts levied by that government against American pictures.

One New Zealand law, recently passed, exacts a 25 per cent tax on gross receipts, allowing deductions for import duties and operating expenses. A second levies a 12½ per cent income tax on the gross. American distributors figure that, with reductions, the statutes will seperate them from 25 per cent of their gross income in that country. The consensus of opinion is that operations are impossible under that set-up.

Therefore, no new contracts will be signed. When the demand for new product is not met by the supply, the forecast is that New Zealand exhibitors will bring pressure to bear and insist that the present laws be remedied or removed.

The move is anti-American and is another indication of the antipathies which exist against the American film industry in many nations of the world.

French Talkers Started In Studios Near Paris

Paris—Rebuilt and equipped with RCA Photophone recording facilities, the Pathe Cinema Studios at Joinille-le-Pont have begun production of French talkers. There are six separate studios of varying sizes, the largest of which is about 80 feet long by 50 feet wide.

Mussolini Fines Exhibitor $65,000 for Ducking Tax

Rome—When Mussolini says theatre owners must pay their entertainment taxes regularly, he apparently means "no fooling," as evidenced by a fine of $65,000 levied against a Genoa exhibitor for evading payments.

Faces Quiz

J. E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, who is to be questioned by producer licensees as to their status on recording and liability, due to the Ries patent decision.

Otterson Faces Quiz as Producers Seek Showdown

M. A. Schlesinger, head of General, has intimated that he will file suits for injunction, accounting and triple damages in event he is victorious in the case, the first round of which he already has won. Exhibitors would face similar suits, he has indicated.

Under terms of its contracts with exhibitors, "Erpi" agrees to protect them against suits up to the amount the theatre owner pays for his reproducing equipment. In the case of distributors, the contract is construed to similarly protect them.

Motion Picture News learns that producers will insist upon clarification of the situation. In view of the price the industry has paid in its change from silent to sound pictures, the attitude, confidentially held in inner council chambers is that W. E. licensees must have the lowdown for their financial safety.

"It cost this business $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 to make the changeover," one familiar with the inside move declared Thursday. "The figures themselves explain why Western Electric licensed companies want to know exactly where they get off."

Paramount Secretly Busy Developing Color Process

Paramount officials are doing no talking, but it is understood the company has developed a color process for its exclusive use. Experiments are reported to have been under way for some time with advertising reels selected as the testing ground before the color is applied to regulation entertainment product.

Wynn Gets "Simple Simon"

Ed Wynn, who has been appearing in pictures for Paramount, has acquired road and talking picture rights to "Simple Simon."

Vivian Thrilled By Kid Brother's K. O. of Rex Lease

Chicago—"Hal said he would get him. I'm so happy I could cry."

Thus spoke Vivian Duncan when apprised of the retributive success of a vengeful brother in smacking Rex Lease, smacker of Vivian, when the two gents met in a Hollywood restaurant recently. Vivian and Rosetta, appearing at the Chicago theatre here, showed unrestrained elation at the news that the Duncan optic had been avenged.

"Oh, honey, I'm so glad," called Vivian to Rosetta.

"Sweetheart, it's the best news we've had in ages," responded Rosetta.

"That guy wouldn't dare smack a fellow," said Vivian. "Why, he didn't even dare smack little Hal."

Hal Duncan is only five feet, four. Lease is a grown-up movie cowboy.

"Dear, dear Hal," pronounced Rosetta.

"I'm so happy I could cry," Vivian said again. "Let's see the story in the paper. Isn't it wonderful. 'Friend had to pick up the fallen actor—planted a blow right on Lease's eye.'

"You know, the attack was lots worse than the papers reported it," Vivian chirped. "I drove Johnny Farrow and his friend Lease, whom I had never seen before, home from a dinner at Charles Farrell's. It was early in the evening and there wasn't any party at all.

"Letting the two out at Farrow's home, Lease stole the keys. I protested, but he said I would have to come in and talk if I wanted them back.

"What could I do? When we were inside the house Farrow disappeared. Lease shouted: 'Why wouldn't you talk to me when I called your home?' I'd never heard of him before. I was scared—started to run.

"He threw me to the floor, blacked my eye, refractured my broken knee cap, kicked me and tried to attack me. I was almost unconscious before I left.

"Four other movie stars have been beaten by Lease in the past few months, including Viola Dana," said Vivian. "But it's all right now. Gee, I'm happy. Mary," she called to her maid, "bring me another cup of coffee and run out and buy ten of those papers. If a fellow gets fresh with me again, I'll read that story to him."

"Dear, dear Hal," amen-ed Rosetta.

Kutinsky May Again Turn Exhibitor; Out of Fox

Morris Kutinsky, one of the operating executives of Fox Theatres (Eastern) until a few days ago, is considering a reentry into exhibition in the Greater New York zone. He has already looked over several sites with an idea of building.

Before joining Fox, Kutinsky operated the New Jersey Theatrical Enterprises, a chain of 12 houses in and around Jersey City. These were bought by Fox and constituted one of the keystones of Fox Metropolitan.

Economy is reported the reason why Kutinsky is out.

Conspiracy Consent Decree Hailed As Victory for Unaffiliated Exhibitors

He Was Fired

Al Jolson tells the story of the producer who asked for opinions on a picture after a coast preview.

"Stupendous," said one assistant.

"Colossal," exclaimed a second.

"What do you think of it?" inquired the producer of the author.

A reckless look on the man's face. "I only think it's great," he replied defiantly.

Paramount Makes Specials in West In Studio Shift

Paramount's new studio shift, which transfers Ernst Lubitsch to the New York studio as supervising director and Hector Turnbull as associate producer in charge of the Clara Bow, Ruth Chatterton and Claudette Colbert films to the East, will give the Coast studio more leeway in the making of specials. Society dramas and others of similar type will be made at the New York plant, under the plan.

Jesse Lasky

The eastern plant now is operating at practical capacity, so there will not be any material increase in production there, the new arrangement being made to permit concentration on particular types of pictures. Jesse L. Lasky arrived in New York from the Coast Thursday and during his stay will launch the new plan at the eastern plant, where James R. Cowan continues as chief executive.

British Studio To Paramount in Multi-Lingual Plan

London—Paying $1,500,000 over a ten-year period, Paramount acquires the British & Dominion Films studio at Elstree as part of its plan to produce multi-lingual versions in Europe. Negotiations for lease of the plant are understood to have been launched last spring when Jesse Lasky visited London. Its consummation marks the company's entrance into production abroad.

Early estimates place at $16,000,000 total budget in the ten-year production program.

Lou Bards Sees in It the "Magna Charta" of the Film Business

Los Angeles—"I believe it will be the Magna Charta of the film business and a powerful weapon," was the comment of Lou Bards, president of the M. P. T. O. A. of southern California, on the consent decree handed down by Federal Judge Cosgrove last week in the conspiracy trial.

The suit brought by the government against Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc., and ten distributors is a decided victory for the unaffiliated exhibitor, in the opinion of Bards. The decision acts as a permanent injunction against the defendants and for a violation of the decree they can be brought into custody on short notice for contempt of court.

While the exhibitors' association had nothing to do with the settlement, other than appearing as witnesses, the decision is of great importance to all unaffiliated exhibitors because it does away with any monopoly in the obtaining of films by large theatre circuits and in cases where selective contracts are made with the distributors caution will have to be exercised to prevent violation of the decree, Bards feels.

Bards also stated that if the case had gone to trial and the defendants had lost the decision it would have resulted only in an appeal to the Supreme Court and many more months would have gone by before the case was decided. If the plaintiffs had been victorious a fine against the defendants would have been the result and the practices of the defendants would undoubtedly have continued, he asserted. As it stands now no large circuit can book up the better pictures and keep the independent exhibitor from getting them until they have played in all of the circuits' smaller houses, he feels. The decree now gives the independent the right to book second and third runs at the same time the circuit does, he says.

This decision will have a great moral effect upon the film business in the belief of Bards and he thinks that unaffiliated exhibitors now have an equal chance.

Un déluge de mots!

Trop de mots et un jeu insuffisant rendent le premier film parlant français de Monsieur Adolphe Menjou, "L'énigmatique Monsieur Parkes," assez insipide. La trame, un mélodrame dont un bandit constitue le thème, aurait pu être rendue émouvante si l'on s'était occupé de la direction autant que du dialogue.

Menjou ne nous en ravit cependant pas moins, et Claudette Colbert lui apporte un appui très bon, mais sans passion. Les autres personnages sont bons, mais ne semblent pas bien adaptés à l'action. La mise en scène est attrayante et les voix excellentes.

Si les Français ne sont pas influencés par le manque de force de cette histoire, ils aimeront ce film parlant.

Maybe There's a Reason

Hollywood—Is it just a trick of fate, or has someone consciously seen to it that practically all of the sandwiches and salads served at the M-G-M studio lunch counter bearing the names of actors contain either cheese or ham?

The newest concoction menued is "baked ham roll a la Tibbett."

Allied to Set Big Push at Wis. Unit Sessions Tuesday

Milwaukee—Allied States Association set forces in motion for the "big push" into territories where it has no representation at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin exhibitor unit to be held at Big Cedar Lake near here Sept. 9 and 10.

Abram F. Myers

The gathering, the first convention in months attended by the Allied leaders, is to thresh out the issue of protection and analyze the proposed standard form of agreement drafted by the 5-5-5 conferences.

Abram F. Myers, president of Allied, will be on hand for the sessions, and is to tell the gathering that practical accord has been reached on all major issues of the contract, and that only the arbitration rules remain to be threshed out. There are a few other details of wording to be settled between Myers and Gabriel L. Hess of the Hays office. After that, the agreement goes to the 5-5-5 members and then to the various exhibitor units.

Gabriel L. Hess

Allied is fortified for its extension plans by virtue of the cash settlement made with Tiffany in lieu of production of a picture for Allied by that company, in addition to the fact that dues are being paid regularly.

"Hell's Angels" Gets Big Boston Premiere

Boston—This staid city gave "Hell's Angels" an enthusiastic reception, 2,000 persons being turned away at the premiere at $2 top. The advance sales indicate that it will have a long run.

$5,000,000 for Gaumont Budget, Tiffany Tied In London—Sixty sound fixtures are announced for 1930-31 by Gaumont British Pictures Corp., on a $5,000,000 production budget for the new group.

A portion of the new group, it is understood, will be made here in conjunction with Tiffany, which will use the product made under this joint plan as quota material, later taking it to the States for distribution there.

Earlier reports in the trade here had Gaumont concentrating on theatre expansion, with all production left to its subsidiary, Gainsborough. This, however, was denied when new plans were announced by Gaumont.

Gaumont Plans Boom Production in Britain

London—Added impetus was given to production in Great Britain when announcement was made by Gaumont that 60 talkers will be produced by that company next season. The new figure brings to 100 the total to emanate from London studios in 1930-31.

New York City and U. S. Navy Work for Columbia

Columbia received columns of publicity in New York papers when it called upon the city's employment bureau to furnish 200 extras for scenes shot at city hall for "Dirigible," which stars Jack Holt and Ralph Graves under direction of Frank Capra. The scenes were portrayal of a reception to a famous flyer, and a big crowd was on hand for the ceremonies, which were handled with the police and U. S. Navy cooperating. Incidentally, Columbia has nearly the whole navy co-operating on the picture, with the airship Los Angeles playing a featured role.

Loew Dividend Declared

Loew's directorate has declared regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on outstanding common, payable to stockholders on Sept 30, to holders on record Sept. 13.

Five-Year Outlets Provided In Turning Theatres Back To Operators

Resale of small theatres to independents, coupled with a five-year franchise arrangement, is a new wrinkle being employed by distributor-exhibitor companies. The idea is to turn over houses where chain operation is impractical, or in cases where the company has overreached itself on its expansion policy, at the same time sewing up long-term deals for its product.

For some time, there has been a tendency of circuits to sell smaller houses to independents. Conditions peculiar to others prevented the chain from operating at a profit, although individual operation could be profitable.

These situations have caused plenty of headaches to the distributor circuits, and they are glad of the double-barreled chance to unload these houses, at the same time providing outlets for their product.

Cantors in Cleveland for Consultation at Clinic

Cleveland—Eddie Cantor and his wife have been here for the week consulting with Dr. George Crile of the Cleveland clinic on account of Mrs. Cantor's health. This probably is the reason for sudden cancellation of Cantor's vaudeville contract, which was scheduled to begin Saturday.

Película para un buen programa

"Alma de Gaucho" es un película hablada en español llena de interesantes y de encantadores momentos. Representa la historia de un gaucho enamorado de una joven rica y coqueta. Cuando éste se da cuenta de que ella no ha estado sino jugando con él y con su amor, en un momento de desesperación el gaucho rapta a la desdeñosa joven y la lleva a una cabaña desierta donde la echa en cara su comportamiento y la hace pasar las humillaciones que ella le hizo pasar a él.

Toda la trama se desarrolla sin preámbulos y desde el principio hasta el fin la película está llena de vida y color. El director de la película, el Sr. Henry Otto, no habla español, de manera que puso empeño en que la pantomima explicara todo el argumento y no fuera preciso hablar el idioma para entender perfectamente toda la trama. La representación es muy buena y resulta un drama lleno de emociones y de pasión, a lo cual hay que añadir la bonita música que lo acompaña. Sin discutir lo correcto del español que se habla en la película, podemos decir oue ésta ha de ser un programa muy bueno que atraerá al público de habla española.

Class Pictures, RKO Deal, 'Break' For Universal

Universal is regarded as having turned the corner as a result of its new production policy, with observers predicting profitable operation next season, in contrast to the six months' fiscal period ended May 3, when net loss of $575,848.23 was reported. Supporting this view is the contract recently closed with Radio-Keith-Orpheum, under terms of which the entire output is to play the RKO circuit, plus the scheduled general release of "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Under its new policy, Universal is to make 20 pictures during the 1930-31 season. These are designed for Class A houses, where previously the company has made product principally for the smaller houses. A new sales policy has been instituted, with Phil Reisman in charge as general sales manager.

The net loss reported to May 3, is after giving effect to write-off of loss on the cancellation of a theatre leasehold in the amount of $220,868.59, and giving effect to profit on sale of capital assets of $616,372.38. For the same fiscal period of 1929, the company showed a profit of $46,171.05. Total current and working assets as of May 3, 1930, were $11.335,692.72 and current liabilities $4,511,-764.33. Earned surplus was $3,156,809.70; total surplus was $4,510,809.70, which includes $1,354,000 surplus arising through revaluation of land.

Canadian Studio Project Launching Is Planned

Ground breaking ceremonies for the Canadian-American Talking Picture Studios, Ltd., Montreal, are scheduled to be held Saturday and Sunday, in a two-day celebration planned by Ray Jackson, managing director of the company. He is to lead a party of guests Friday night, making the trip in special cars. Luncheons, sightseeing tours, visit to the race track and ceremonies on the proposed studio grounds are on the program, according to Jackson. He says the new company will produce on its own, as well as make its studios available to American producers. A number of screen and stage players will make the trip, Jackson says.

Miniature Golf B. O. Threat Stymied by Tough Rivalry, NEWS Survey Reveals

Showmen Not Worried Over Fad; Believe It Will Fade Out During Winter

Miniature golf is on the wane so far as serious competition with picture theatres is concerned.

While exhibitors in a few cities are concerned over the abbreviated courses, most sections believe the pastime but a passing fad, which will do a fadeout with the coming of cool weather.

Instances of exhibitor operation of Tom Thumb courses, or of tying up with the courses in co-operative advertising, have proved beneficial to the theatre. There are but few instances where dark theatres are being converted into indoor courses.

Tom Thumb golf is going through and approaching a period of cutthroat competition, which is weeding out the little fellow and raising overhead to the danger point in much the same manner that the overbuilding craze affected picture exhibition.

There will be attempts in some sections to continue operation of miniature courses during the winter, but, generally speaking, exhibitors are unworried, and feel that the danger from this source of opposition is practically past until next spring, at least.

New York Not Hard Hit By Links, Showmen Say

Miniature golf, which hit the New York territory with a bang this summer, is not seriously affecting box offices, chain and independent theatre operators report. It is the old story of product: Given good pictures, the theatres do business, otherwise the customers drift to other attractions. Cooler weather is helping theatre business immensely, and hurting the links in proportion.

The courses are going through an evolution with the more elaborate ones doing the business, and the little fellows facing extinction. However, the bigger and better building orgy is paring down the net and price cutting is adding to the discomfiture, despite which the number is increasing at a rapid rate. There are an estimated 1,500 miniature courses in Greater New York.

Salt Lake City Zone Not Hit by Golf Bug

Salt Lake City—There are several miniature golf courses here, but they are not very well patronized, so theatre owners are not worried over this form of competition. The advent of the new season, too, is holding up grosses. Four indoor courses now are being built here. Salt Lake City is just preparing to license indoor courses. With the exception of one town in Idaho, Tom Thumbs are not cutting much figure in this region.

Chicago Calm

Chicago—Miniature golf no longer excites local exhibitors, who expect the passing of the fad. The dark courses and the number of them running in the red show that the first excitement was a bit premature. In fact, theatre owners here feel that the dinky links are aiding rather than hurting business, as patrons play either going to or coming from the theatre. There are around 150 courses in the city.

Theatre owners have not taken any steps to enter the miniature golf business in opposition to existing courses, feeling that the development will wane with cool weather.

Ohio Showmen Undisturbed Though Outnumbered 4 to 1

Cleveland—Theatre owners in Ohio are either very complacent by nature, or they have learned from experience not to worry over new fads of a competitive nature.

This is clearly evidenced by the fact that exhibitors of Ohio are neither upset by miniature golf courses and driving courses that today outnumber the film houses four to one, nor fearful of the possible effect of these courses on their future business.

Because no license is required in Ohio to operate a course, no accurate tally of the number of courses in operation can be made. The building departments in the larger cities have records of property leased for this purpose, but they have no record of the great number of courses which are operated on a profit-sharing plan with the owner of the property, with no lease at all.

But from data received from the chambers of commerce of the larger cities, and from information gathered from film salesmen covering the smaller towns and outlying districts, it is conservatively estimated that there are about four miniature golf and driving courses to every picture theatre in the state. Ohio has approximately 700 motion picture theatres. About 200 of them are closed this summer. And it is estimated that there are today between 2,000 and 2,500 courses in operation.

In spite of this situation, the exhibitors are not seriously alarmed. In this location of late springs and early falls outdoor golf at best can enjoy only a short season, they claim.

Miniature golf, theatre owners say, does not attract the real golfer. Its patrons are mostly those who are seeking novelty in their diversion, and are caught today by the novelty of miniature golf. Their interest is only temporary, and most of them, it is contended, will seek other type of entertainment as soon as the novelty has worn off.

Exhibitors in this territory also have sufficient confidence in the permanancy of motion pictures as an established entertainment, as against the temporary interest in miniature golf. They are confident that when big screen attractions are offered patrons will return to the picture theatres. Their confidence is based on fact, not fancy. This attitude of the public was clearly and when "Let Us Be Gay" came within $100 indisputably demonstrated in Cleveland of breaking the house record at Loew's Allen Theatre during the hottest week of the hottest summer in over thirty years.

Miniature golf courses are not as plentiful in Ohio cities as they are in cities which claim an all year-round climate. So the miniature golf menace is not of so serious a nature here as elsewhere.

35 Links in Cleveland

Cleveland, with 100 theatres, has 35 golf courses and six driving courses. Youngstown, with 20 theatres, has 11 golf and 2 driving courses. Toledo has 40 theatres and 11 golf courses. Columbus has 50 theatres as against 11 known courses. The Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce estimates that there are approximately 40 courses in and around Cincinnati. There are 11 links and two driving courses at Youngstown.

The great bulk of golf courses are scattered through the small towns of Ohio. Film salesmen report that towns of 1,000 and less population have at least one course, while some courses are set up on the country side between small towns.

Feeling that the interest in the game is just transitory and that the outdoor season in Ohio is short, theatre owners are not doing anything to combat the competition. Harry V. Smoots of Mt. Vernon, O., is the only exhibitor on record in the state who has gone into the miniature golf business. And he didn't go into it to control competition or to regulate prices or hours of operation, but to cash in on a timely proposition.

One instance of unfair competition between miniature golf and picture theatres is demonstrated in Cleveland Heights, resident suburb of Cleveland, where a golf course has been permitted to dodge the Sunday "blue law." While the two theatres in Cleveland Heights are not permitted to operate on Sunday, the course is allowed to open Sunday at midnight, and is attracting large crowds, indicating that the popular feeling in this suburb is against Sunday closing. This might eventually be used successfully by the owners of the two theatres in Cleveland Heights to force the issue on Sunday closing with profitable results to themselves. In which case the miniature golf courses will have been of benefit to them.

A restless public, a short outdoor season

Novelty Wearing Off on West Coast; Price War Hurts Golf, Aids Theatres

Still Get Play in and Around Los Angeles, but Peak Has Long Been Passed and the well known American trait of dropping a fad as suddenly as it adopt it, together with confidence in the drawing power of big pictures, is responsible for the complacent attitude of motion picture theatre owners toward miniature golf and outdoor driving courses in Ohio.

Better Pictures Helping Coast to Solve Problem

Los Angeles—Miniature golf, which at first caused theatres a great deal of competition, has been on the wane for the past few weeks and is gradually becoming a stabilized business. When the rage for swinging a putter first hit Los Angeles, the putt-putt courses were jammed with eager golf fans. However, the novelty has now worn off and people are playing, but less often than before.

In the city of Los Angeles there are approximately 300 courses and in the surrounding territory there are about 200 more. Reports made earlier in the season stated that there were anywhere from 1,000 to 1,600 of the puny courses dotting formerly vacant lots. However, this was not the case. Besides the miniature golf courses, the driving course has also taken a spurt upward as regards business, and about 50 such courses are to be found in the city and a few in the surrounding territory.

The first courses to make their appearance cost from $1,500 to $5,000. Courses now under construction are costing from $10,000 to $150,000. The smaller courses which reaped such a rich harvest at the beginning of the craze are now practically deserted and hardly make expenses. The public is shopping around and looking for the courses which offer more tricky shots and have all kinds of side attractions besides.

The smaller courses have cut their prices and on greens which formerly charged 35 cents for 18 holes the rate is now 25 cents for the first round and 15 cents for each additional round. Tickets for $5 worth of games also can be purchased for $3. The larger outfits, however, still maintain a 50 cents or 35 cents fee with a slight reduction for additional rounds.

Showmanship Now Needed

Showmanship has also become an important factor in the operation of the puny golf game, as competition is fast becoming stronger and stronger. The opening of the better courses called for an array of powerful searchlights, a radio hookup by remote control and a dance band or stringed orchestra to supply the music. Those who make a hole in one or have a low score at the opening, have their names broadcast to the radio audience and a number dedicated to them by the orchestra. Film celebs who may be on the course are introduced over the "mike" by the master of ceremonies, who also assists in keeping the crowds moving. For instance, when some girl, who is about as handy with a golf club as with a pick axe, gets stalled on a tough hole the m.c. shoots it for her, tells her it's tough for pro's even and thus keeps the gang moving.

Many of the courses now advertise in the daily papers much in the manner of the theatres and they go for matinee crowds with offers of serving tea and cakes to the ladies. Some of the courses hire girls with plenty of looks, who, through constant practice are adept at shooting around par, to play with lonesome gentlemen who are desirous of a partner. The girls place bets on each hole and rake in a fair amount of coin during the course of a day.

Three magazines have been started, devoted exclusively to the game, and two associations have been formed with the members being owners of the courses. All the Los Angeles and Hollywood papers now have miniature golf editors who solicit advertising and write publicity blurbs concerning the putt-putt places.

On the bigger courses club houses are built and meals and soft drinks are served. Around the various holes one finds easy chairs for those who have to wait, and every manner of comfort for the patron is sought.

Numerous film celebrities are also interested in the business, among whom are Mary Pickford, William Seiter and his wife, Laura La Plante, who by the way makes a daily appearance at the course, thus offering an attraction to the film fans. Al and Mort Nathan, short subject producers, also are interested in the business and their course, which is near the restaurant district, does a heavy business after shows with the theatrical crowd.

The various courses each have a certain motif in the building, some of which are an Eskimo village, a trip around the world with every hole a different port, Japanese gardens, Spanish villages' and one course, with an estimated cost of $150,000, will be built around a huge castle, with all of the architecture in the 17th century style.

This business which in the space of a few months has grown to a $125,000,000 industry, employing from three to thirty people on each course, besides the men needed to build them, offers theatres much competition. In Los Angeles and vicinity showmen are doing many different types of exploitation to hold up box-office grosses which in many cases have suffered seriously from the golf invasion.

Theatre Course Clicks

One of the best schemes for holding trade was pulled by Charles Wuerz and Everett Sharp of San Bernardino, Cal. Wuerz is city manager of the Fox West Coast theatres and Sharp is manager of the Fox theatre. They built a small nine hole course in the forecourt of the theatre. All who purchase a ticket are entitled to play free and the course, while small, is plenty tough. Kids can play for 15 cents and see a show besides and they bring the old folks along, so it results in good business. This stunt gives the kids golf and a show for 15 cents, whereas it costs that much for them to play golf without any show on the regular courses.

Cost of this course was about $300 for materials, but when the extra equipment, such as putters, balls, chairs, etc., was figured in, the layout came to about $500, which is still a good investment.

In Los Angeles Fox West Coast owns and operates about ten courses near their various theatres. These were used for experimental purposes and from what the company has learned so far, they are going to stay out of the business, as they figure that with cooler weather coming on the golf courses outdoors will suffer. Fox West Coast plans, however, to build courses in some of their smaller houses which are dark and with heating and cooling plants these will be able to operate all year round.

Tie-ups between theatres and golf course are not favored by most picture house managers. There are some exceptions, however. The Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood offers the first fifty patrons at matinees free tickets for a round of golf on one of Hollywood's best courses. The larger newspapers which are sponsoring tournaments on the courses offer weekly prizes which often include tickets to neighborhood houses. Generally though golf and theatres do not mix so well.

One thing that has apparently done the theatres more good than anything else is the better class of pictures which have been introduced in the past few weeks. Greater Talkie Season may be largely responsible, but business has improved greatly all over the city and golf has suffered.

H. B. Franklin of Fox West Coast Theatres says that golf is not a serious threat

Oklahomans Play Before, After Show

Oklahoma City—Theatres here are getting a break because playing of miniature golf usually is done before or after theatre hours. There now are 64 courses here and between 350 and 400 in neighboring cities and towns.

Publix owns one course and is printing programs for others, backed up with a theatre advertisement. Recently, in one week Publix had 54 tie-ups. At the Ritz, Publix-owned, a free round goes with each theatre admission and tickets are awarded as prizes. Warners is ignoring the courses locally. Throughout the territory, theatres are co-operating, feeling to do so is to make the best of the situation.

Pittsburgh Thinks Pee Wees Are Aid; On Wane in Southwest; Michigan Hurt

Regular Golf Gets the Play In Mill City

Minneapolis—Unless it is made an inside affair, demitasse golf will have a short season in this teritory, it is believed. This city is a great golfing center and the town literally went nuts on golf during the recent national open. The city is dotted with regular golf courses, which get the big play. There are about 30 miniatures and 14 driving courses.

In some sections of the Northwest, the craze is nicking about 25 per cent off grosses, but the average effect is small and the fad has been on the wane over the last month, due to cooler weather.

to the theatre and, while it was for a time, the novelty has worn off and now that the business is more stabilized it will take its place as just another form of amusement. He states, however, that it is a game which offers clean, wholesome exercise and full of interest.

Some Pittsburgh Zone Showmen Say Golf Aids

Pittsburgh—Theatre owners in western Pennsylvania and West Virginia are paying scant attention to the competition afforded by miniature golf courses. The consensus of opinion seems to be that such courses have not cut into the theatre business to any great extent. Exhibitors consider it a passing fad and are content to allow it to run its course unhampered. As far as can be learned, no local theatres have cooperated in any way with these courses, in the form of combination tickets, or otherwise.

There is no denying that these courses are proving good money-makers here with but few exceptions. There are many theatre owners who believe that the courses have helped them, inasmuch as they have kept people in town on many evenings. After playing at the new pastime for an hour or so, they visit one of the nearby theatres, exhibitors have discovered.

It is difficult to state the exact number of miniature courses and driving ranges in Pittsburgh, since they are still being opened almost daily. A conservative estimate follows:

City miniature courses, 40.

Territory miniature courses (not including Pittsburgh), 300.

City driving ranges, none.

Territory driving ranges, 50.

So far as is definitely announced, the only theatre which will be fitted out with an indoor course this winter is Al. Weiland's Rialto in the Knoxville section of the city. It is likely that two theatres in East Liberty will house indoor courses this winter. Both these houses, the Alhambra and the East End, have been dark for some time.

Worry Over Tom Thumbs For Texas Houses Wanes

Dallas—Abbreviated golf has put a crimp in theatre business during the spring and summer, but the racket is just about washed up, in the opinion of Col. H. A. Cole, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas. Exhibitors won't have to worry about the craze much longer, he feels.

In Dallas at the peak of the season there were between 60 and 70 miniature courses operating, and other cities of the state have been infested in proportion. The small towns have from one to half a dozen, according to Cole, who estimates there are about 1,000 courses throughout Texas. However, he doubts whether one-fourth of the courses are paying their overhead.

Courses Proving Tough Competition at Detroit

Detroit—Miniature golf is proving tough competition for theatres of Detroit. There are about 28 courses and ten driving courses in the city.

So far nothing has been done to combat the courses and theatre owners are not entering the business. Nor are there any hook-ups for admission to course and theatre on a combination rate.

Midgets Sock Grosses At Houston; Passing Seen

Houston—Exhibitors here are keenly aware of the competition of the miniature golf courses, but are doing very little to combat it. Opinions concerning the seriousness of the opposition, or its duration, vary.

E. E. Collins, city manager of Publix, and his house managers have placed their advertisements on many of the course score cards, and in some instances have placed placards bearing the theatre ads at importants hazards on the course. To date this is the sole method of combating the opposition here.

W. V. Taylor, manager of Loew's State, is of the opinion that the fad will "die over night," although he admits that at present it is "murdering the show business." He believes that the winter season will close most of the courses.

Another view is taken by Eddie Bremer, RKO-Majestic manager. "It is just modern progress, so what are you going to do about it?" he asked. "If it were not the little golf courses, it would be some other new thing. The best way to meet it is to keep showing good shows at your own theatre."

Pictures Basic Entertainment

"Motion pictures are the basic entertainment of this section of the country, and always will be so. Just now the golf fad is hurting business, but as the newness wears off people will turn back to pictures for their amusements," is the opinion of Will Horwitz of the Texan, Iris and Ritz. "A patron who at first figured 35 cents on the course was cheaper than 60 cents for a movie is now realizing that 35 cents on the course several times a week does not compare well with 60 cents once a week at the show. Already the competition is less than it was a month ago."

City Fathers at Des Moines Debating Advisability of License Fees

The city permit clerk lists 45 miniature courses in Houston, and states there are several operating which have not yet taken out permits. Sports' writers for the daily papers say there are 80 operating in Houston, and probably 100 in Houston and a radius of 50 miles.

There are six driving courses in Houston, with three of them lighted to the ninth hole for night playing. The competition of the driving course to the theatres is negligible, theatre men say.

Night baseball, started in Houston a month ago, ate into theatre profits the first week, but is very little felt at this time. Night football, sure to be started in the fall, will afford some competition, but not to a serious extent, theatre men feel.

Iowa Exhibitors Ponder Course; Few Plan Links

Des Moines—Miniature golf links are increasing at a rate which makes it impossible to state accurately how many are in Des Moines on a certain date. The building commissioner's office records 18 courses, with two driving courses, but a conservative estimate shows that there are more than forty, with many courses not having reported to the commissioner. The city council is at present debating the question of taxing the golf links to make up a deficit which will result in the city treasury due to a cut of taxes.

City councils over the state have asked $25, $50 and $180 of golf links installed at various points. It is estimated that there are more than 500 over the state and that they are having a very decided effect upon business of the theatres. Exchange men figure that $3,000 goes to the golfies instead of the theatres in Des Moines each week while the theatre men contend that the hot weather alone is accounting for this cut.

At Iowa City, where they have taxed oil stations for the amount of parking space over a reasonable amount taken up by the stations and have gotten away with it so well that other cities are now watching what they are planning to do regard to the minature golf courses, a tax of $50 is about to be put in force by the city council, which has passed an ordinance to that effect.

Several theatre men are considering putting in their own courses which will cooperate with the theatre's business, but they are all opposed to any plans of the miniature golf places to join forces. Free ice cream at the Paramount, a fortune teller in the lobby who reads your hand free at the Orpheum and a matinee for children at which dogs, rabbits and other domestic pets are recent prizes given by the Des Moines houses with their theatre admissions, but no golf tickets. The Family at Davenport, owned by Publix, and which has been closed for a year, is to be opened as an indoor golf course this winter, but there will not be pictures shown there. The seats will be taken out and a de luxe course installed. The Central States Theatres, which control the chain owned by A. H. Blank, are discussing plans for installing courses at their theatres, but will have no definite announcement to make for another month. A complete checkup shows many Iowa theatre men who are planning something along this line, but have been unable to decide exactly what course they will adopt.

Pigmy Competition Not Serious, Indiana Feels

Indianapolis—Disposition among the theater interests here is to ignore the miniature golf course as a competitor to the theatre. At the present time there are 21 of these little courses scattered about the city, and in the contiguous territory, or territory from which local theaters might be expected to draw patronage, there are at least twice this many—and this is a conservative figure. The exact count is not obtainable definitely.

There can be no doubt, according to theatre managers, that the miniature courses constitute competition, but there is not the seriousness about this competition that some believe. The neighborhood picture houses have been hurt perhaps more than the downtown houses. Downtown theatre managers say they have noticed no direct ill effects from these courses.

In this city there are five public or municipal courses and six private golf courses, all of 18 holes. These cause the theatre interests no worry at all now, for they have been in operation for at least three years—all of them—and if there ever was any trade drawn away from the theatres by these courses, it is not noticeable now and the theatre owners have overcome the handicap. In surrounding territory there are only three courses close enough to cause any possible competition.

Thus far none of the local managers has taken any steps to combat this competition. They continue their regular advertising programs, even with some of the miniature courses advertising on the same page. There have been no attempts to tie up courses and theatres on a single admission basis.

Competition Diminishing In "Casey" Trade Zone

Kansas City—There are approximately 80 miniature golf courses in Kansas City, according to a recent checkup. In Kansas and western Missouri, the territory served by Kansas City exchanges, about 700 of these little courses are in active operation.

Driving courses number approximately seven in Kansas City, or rather close to Kansas City, only one being within the city limits. The others are within a mile of the limits and are on the principal highways leading into town. Most of the larger towns in the territory have driving courses, but the exact number has not been determined.

Early in the summer the novelty had its effect on the box offices in Kansas City, according to several managers. At present business is not what would be called good, but Tom Thumb golf is not being blamed. A recent survey of miniature golf courses within the city showed that patronage was not as heavy as it was in June and July. Courses that formerly had capacity crowds at 2 A.M. now are almost deserted by 11 o'clock, with the exception of Saturday nights, when fair crowds can be seen playing at midnight.

In the territory miniature golf continues to draw patrons from the box-office, but the competition is getting to be less serious. Crop conditions in Kansas and Missouri are blamed more for poor theatre business than miniature golf, according to one Kansas City exchange manager. Salesmen report that small town exhibitors are less worried about Tom Thumb golf now than they were two months ago.

Theatres Shun Tie-Ups

According to several salesmen interviewed by the Motion Picture News, no theatre in the Kansas City territory has tied-up with the course owners on a co-operative basis. Salesmen know of no theatre which has opened a course of its own as a means of combating the situation.

Several courses in Kansas City are offering archery as a side-line. Bows and arrows are furnished and the diversion is getting a fair response. An archery court has been established in town where bow and arrow shooting is offered exclusively.

Courses Pooh-Poohed by Philadelphia Exhibitors

Philadelphia — Although there are approximately 400 midget golf courses in the Philadelphia zone, with the number ever increasing, though not as rapidly as a month ago when the fever was at its heighth, local picture men are not disposed to regard them as serious competition.

Business this year has been admittedly poor, but other causes, principally the abnormal heat and the general depression, have been blamed rather than the baby golf courses. Most theatre owners in this vicinity apparently agree that to regard the new game as a serious competitor would be to subscribe again to that alarmist frenzy which frequently sweeps over the industry. At the present time, there are no tie-ups with any of the golf courses on the part of theatre owners, and none appears to be contemplated.

First runs have felt the general depression more than the neighborhoods, a fact which bears significantly on whatever influence Tom Thumb golf has on picture business, as there is only one such course in the downtown district and that located, ironically enough, on the site at 17th and Market Sts., originally intended by William Fox as the location for a 5,000 seat theatre. The only notice taken of this course is the rumor that the Warner-Stanley interests had taken an advertisement for this course to be run in the Mastbaum program and then thought better of it and cancelled the order.

Suburban Business Up

The neighborhoods this year have gained the business of many of the patrons of the downtown houses who have expressed the very human desire to save car fare and the extra admission asked at the downtown houses. In fact, the neighborhoods, as a class, have been better off this summer than last and with the exception of a very few of the suburban theatres in sparsely settled districts, have very little to complain of from the midget golfers.

Meanwhile, the midget courses seem to be storing up plenty of grief for themselves. They are following the same practice which has caused trouble so often in the movie field, of concentrating their course in one neighborhood. There are intersections in some part of the zone where there is a course in each corner. In one suburban section, Upper Darby, 25 courses within the radius of a few city blocks have offered so much competition for each other that a price war has resulted. In the meantime, the two large neighborhood theatres in the district have been getting by with no worse than average summer business.

Courses Face Taxation

Councilman Bernard Samuel, of the city council finance committee, has already turned a speculative eye on the courses and is preparing to introduce a taxation bill against them, which also includes a curfew clause. The excessive heat has hurt the matinee business of the courses and they have been taking advantage of the coolness of the evening by remaining open long after midnight. They seem to do their peak of business from 11 to 1 o'clock at night—another factor taking them out of the picture as movie competition. This lateness of operation has resulted in many complaints and in quite a few lawsuits.

In addition to the taxation threat, the midget courses have been in the "middle" so far as the campaign against the Sunday "blue" Laws of Pennsylvania are concerned. So far the courses have been getting by on Sundays by paying a fine of $4 and costs of

Theatre Tie-Ups

Exhibitor reaction to midget golf varies in each section of the country.

Some have definitely tied in with golf operators, meeting the competition by giving the public a two-way buy: one gate for golf and theatre.

Elsewhere, showmen have arranged for the hole-in-oners to be passed into the theatre. Then there is the group that has installed golf in theatre lobbies and the group, notably Fox West Coast theatres, which has launched golf on its own to compete with the pee-wee operators.

Other exhibitors are playing it alone, taking no cognizance of the competition, in the belief the craze is seasonal.

N. W. Sees Nosedive for Sand Lot Pool With Fall Weather Lurking in Offing

$2.50. The various pro and semi-pro baseball teams in the vicinity, who have been forbidden to play on the same principal, have been protesting against this discrimination and Director of Public Safety Schofield has been turning the attention of his department to the courses with the threat of closing them on Sunday if complaints become excessive against them. Offsetting this publicity, the courses have engineered one newspaper tie-up. The Tom Thumb system, including 20 of the courses in the city limits, have tied up with the Philadelphia Record for a tournament, the winner to be sent to the National Tom Thumb tournament sometime in September at Chattanooga, Tenn.

By no stretch of the imagination can the "driving courses" of the "you sock 'em, we chase 'em" variety be regarded as movie competition. These courses, by their very nature, are restricted to the outskirts of the city, or along the boulevards, and can be classed as appealing only to the motorist who wishes to break the monotony of his trip by spreading wornout golf balls over the pasture.

Dinky Links' End Seen In Northwest Rainy Season

Seattle—Although Tom Thumb golf has not been as strong a factor in competition with picture houses in this territory as it has in other sections, exhibitors of the Pacific Northwest metropolis naturally have felt the results of the outdoor pastime in actual loss of dollars and cents at the theatre box-offices.

A check-up early in August revealed approximately 40 miniature golf courses in outdoor locations of Seattle, ranging from corners in the heart of the downtown business section to far outlying suburban and residential locations. At the present time there are about six more miniature courses under construction. A majority of the courses are very elaborate ventures, representing an investment of from $2,000 to $5,000 in construction, exclusive of property leases or rentals.

In addition, there are at the present time three indoor miniature courses—two in the downtown business district and one in the university section.

The most popular and elaborate course in the city is located within three blocks of four of Seattle's leading first run theatres. Two weeks ago it was reported that the daily patronage of the course has never fallen below 675 players, at 25 cents per round of 18 holes. Week-end days brought out as many as 1,200 players.

Courses Closing

Driving courses are a slightly different story. First in the field, they have not increased nor prospered as have the miniature courses. At this date there are five driving courses in Seattle, all located about 10 or 15 minutes' drive from the center of the downtown area. Two courses have already closed because of lack of patronage, despite the fact that one of these was run by one of the city's best known golf enthusiasts and authorities.

Objection was raised recently by residents of homes and apartments adjoining the various courses to the late hours kept by the golfers. The bright lights of the courses and the noise of the players were objectionable in the minds of many persons, and the City Council is at present considering an ordinance to set a closing hour for the courses.

Home Sets Offered

Department stores during recent weeks have been advertising and displaying equipment for the establishment of small courses in the yards of private homes. The sets offered range in price from $5 upward and have found ready sale, according to store authorities. The equipment replaces former purchases of croquet sets, it was said.

Local theatres, for the most part, have been prone to overlook this form of competition as a passing fad. Nothing at all in the way of active combat has been done by any exhibitor here. For several weeks the Paramount allowed its patrons to play Tom Thumb golf on a small course installed in the large lounge on the balcony of the house. The stunt was abandoned a short time ago because of lack of interest, in spite of announcements on the screen and in newspaper ads.

Likewise, there has been no case of tie-ups between local theatres and miniature courses. Pacific Northwest officials of the Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc. organization last week reported that no effort will be made here to establish courses in conjunction with their theatres, as contemplated in California, or to work in conjunction with any course. The theatres did object somewhat to the tournament staged among patrons of the miniature courses by one of the local newspapers a few weeks ago, but the contest weakened of its own accord and is now a thing of the past.

Rain to Dampen Ardor

What the future holds for local miniature courses is a matter of conjecture. From October until April or May the rainfall in this territory is a matter of serious consideration, and it is the general belief of local exhibitors that the miniature golf bug will meet death by drowning when the rainy season arrives. Because they feel that a man or woman would prefer a comfortable, dry seat in a warm and pleasant theatre to a round of wet, sloppy golf on a muddy miniature course, they are looking at the present competition in a light vein.

Also, it must be remembered, they point out, that 25 cents still buys a lot more entertainment in a theatre than on a miniature golf course. Youngsters, especially, prefer a 10 cent theatre ticket with its two full hours of entertainment to a 25 cent round of golf that lasts only a few minutes.

Taken all in all, miniature golf in the Seattle section does not present the highly competitive aspect that it might in other territories where it can be a popular year-round pastime. For that reason, theatre owners and operators are not particularly worried over this new fad; in fact, some of them find time to play a round or two daily on courses near their theatres, and incidentally "sell" the course proprietors and attendants on the fine show that they are presenting at their theatre!

Refrigerated Golf

Omaha—When the minature golf craze seized the country, Lionel Wasson, manager of the Paramount, sensed the competition from out-door courses and installed a nine holer in the lounge. The course cost him $250 and in the few weeks it has been in operation it has been played by thousands.

No charge is made to theatre patrons. All they have to do is submit their ticket stubs to the caddy master and they are outfitted with a putter and ball. Women have found this course a convenient place to check husbands who squirm during the showing of the picture. The women see the picture and the golfer improves his putting on two tickets.

Portland Finds Miniature Golf Craze Is Spreading

Portland—Play on the midget golf courses with the continued warm evenings seems to be on the increase, and with the coming week the resumption of night baseball by both the amateur and professional teams has cut the grosses even at the first run key houses. A bar to further courses, however, is noted in the ordinance which provides that miniature golf courses will have to pay a license fee of $25 a quarter after Oct. 1. It is found that city officials have been rather delinquent in collecting the fees, but this will now be remedied, and courses also will be compelled to close at a reasonable hour. At Spokane an emergency ordinance has been passed by the council levying an annual tax of $50 for miniature courses.

Proprietors of golf courses continue to bring out new ideas, including nine-hole iron-shot courses, inside courses to be in full operation with the advent of the rainy season, annual kin tournament, special nights putting up attractive prizes, and also tieing up in some few instances with theatres on a combination ticket, at slightly reduced prices for each kind of entertainment.

Even the youngsters have got the "pee wee" golf craze, word coming from Longview that youngsters from 9 to 12, with an eye to business and apeing their elders, opening a golf course for youngsters only, selling memberships at 15 cents a month, or family memberships for 10 cents a week. The "operators" carried rocks, sand and lumber and the course was constructed at nothing flat.

Manager Floyd Maxwell, himself an ardent golfer, secured the services of Mel Smith, professional golfer, and persuaded him to become an actor, demonstrating his more delicate shots on the Fox Broadway stage in connection with the "Country Club" idea, and had as his guests the entire membership of the Columbia Golf Club.

From latest figures obtainable, which are increasing almost daily, there are now some 50 miniature golf courses in Portland, 18 of the largest and finest in the country of the full-size variety; several of the straight drive courses, and it is evident that the multitudes have shifted to the Tom Thumb greens. It looks now as if the early fall rains are the only thing that will bring them back.

Grosses Up, So Showmen At Providence Unworried

Providence—Seventy-five miniature golf courses within the confines of greater Providence are making inroads into the grosses of exhibitors here. The wiseacres, however, feel that the first flurry of snow and chilly days will send the clubs to the showers and bring patrons back to the theatres.

Harry Storin, general manager for RKO in Rhode Island, sees no menace whatsoever in the new craze, ranking it as a serious contender with such things as church carnivals, transient boxing bouts, the old swimming hole and spelling bees.

He does feel, however, that the little golf courses will be moved indoors when Jack Frost makes his entrance and that this will be the birth of downtown "country clubs" where the workingman will vie with his more affluent neighbor for high scores and low. Storin, however, sees no reason why a person can't play a few rounds of golf and then trot right around the corner to view a picture.

One of the most pretentious courses in Rhode Island has been installed on the grounds of the North Main St. auditorium, where the biggest athletic contests are staged. Hundreds gather here nightly, either to putt the balls around or to see what it is all about. Less pretentious courses have sprung up in every conceivable spot, but the downtown area, exhibitors note with glee, so far is free of them.

An optimistic viewpoint is taken by the majority of exhibitors here who cite the fact that grosses for the past two weeks have been better than average, although they do admit that the general run of attractions has been unusual.

Pennsylvania Exhibitors Considering Indoor Links

Harrisburg, Pa.—Canvass of the effect of the Tom Thumb golf competition on the picture business in Central Pennsylvania discloses that, in the opinion of some showmen, pictures have suffered far less than is popularly supposed.

The territory probably has figured in the same proportion as the rest of the country in the rise of the mushroom baby golf courses. Harrisburg, the capitol city, has a dozen of them, including one built on the roof of a centrally located downtown garage, and there are scores of others in the immediate environs of the city. But whether they have cut seriously into the business of the picture houses is a disputed question.

Harrisburg has witnessed the closing of three neighborhood theatres,—the Capitol, Grand and National,—in the last few weeks—and they will probably remain closed, but the district representative of one of the large central Pennsylvania chains attributes the passing of the neighborhoods to an entirely different cause than the competition of the baby golf courses.

In the opinion of this exhibitor neighborhood picture houses are doomed, but the reason is not the Tom Thumb golf competition. It is rather that they cannot hold their own with the big downtown houses which are far better equipped to present sound productions. It is this man's opinion that the public requires talkies, but only the best that can be produced, and that as the small neighborhood houses cannot afford to equip themselves with the most expensive sound equipment the public, insisting on the best, is deserting the neighborhood theatres for the first runs.

Plan Indoor Courses

Two of the Harrisburg neighborhood theatres that have just been closed—the Grand and Capitol—both controlled by the Wilmer & Vincent circuit—are to be remodeled for use as indoor golf courses, which will be operated all the year round. The Wilmer & Vincent company is thus the pioneer, in central Pennsylvania, in putting unprofitable neighborhood picture houses to this use, and the experiment will be watched with interest.

Whether the houses will be operated in the new capacity directly by the owners or will be leased to independent outside operators has not yet been definitely decided, but it is the belief of the owners that the roofed-in golf courses will have an advantage over the outdoor courses, because the former can operate throughout the year. It is looked upon as not improbable that many other theatre owners with small houses that are not proving profitable may find a means of averting financial losses by converting them into indoor golf courses.

The outdoor Tom Thumb golf courses, while generally regarded as big money makers, have not in all cases had smooth sailing. In Harrisburg an expensive course laid out in an exclusive residential section has met with opposition in court. Home owners in the district applied for an injunction on the ground that the course was a nuisance and the complainants were sus-

One Beneficial Effect

One effect of the Tom Thumb courses that has been beneficial rather than detrimental to the picture business, is that in many instances the golf competition has compelled traveling summer carnivals, of the type which put on shows for fire companies and fraternal organizations, to go out of business. These carnivals have for years been a thorn in the side of exhibitors.

Despite the supposed profitable operation of the Tom Thumbs there is evidence that many of them, installed at considerable financial outlays, are not doing as well financially as anticipated and there is a strong belief in many quarters that the fad will wear itself out. One evidence of this already is noted in certain parts of central Pennsylvania where golf courses are cutting prices in competion with each other.

Capitalize Pee Wee Golf, Is Exhibitor's Advice

Cooperstown, N. Y.—Showmen are the proper ones to operate miniature golf courses effectively, in the opinion of William C. Smalley, head of Smalley's Theatres, upstate New York chain. Accordingly, he is building miniature courses in all his towns, in order to control admission price and hours of operation.

His night price is 50 cents top for theatre and for golf at Cooperstown, which is a summer resort. If the course was operated by private parties, the price probably would be 25 and 35 cents, average prices in nearby towns. Not only has the Cooperstown links proved a protection to the theatre but has proved a profitable investment as well.

The golf courses Smalley is building are hard to compete with unless considerably more money than Tom Thumbs cost is invested. Operation of a course by an exhibitor provides opportunity to advertise the theatre at slight cost, Smalley says. For example: near some of the difficult holes little signs are placed reading something like this:

"If you make this hole in one you will receive free admission to Smalley's Theatre tonight where you will see and hear Norma Shearer in 'The Divorcee.'"

Omaha Not Hard Hit but Worried Over Next Year

Omaha—Due probably to the fact the miniature golf craze hit this section in midseason, its effect upon the summer's business was less severe than elsewhere. However, a certain amount of worry is being expended by exhibitors on what the future holds in store. As soon as the snows melt next spring, the tiny courses will burst out with all their alleged fury.

A general consensus of exhibitor opinion failed to reveal many who have been badly hurt by the new competition or who view the present situation with excessive gloom.

Ten weeks of practically no rain gave the small links in Omaha a break that they probably never will get again. The drouth also extended throughout the state. Under normal conditions, intermittent summer rains would have made golf an unprofitable business in this territory. One good rain here recently washed a couple of courses down in the next block.

In Omaha's city limits there are 20 miniature courses and four driving courses. Two other tiny links are under construction, one of which is indoors. Local theatres have practically shunned all connection with the golf course operators. Only the Orpheum (RKO) has tied up on a free ticket gag, giving the ducats for the highest score turned in Thursday nights on two courses. Thursday is the house's closing night. The courses playing with the Orpheum, both under the same management, display the theatre's current attractions and the free ticket offer on a well-located sign about 2 by 3 feet.

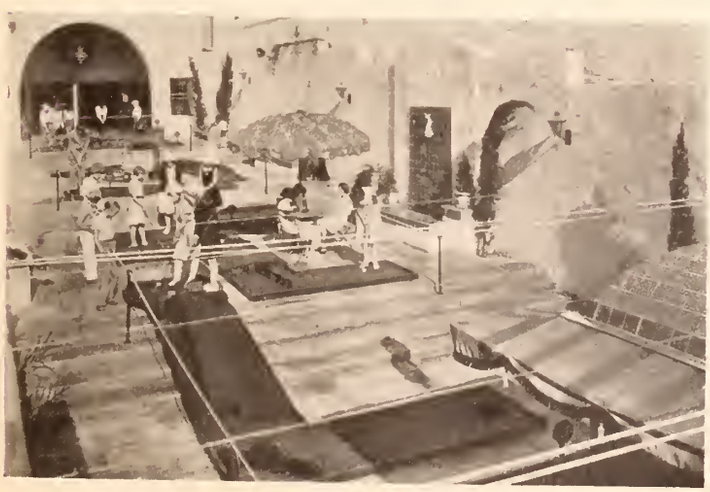
Admissions to the golf places all over town are 25 cents in the afternoons and 35 at night, with the exception of the Orpheum's tie-ups, which recently reduced to 15 and 25 cents.

Lobby Course Successful



Lionel Wasson, manager of the Paramount, installed a nine hole course in the lower foyer of the theatre early in July. Outside of experiencing some difficulty in securing a satisfactory felt for the greens and fairways, the stunt had proven a decided success. About 3,000 people play the course weekly, either before or after seeing the picture.

None of the driving courses appears to be getting much play. Three have been built in connection with small links.

Charles Pincus, Paramount Publix district manager here, is making plans for a citywide miniature golf tournament with the finals to be played on the Paramount indoor course. All contestants, as well as the gallery, will be charged regular admission prices. The World Herald may tie in with the theatre in promoting the idea, but nothing definite has been arranged.

Reports from outstate indicate that in many instances exhibitors have been farsighted enough to grab the choice spot in town and erect the miniature course themselves. A theatre owner at Dunlap, Ia., owns a profitable course two blocks from his house. In Wayne, Neb., the exhibitor has built one across the street from his theatre. In Loop City, Neb., and elsewhere, theatre owners have begun to double on pictures and golf. No information is available on driving courses in the smaller towns.

A survey of adjacent towns reveals that a population of 1,250 usually supports one course. Some towns of 5,000 have two.

Combatting the Craze

Summer campaigns of various descriptions are being used to combat the golf craze. Rowman Miller, division press agent for Paramount Publix, is instituting a series of "Know Your City" contests to beat the golf bug.

"Exhibitors nowhere in this territory are alarmed at the prospects of meeting this new competition," said C. E. Williams, president of the M. P. T. O. A. of Nebraska and western Iowa. "The variable climatic conditions, rains and fine sound installations in this section do not make it a healthy place for miniature golf. We do realize, however, that it is something to guard against, but the outlook for the present season is quite favorable. Next summer it may be a different story."

Paramount Publix officials here are convinced that the golf game is a fad which will not survive another season.

No Crying at Cincy Due To Goofy Golf Epidemic

Cincinnati—Exhibitors in this territory have not found it particularly necessary to turn their faces toward the wailing wall on account of Tom Thumb, miniature, tabloid, demi-tasse or indoor golf.

Like all other parts of the country, courses in this territory have multiplied with a rapidity that would make the proverbial offspring of the lowly guinea pig seem tame in comparison.

Courses have been established in practically every suitable location available for the purpose—urban, suburban, residential and commercial. Some are homemade affairs with the telltale earmarks cleverly camouflaged by elaborate trappings. Others of standard or regulation type have been embellished with bizarre fronts, fittings and furnishings that would do justice to a metropolitan picture house. Some managers even employ barkers, a la side show.

When this racket was first introduced hereabouts it created quite a furore, and many who wielded a mean putter lingered far into the night, when and where conditions permitted, playing foursomes, threesomes, twosomes, lonesomes or what have you? However, the fad or craze is now losing considerable of its novelty, and many who at first felt the urge are passing the game up entirely.

Inroads Nominal

While many exhibitors are frank to admit that they have noted an appreciable decrease in business, especially at the outset, the situation is not nearly as bad as reported from other sections. Taken as a whole, the inroads on business have been practically negligible. No specific steps have been taken to combat this competition, with one exception. H. L. Tracy, manager of the Temple theatre, Willard, O., installed a very small course in his lobby, giving a free admission ticket to anyone making a hole in one. This proved a good draw for awhile, but interest soon waned, and the project was finally abandoned.

The number of miniature courses in Cincinnati is estimated at 90, with 17 driving courses in the city. Dayton has approximately 30 miniatures and five driving courses. There are ten miniature and two driving courses in Hamilton.

Total estimated number of courses throughout the territory is 220 miniature and 40 driving.

None of the driving courses features night games, although the miniatures cater especially to the night crowds, with exception of Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Sandlot Pool Not Going So Big in Wisconsin

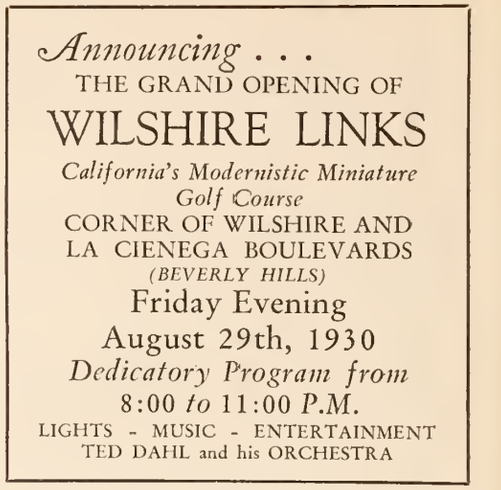
Milwaukee—This territory has not been as badly hit by the miniature golf bug as other sections of the country, although courses continue to spring up. At present Milwaukee has ten miniature courses, with three in West Allis, two in Shorewood and one in Wauwatosa, all suburbs. Accordingly there are 16 courses in Milwaukee and its immediate vicinity and approximately 100 throughout the state.

Exhibitors here in most instances have not regarded the courses with any amount of alarm and view the sport as a fad which will pass away after a short while. Investigations show that the ordinary golfer does not care about the miniature golf game and consequently the greatest appeal is to those who don't play golf.

Milwaukee has six driving courses within its limits and about ten within the county. There are seven public golf courses in the Milwaukee territory which, statistics show, continue to draw more golfers each season. That these courses are already meeting with slow business is shown by the fact that many of them, especially in the smaller cities in Wisconsin, are offering prizes, including playing cards, cigarettes, etc., to players making certain holes on the course in the least number of strokes.

Showmen Ignore 'Em

In Milwaukee no steps have been taken by theatre operators to curb the courses and for the most part the exhibitors have ignored them. In some sections of the state, however, theatre managers and miniature golf course operators are working hand in hand.



For example, Ed Benjii, manager of the two Fox houses in Oshkosh, has the manager of the miniature golf course in that town advertising his pictures at the Fox theatres and co-operative ads are run in the newspapers. The newspaper advertising calls upon the people to see such and such a picture at either of the Fox theatres and then play a round of miniature golf.

Besides advertising coming attractions on the golf course, the manager of the course purchases tickets to the Fox theatres, as well as thrift boxes, at regular prices, from Manager Benjii, which he awarded as prizes to persons making certain holes in the least number of strokes.

Milwaukee courses are for the most part located in residential sections of the city and in only three cases are they located adjacent to theatres. Milwaukee has not started as yet to tax the courses, but if persons in residential districts have occasion to enter complaint against a course they may secure an injunction restraining the course from operating.

In Madison an ordinance compelling courses to close at 10 o'clock and pay a license fee is being contemplated. In Kenosha the courses must locate in commercial districts and are barred from the residential districts. Milwaukee courses operate anywhere from 6 in the morning til 11 o'clock at night.

Plans Under Way for Winter on N. E. Courses

Boston—Figuring they have three months to go before cold weather chills the ardor of the fans, miniature golf courses are enjoying mushroom growth throughout New England. There are 2,740 links in operation or under construction, with the number growing at a rapid clip.

Within four weeks, approximately 950 new courses were opened or placed under construction. There may have been a few more. It is doubtful if there were less. In only six cases could ownership of a course be traced to the same party or parties who have theatre interests. In each of these instances they were individual exhibitors. Three are within the suburban Boston area, one in the central part of the state and two in western Massachusetts.

In Rhode Island there is strong probability that two courses are financed by theatrical men. In Connecticut it is rumored that four courses are so financed. Out of 2,740 courses, there are at most only 12 in which theatre interests are either known or believed to have financial control.

Few Indoor Courses Planned

So far no indoor courses have been constructed. Plans have been made for a few such courses; perhaps a score in the whole of New England.

As a panacea for the closed theatre, indoor miniature golf courses in New England have made no visible headway. There is every reason to believe that every owner of a closed theatre has already secured all information and estimates for converting the theatre into a miniature golf course. It is also known that many theatre owners have been looking around for available floor space in nearby buildings for indoor courses. To date, that is as far as the movement in New England has gone.

A Motion Picture News reporter talked with at least a dozen men who own theatres that have been dark, either during the summer or for a longer period and asked all of them the question:

"Have you considered converting that dark theatre into an indoor miniature golf course?"

Every one of the 12 answered:

"We have. We have all of the data on hand, costs, layouts and other information."

That's the story! They have all information ready, but not one of them has taken the step.

Meanwhile, if one drives anywhere in the evening, not only will he pass many miniature golf courses in full blast, but he will pass almost an equally large number of courses under construction where night crews have been added to the day crews and they are working under the same flood lights to rush the courses to completion that a few days hence will light the courses for groups of players.

The feeling in New England seems to be to wait a few weeks longer to see what happens after the vacation season is over. Vacations officially ended Labor Day.

If indoor courses are going to be a success, as the out-of-door courses ought to be able to tell within another month, theatre owners will probably be ready to spend money to obtain them.

Uses Combination

Cleveland — The theatre advertises the course and the course advertises the theatre. That is the idea adopted by Albert E. Ptak, who has a course operating directly across from his theatre. He runs it from 8 A.M. until midnight, the admission price being the same as at the theatre. The course is advertised on the screen of the Lyceum, and large signs around the course advertise the theatre's attractions.

Golf Chains Spring Up

Meanwhile changes in miniature golf financing are under way. Chains are being formed. There are several of these chains owning from two or three courses, to a score or so, all advantageously located. There are men interested in the manufacture of ice cream and soft drinks who are putting money into these golf courses and are getting it back again many times over from the concessions. There is one miniature course not ten miles from Boston where the sale of ice cream by the owner of the course brings in several times the gross revenue of the course itself.

There is another chapter which may be opened by these courses in New England. The owner of two of the most successful courses in the suburbs of Boston, who likewise disposes of from four to six truckloads of ice cream at each of them a day during warm weather, plans to provide out-of-door amusement this winter. He has already had a large pond excavated, where there will be skating. He has had plans drawn for a sort of clubhouse, with a big open fireplace at each end, a kitchen at one side, and he will serve the winter sports enthusiasts with such things as clam chowder, hot dogs, barbeque sandwiches and similar hot foods, with the usual hot coffee and hot chocolate. He has made arrangements for an orchestra, has ordered toboggans, skiis and snowshoes for delivery later and before the out-of-door golf season is over he will have his winter sports outfit ready to show to the golf patrons. He owns a big acreage on a four-lane state road which is kept cleared of snow all winter. He is putting that acreage to work and he says he is financing the winter sports program with the profits of his golf course and ice cream sales since the middle of June.

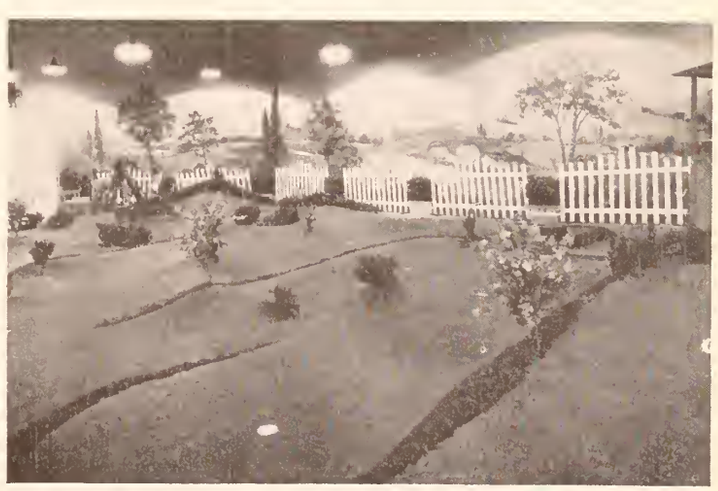
New Winter Sport Centers

Patronage of this winter sports center will not affect theatres to any appreciable degree, any more than patronage of one miniature golf course has affected summer patronage of the theatres. Summer patronage of theatres in New England is uncertain, but there can be no doubt that the half dollars collected on the miniature golf courses would in a majority of cases have gone into the theatre box offices had there been no courses.

Comparison with box-office receipts of a year ago show this year's figures to be larger than last year's in a large majority of theatres in New England, in spite of miniature golf. Yet theatre managers can pick out in any group of golf players on the miniature links many who regularly attended his theatre. They have cut into the business, but it is impossible to tell to what extent at this time.

Short Lived and Harmless Fad, Baltimore Viewpoint

Baltimore—The 46 miniature golf courses for which permits have been granted here, do not seem to be hurting the business of picture theatres in Baltimore, exhibitors say.



Applications have been made to build 76, including the 46 permits granted. Junior McGeehan, publicity representative for Loew's in Baltimore, thinks it is just a fad and that the average life of each course is about 30 days and then it dies out and folds up.

Quite a number are located in the Northwestern section of the city and, according to McGeehan, five in the vicinity of Pimlico started out well, but are now doing next to nothing.

Samuel Bach, manager of the Rialto, a residential house and connected with the Associated Theatres Company, believes that those persons who want to see pictures and are patrons of the neighborhood houses are not going to stop seeing pictures to play miniature golf, but that whether these courses have hurt neighborhood theatre business is a matter of conjecture because summer business is so uncertain.

Some Tom Thumb courses in Baltimore are being built indoors so that they can be used during the winter. And there are four driving courses around Baltimore.

It is the opinion of William E. Stumpf, secretary of the M. P. T. O. of Maryland, Inc., that the fad for petite golf will peter out and be forgotten soon. He says that the organization will not do anything to combat this new form of amusement.

Charles E. Hicks and his son, William, who operate the Hampden theatre, built a miniature golf course about a block away from their theatre and have been doing a thriving business at it without any connection being made with the theatre business. Most of the clientele at the golfie are children and Hicks believes, from experience, that those who are going to see movies are not going to stop by the wayside to play petite golf.

Annapolis License $30

A problem that had to be overcome by the city council at Annapolis, Md., was to find the proper heading under which to license the Lilliputian golf links and what was the proper fee to charge.

Proprietors claimed their pygmy golf courses were not circuses or menageries under which the city can charge $30 for a permit, nor yet were they to be considered as bowling alleys nor billiard parlors, for which $10 per permit is charged.

A session resulted at which it was decided to call them miniature golf links under special ordinance with a license tax per year of $30.

Up in Frederick, Md., R. Ruch Lewis, who has taken over the old Calvary M. E. Church property, has obtained a permit from the city engineer to remodel the interior of the church for a Tiny Tim golf links for indoor use.

Two permits asked for in Baltimore have been opposed at public hearings held and one was denied with others still in abeyance.

According to a concession granted to Harvey Porter, golf professional for three years of the Baltimore parks, small golf links will be built in the city parks of Baltimore; the prices for the public using them will be regulated by the park board and fifteen per cent of the gross will go to the park board for the city.

This action has been done to increase the revenue of the board for general purposes of the parks. One small course for negroes is being built in Druid Hill Park now.

The entrance of the city park board of Baltimore into the miniature golf business probably will do more to hurt the privately owned small courses than any action which the movie men could take.

J. A. Helprin, president of the newly formed Miniature Golf Operators' Association, has protested to the park board against the granting of a concession without posting a public notice and without asking for bids. He may file an injunction action to prevent building of the park links.

Wise Guys

Washington.—Sand lot golf operators didn't get away with a fast one attempted here, when they tried to evade the 11:30 P. M. closing regulation. As the ordinance said nothing about hour of opening, they would switch off the lights at the designated hour, and after a few minutes of darkness, switch them on again. However, Police Judge Hitt ruled that a "reasonable hour" of opening must be observed, so that the courses must remain closed until daylight at least throughout the district.

Face Municipal Levies

Two other angles of the minnies in Baltimore have come up in the license fees that should be charged and the property value assessment for sites on which they are located.

It has been decided to charge a license fee of $50 per year in Baltimore for permission to run the minnies and the Appeal Tax Court is making an investigation concerning the realty values of the sites.

There is a possibility that the small golf links built will be considered in the nature of improvements to the property and assessed next year according to the type of the layout whether the property value has been enhanced.

Extra work has been given the board of zoning appeals due to the building of some courses being opposed by residents in the vicinity of the site where the golfie has been proposed.

Rev. Dr. W. W. Davis, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance has entered the fight against the minnies by having a conference with Charles D. Gaither, Baltimore Police Commissioner.

Davis was accompanied by three others, but he acted as spokesman and requested Commissioner Gaither to do something about the minnies keeping open house on Sunday, his reason being that it is commercialization of the Sabbath.

The commissioner said he would ask the Attorney General to rule whether operating the minnies on Sunday is violating the Blue Laws and that he would give some thought to the matter himself. But the commissioner has felt, it is understood, that the fee paid by the small golfers is similar to the greens fee paid by the golfers on the large courses. Only one other complaint has been heard that where a minister asked the proprietor of a minnie near his church to curtail activities during services, which was done.

Opinions Vary on Golf's B.O. Effect at St. Louis

St. Louis—The 87 miniature golf courses now in operation in this city and vicinity, which represent an investment of about $250,000, have presented a serious source of competition for picture houses, but the measure of their drain on the box-office receipts of either the first runs or neighborhood theatres is very problematical. Some say it is large, while others are inclined to discount these appeals, saying that the patrons of the golf courses see their weekly picture show, nevertheless.

James T. Latham, secretary of the St. Louis Miniature Golf Course Association, has estimated that the local courses employ 400 men and women and in their construction furnished work for 340 electricians, 450 carpenters, 100 painters and 850 laborers.

"Miniature golf, instead of being a nuisance, is a growing industry, and instead of being a temporary fad, it has come to stay," Latham states. Nevertheless, there are some ads in the classified sections of St. Louis newspapers offering some of these small golf courses at bargain rates.

Away from St. Louis the golf competition is even more keen. There is not a town or village in southern Illinois and eastern Missouri that does not boast of one or more of the golf courses, driving courses, target galleries or some other form of golf. In the small towns the theatre is more directly affected than in a community like St. Louis, where the populace must have variety in its entertainment the same as in meals.

Exhibitors Enter Field

Some of the exhibitors of the territory have entered the new field. John Karzin, who formerly operated the Lincoln, Olympia and Casino, St. Louis, has closed all of his houses and is now operating a miniature golf course and is making money. Hector M. E. Paszemoglue has a golf course in the lot formerly occupied by the airdrome adjoining the Embassy.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the eastern Missouri and southern Illinois exhibitor units, is operating a golf layout. This course is sufficiently far enough away not to come into direct competition with any of his houses in South St. Louis, but he has utilized it to advertise his houses.

Russell Armentrout has opened a golf course in Pittsfield, Ill., and Clarence Denny, Roodhouse, Ill., exhibitor, is running a course at Whitehall, Ill., while Oscar Wesley of Wilsonville, Ill., is another exhibitor who has turned to golf away from home. His course is in Carlinville.

The ratio of driving courses to golf courses is about one to seven in St. Louis and elsewhere in the territory.

The public at large sees much good in the golf courses and for that reason exhibitors must go rather slowly in attempting to check their growth.

Baby Links Fail to Worry Canadian Showmen

Ottawa—Exhibitors of Canada have not been greatly disturbed by competition from miniature golf courses for the simple reason that the baby-link counter attraction has not been substantial.

Midget golf was comparatively late in starting in the Dominion and promoters have profited by the news from the United States that corner lot golfing had been overdone and that plenty of the Tom Thumb courses were already for sale. Further, the authorities in various Canadian cities were quick to place restrictions on these operators. License fees, mostly $50 per year, have been imposed for each course; the trick courses have been barred from residential zones; practically all courses must close at 11 P. M. and, with a few exceptions, they are not permitted to operate on Sundays.

Toronto, with a population of 850,000, has 30 golf courses and this total includes a number outside of the city limits. Montreal, with a population of 1,100,000, has only 20 real golf lots. Ottawa, the Federal capital, population 140,000, has but six courses and one of these is outside city limits. Some are popular with the passing crowd, but others are just struggling along. Hamilton, Ontario, has a handful, but the civic authorities there clamped on a $100 license fee, which threw cold water on a number of corner lot projects.

A legal jam has developed at Toronto where the county police magistrate ruled that the miniature golfers had as much right to play on Sunday as the big club golfers. Municipal officials, exhibitors and the clergy have been up in arms, as a result, and Hon. W. H. Price, attorney general for Ontario, has arranged for an appeal from the decision so that the court of appeals can ascertain if Tom Thumb golf comes under the Lord's Day Act or not. Sunday golf, and Sunday shows as well, are permitted in the Province of Quebec, so there is no kick from that source.

90 Per Cent Pee Wees Held Losing at San Antone

San Antonio, Tex.—While miniature golf courses have materially decreased summer theatre attendance here, local theatre heads have taken no steps toward offsetting the competition for the reason that they believe that within a short time this craze will die a natural death.

There are approximately 100 Tom Thumb courses and six driving courses in this city and territory. The Tom Thumb courses are almost as numerous as gasoline and service stations.

There is no way of determining the actual number of miniature courses, for no permits or licenses for their construction or operation are required. As a result, new courses are springing up almost daily. Most of these courses are of the regulation variety—constructed as cheaply as possible—but there are two elaborate courses, in one of which a local independent theatre owner is interested.

While a few of the miniature courses are coining money, fully 90 per cent of the courses are a losing proposition, according to an analysis made by exhibitors.

A local newspaper tied up with a half dozen of the more prominent courses in a golf tournament, but it has not met with much success. Little success has also been met by a local course owner who has developed the club idea. Under this plan a club member paying a fee of $1 monthly is allowed to play day or night on any of a half dozen courses operated by this owner. His plan was to enroll from 15,000 to 18,000 members, but thus far he has not secured more than half this number. How any profits can be derived by the club idea is a mystery to theatre men.

Should the golf craze continue throughout the winter months, theatre managers declare they will take steps to offset the evil. What these steps will be has not been determined, but it will undoubtedly be a demand on their part that the city administration regulate these courses by forcing them to pay yearly licenses.

One reason that local theatre managers have taken no steps toward meeting this opposition lies in the fact that practically all local motion picture houses are owned by Publix and RKO. They are powerless in incorporating the golf idea in their theatres without orders from district or national headquarters.

Another Gag

Something new in abbreviated golf is claimed for a device soon to be put on the market by Jack Goldstein, veteran New York film salesman. It is a driving course gag, the player driving the ball into a curtain. By means of the apparatus, the force with which the ball hits the center square in the curtain gauges the yardage accurately, according to Goldstein. A series of lights informs the player of his yardage. A ball which does not hit in the center square would be in the rough under course conditions, Goldstein says.

Demi-Tasse Courses Hurt Albany Take; End Forecast

Albany—There are seven miniature golf courses in operation within city limits. The words "city limits" are necessarily used in view of the fact that there are fully as many of these courses operating just outside of the city where land can be leased or bought at a much smaller price than within the city itself.

These courses started early this summer when one was built near the city boundary in one of the finest residential sections. The success of this course was such as to immediately attract attention and resulted in others being built. In fact, some of those building courses worked nights and Sundays in feverish haste in an effort to have them completed as soon as possible.

When it comes to the number of miniature golf courses in this territory, it would be a hard matter to make an accurate count as they are springing up almost over night. The neighboring city of Troy has a half dozen, while Schnectady, 14 miles distant, has seven or eight in operation and more in sight. But, in addition to this, there is now a miniature golf course in operation on practically every road running in and out of Albany and likewise at practically all of the local so-called summer resorts or beaches in the immediate vicinity. Within a radius of 100 miles of Albany there are probably 100 in operation, for every small village has a course or two and there seems to be no let up either in the patronage or the desire on the part of persons to own and operate them.

Driving Courses Not Popular

Driving courses have not been as popular. All of these are located outside of the city where there is more room. All told, there are probably not a dozen in this section. This is due to the fact that few women care to test their driving powers on these public courses and, in case of short drives, to be subjected to laughs of onlookers.

There is no question but that the miniature golf courses have cut heavily in the business done by the picture theatres of the city and territory. One exhibitor in Albany stated during the past week that miniature courses have cost him about ten per cent in business this summer. Exhibitors in the territory are doing nothing to combat the drawing power of these courses, feeling that with the close of summer there will be no further competition from this source.

There is only one instance where an exhibitor in this territory has incorporated a miniature course of his own on a vacant lot, adjoining his theatre. He is Fred Mausert of Glens Falls. So far as can be ascertained, there have been no tie-ups between the theatres and the courses in this section of the state on a combination admission rate.

Half Pint Golf Not So Hot, Tampa Declares

Tampa, Fla.—Grown-up golf seems to be as staple as sugar here in Tampa, but the half-pint variety isn't so hot. In fact, after a careful survey, it is tough to find where any of the owners of Tom Thumb courses have purchased yachts or booked European passage.

Large golf boasts four pretentious country clubs in the territory surrounding the city and there are three pastures inside the city limits, all having a good membership and a staple daily play, but, this being a daylight game and one that has held the boards for these many years, the effect on the box-office is something that can hardly be figured in lucre.

The miniature bug hit Tampa about a year ago, with the original putter getting a pretty good play for a time, but it fell by the wayside as more elaborate courses were installed. Now there are a dozen of these baby affairs in and around Tampa, but only two are getting what you could call a real play. These two are quite elaborate and both located in the heart of the city, one being in the recreation grounds of the Tampa Bay Hotel park, which is owned by the city and is a public park.

Exhibitors Unruffled

This course is a direct competitor of the Park theatre, which is just across the street. The play there is largely at night and the course seems to be getting quite a break. It looks as if some of the quarters they take in might tally on the register of the theatre, but it does not seem to have added any gray hairs to the head of George Peck, manager of the Park, for George seems to favor the idea.

"The fact that the course is well lighted at night is an added attraction for this section," says he. "I have watched the players and I find quite a few drop in on us after playing a game or two. Many of our patrons, who arrive after the feature has started, will consult our schedule and then go across the street for a game, or to watch the play, while waiting for the next show."

Peck finds the night baseball a much greater competitor, as the grounds are but two blocks away. "Fortunately," says George, "this night baseball is not a daily diet."

George E. Shivers, house manager of the Tampa, says he has noted no ill effects from pre-natal golf craze and has no idea of doing anything to combat it. Night baseball, however, leaves its mark at the box-office.

After talks with other Tampa managers, it appears small-time golf is not recognized as a competitor and no advertising has been, or will be, directed against it. All prefer to exploit their houses and shows on merit as cool, restful entertainment. The only effort to capitalize on hot-house golf here was when James Newman, manager of the Strand, installed a section in the lobby and allowed waiting customers to do a little putting. This brought a few laughs and seemed to be enjoyed by some, but it took up so much space for all the good it did, that Newman pulled it out after a few weeks.

That looks like about all the recognition the bla-bla golf will get from Tampa showmen.

Two Frisco Theatres to House Midget Courses

San Francisco—When in doubt what to do with an old theatre of the silent film era turn it into an indoor golf course. That is the reasoning pursued in the case of two houses—the historic Portola, on Market St. near Fourth, and the Garrick, Ellis St.

The Portola was known as one of the biggest money-makers of the "pre-cathedral cinema period." While operated by Ralph Pincus, Herbert Rothchild and Gottlob & Marx, "The Spoilers" was shown there for the first time in San Francisco.

With the profits of its operation and sale, Rothchild, in association with Paramount, built the California a few doors away.

Mary's Swell Links

Hollywood.—Wilshire Links, the new miniature golf course owned by Mary Pickford, opened with a flash that would have done justice to Sid Grauman. Huge search lights and a dance band were a part of the attraction and the crowd jammed the streets for blocks.

Despite the fact that studio pressure was brought to bear on curtailing the advertising for the opening, every "goofy" golf fan in the city was present, apparently. Theatre managers in the vicinity didn't go for the idea so much and were the cause for the cutting down in plans for the ballyhoo, according to reports.

The course is one of the toughest in the city as far as hazards are concerned and cost about $50,000 to lay out. The property alone is valued at about $35,000.

The Toledo Way

Toledo—Cooperative advertising by pee-wee golf operators is being resorted to to sell the idea to localities here—right down to a map telling the public where to go to play midget golf.

Courses of Future to Be Done by Architects?

Washington—Tent and awning manufacturers are being urged to look into the demi-tasse golf craze by the Department of Commerce with a view to selling operators the idea of using canvas and other forms of covering, thereby making the courses all-year-'round affairs.

"The miniature golf course," points out the department, "is peculiarly adapted to benefit by installation of canvas coverings in one form or another. Tents of the larger type can be bought at prices ranging from $500 for 'tops,' up to $7,500 for capacity installations of the best grade. An awning installation of the shed-roof type can be installed at about 20 cents per square foot, or about $2,000 for a space 75x125 ft. Due to variations in size, such installations would not ordinarily be standard, so that at the present time costs might be higher than they might be if standard tent and awning sizes were taken into account at the time that the course was built."

Explaining further how exhibitor worries may be augmented, the bulletin continues:

"Included in such installations might be galvanized iron frame work to support the canvas top and sides, heavy center poles if a ridge is desired, a mechanism for unrolling the canvas, ties to fasten it at the supports, and various other features well known in the tent and awning trade, their employment varying with the elements of desired cost and the service that is to be rendered. It is possible that the athletic field tarpaulin, either toward the end of its career in the ball park, or during its off season when out of use for baseball, might be adapted to use over the small golf course, either where an A-roof covering is feasible, or in situations between blank walls where the course occupies a narrow lot to be shaded by a tarpaulin arrangement grommeted to the building walls.

"Depending upon whether it is to be rated or operated by owners, the original layout of the pony golf course of the future may well be done according to architect's plans and specifications to include concrete base blocks with sockets for tent or awning supports of standard size. The latter may be a temporary or permanent installation, so that the equipment could be handled as a removable item.

"A covered course would swell receipts for very apparent reasons, the present day-time receipts of the uncovered course running usually in the neighborhood of only 25 per cent of the day's total. The past season has been profitable to the golf courses in one item that will not soon be repeated—there has been less rain than for the previous yearly average of 55 years. A course covered against snow for winter play does not necessarily have to be heated, although the comfort of a completely enclosed game will probably repay the investment involved. It must be remembered, however, that golf has its place as an outdoor winter sport, the main deterrent being snow and attendant conditions of play. Totally or partially enclosed by canvas, the outdoor golf course in one location the year 'round should mean better business for the owner than a duplicate course in a converted building.

"In point of additional revenue, an additional investment in canvas 'coverage,' carrying a reasonable interest and depreciation charge (of $750 to $3 000), would not be disproportionate. The average course is installed at a contract price of $4,000. Land rent based on realty values of from $5,000 to $50,000 for the town or city lot space, makes surprisingly high equipment and land value to start with. This, with lights, labor and replacement costs make up a daily overhead of about $25 for the small investment and over $50 for the larger ones. Twenty-five or fifty dollars a day means a charge of about $6,000 or $12,000 on a year 'round basis (the days not operated being omitted). An additional cost for tent or awning protection that might be as low as $750 or no higher than $3,000 annually in the more expensive locations does not appear excessive in view of the possibility of increased revenues.

"The above is intended as a preliminary analysis of the situation, to be read in the light of the individual case by the man who is thinking of his miniature golf course in terms of the future. That the golf idea has come to stay is fairly evident. But the miniature golf course proprietor is confronted by some shortly approaching years whose meaning for him he can only conjecture. That he has a problem of demand whose keynote is 'weather' is the sense of this analysis—whether the outstanding performance of canvas as a solution of weather problems is to be repeated in the case of miniature golf is possibly a matter of very present importance to two principals—the awning man and the miniature golf course owner."

How it all started is explained by the bulletin as follows:

"Enthusiasm in miniature golf has seen

Dangerous

San Francisco—This miniature golf business is just too darned big a proposition for Uneda A. Thomas. Miss Thomas made a hole in almost every one on a Market street tabloid links, but it took just about five nice, front teeth to do it.

The young woman was just getting warmed up to the game, teeing up for the fifth hole. Joseph La Salle was playing ahead of her. Joe was a bit excited about his game, too, and sent the ball sailing with such zest that his club twirled about in the best follow through manner. It followed far enough to collide smack with Miss Thomas' teeth. A shriek temporarily stopped all action on the course and Miss Thomas went to the hospital with missing teeth, cuts and bruises.

Co-operating

New Orleans—While theatre attendance has been affected somewhat by the approximately 300 miniature golf courses in the territory, 42 of which are in New Orleans, exhibitors now are tying up with the courses on advertising. It is doubtful whether any indoor courses will be installed, due to favorable climatic conditions here.

within the past two years a greater expansion than has been the fortune of any other minor industry. Hailed by columnists as good copy, by advertising firms as a bright account, it has taken on the dignity of a major sport and become an American institution. Gross income for one course varies between limits of one and ten thousand dollars per month for a season of six to ten months, according to the weather. Towns of less than 10,000 population boast as many as four courses, none of them in the red. Three miles outside a Southern city there is a course returning as much as $350 per day to its owners; additional parking space to care for 300 cars has had to be provided to take care of capacity.

"Careful estimators have valued wee links in the United States at $125,000,000. This figure excludes real estate involved, which is now showing a return upon a valuation of hundreds of millions of dollars in addition. This is based on a total of 25,000 courses, which was considered conservative a month ago. What it is now, or will be a month from now, is at best a conjecture.

"Thousands have been given employment in upwards of a dozen trades, tickers have been relinquished for hazards in the open, the American public has found a new interest in sport, a renewed spirit of enterprise has been stimulated.

"Reputed to have been started in the Southwest through the joint efforts of three individuals whose names indicate Scotch, Mexican, and Irish extraction, and further developed by Garnet Carter when he laid out the first Eastern course near his hotel on Lookout Mountain, using cottonseed hulls for 'fairways' and 'greens,' miniature golf has become everybody's game in a sense, a sport and an enterprise in which nothing is constant but change.

"Business of such startling increase focuses attention. The majority of the courses now operating have yet to span the lean seasons of late fall, winter, and early spring—the bogeys of wet, cold, and snow, with their accompanying discouragements to regular exercise. The greater part of the past season has been dry, with few interruptions to play except from unusual heat during the day. The problem of how to extend the seven-month season in the East and North arises here as inevitably as it has in the building trades. Will outdoor golf become indoor golf, taking unto itself new, expensive quarters—possibly duplicating present locations for inclement seasons in other spaces now used for theatres, gymnasiums, winter show places, etc.?"

Denver Zone Concerned, but B.O. Squawk Is Missing

Denver—Exhibitors here are much concerned over the spread of abbreviated golf, although there have been no complaints of great effect on receipts. There are an estimated 200 outdoor and a half dozen indoor courses operating or being installed in Denver.

Exhibitors are tieing up with the courses, advertising their attractions on the score cards used on the various links. H. Bischoff, Armada Theatre, Lovell, Wyo., has its own courses at Lovell, Basin, Lander and Riverton, Wyo., and C. W. Kelly, of the Park, Greeley, Colo., has a flourishing course near his theatre.

Sports Writer Raps Nite Ball As Ruining Game

Milwaukee—Theatre owners will be interested in a commercial slant on night baseball by a sports writer whose reputation is second to none in the country, and who hasn't a kind word for the innovation—Hugh Fullerton, for many years with the Chicago Tribune. Hugh is now retired, but has not lost his interest in baseball and sports, and now and then contributes an article to the home town paper, which happens to be the Columbus Dispatch. He is a more or less steady contributor to national magazines also, despite his "retirement."

Recently he offered seven questions on night baseball to the big league moguls, through the columns of the Dispatch. To indicate the interest in the subject, these were widely copied by the daily press. Before offering Hugh's pertinent questions, here is a reaction to the same subject by Manning Vaughn, sports expert of the Milwaukee Journal.

"Hughey Fullerton, who introduced mathematics to baseball and proved that a first baseman with bunions could cover more ground when he sat down than when he stood up, takes his pen in hand and chastises the magnates for trying to force night baseball down the guzzles of the customers.

Going Into Show Business

"While it may not mean anything, we agree with Hughey that the magnates are treading on dangerous ground trying to compete with the movies, the theatre and other legitimate night attractions. They are quitting the sporting game to go into the show business, and in time the newspapers may tell them to get their publicity where the movies get it—at so much per line.

"Last Saturday only 25 fans turned out to see a night game in the Mississippi Valley League and the game was called off. We cite this as proof that the lights will lure only as long as a club can stay in the race and keep up the interest of the fan. When that is gone, his patronage will go with it, regardless of sunshine or moonshine."

Here are Hugh's questions on the night baseball situation:

"First. Will the newspapers, which have fostered and built up baseball and given it millions of dollars worth of free publicity on the theory that it is a sport, continue to print baseball as news when the owners deliberately transform it into a purely commercial proposition? Will the morning newspapers which have carried most of the baseball games and scores be able to get them? The majority will not take sporting extras in order to get reports of night games. Every advertising and circulation editor knows that such extras are not revenue producing. The majority of morning newspapers will be printed and distributed before the games end. Will the afternoon papers consent to printing the box scores of the preceding night games? In my opinion, the majority will not.

Queries Exhibitor Reaction

"Second. What attitude will theatres, moving picture magnates and amusement park owners take? The majority, I think, will fight night baseball tooth and nail. For night baseball will be a direct slap at their attendance. Because of that the theatre and amusement park owner will demand of the newspapers that baseball be placed upon exactly the same plane as other amusement enterprises.

"Third. The crime angle: Will the police be able to handle night crowds which offer a fine opportunity for pickpockets and hold-ups?

"Fourth. The traffic angle: Will cities permit night noise increases and night traffic jams to disturb sections of their towns? Will cities give additional police work to aid a commercial enterprise and either hire more police or force the staff to work extra hours?

"Fifth. Weather: How will night games be possible in early spring or early fall when the nights get cold?

"Sixth. Will fire departments stand for extra fire hazard any more than the police will stand for the police hazard?

"Seventh. The umpires: They will be practically defenseless on such a field and it will be impossible to detect bottle throwing or such attacks. I expect the climax of the night experiment to come when some umpire is killed for a close decision at the plate."

New Haven Socked

New Haven.—Theatre owners have been taking it on the chin to the tune of about 25 per cent. in territory where miniature golf courses are operating. There are 53 demi-tasse links in the territory and about ten under construction. Five indoor courses are planned in New Haven alone, indicating an effort to retain business when cold weather arrives.

Not Worried

Memphis.—Abbreviated golf never has been a serious issue here. For about a month after they made their debut, they affected attendance. Memphis has a population of 252,049 and there are only ten courses operating here, six of which are practically deserted. There are no plans for indoor courses and exhibitors aren't worried.

Miniature Golf Fails To Make Dent in Frisco

San Francisco—Pee Wee golf has been slow in making a dent in this town of 700,000, which to date boasts of less than 30 courses. With such a small number in operation, no effect has been felt at picture houses, nor do exhibitors expect inroads on box office grosses when the number increases to such radical proportions as in other key towns.

In a town where golf has always played an important part in the scheme of outdoor sports, Tom Thumbs have failed to create an impression on enthusiasts of the game.

New taxation regulations place a levy of $3 on small courses and a sliding scale for larger links. Admissions usually hit around 35 and 50 cents for adults and 15 cents for children.

Ambiguous

Hollywood.—An excerpt from one of the reports handed in by a critic for the Women's Club here has caused a great deal of amusement. The report which was the cause of so much mirth read as follows:

"A clean comedy. Would have been cleaner if the vulgarities had been omitted."

Film Records Not Touched By Fire In Washington

Washington—Motion picture records of the Federal Trade Commission were left intact by the fire which destroyed the greater part of the commission's building, it was shown by a check made this week.

The fire which razed the building, one of the many temporary structures of wood and stucco hurriedly erected just prior to and during our entry into the World War, failed to reach that end of the building in which the records were kept. Generally speaking, it was said by officials of the commission, some damage by fire and water was suffered by records which were on the desks of officials and employees at the time of the blaze, but none of any great importance was irreplacably destroyed.

Coming as it did at the end of the summer let-down, when such cases as the commission had under way were being conducted outside of Washington, the fire will not greatly delay the commission in the handling of its cases. The secretary's office and a few others at one end of the building were not reached by the flames, although they suffered some damage from water, and for a few days such work as is performed pending relocation of the commission will be conducted from there.

Space is now being provided for the commission in other Federal buildings in Washington, and it will be located in new quarters within a few days.

"Pete" Woodhull Resigns From General Talking Co.

R. F. (Pete) Woodhull has resigned as executive vice-president of General Talking Pictures. He has not made any future plans other than that he intends to vacation for a month at least. He declined comment Wednesday on the reason for severing relations with the M. A. Schlesinger firm.

R. F. Woodhull

For years, Woodhull was active in affairs of the M. P. T. O. A., serving several terms as president. He resigned the presidency to join General Talking Pictures, and was succeeded by M. A. Lightman, who filled out Woodhull's unexpired term and subsequently was elected for a full term, which expires in October.

D. W. Sees Need Of More Brains In Production

The potentialities of talkers are so great that "we should get down on our knees, even in a speakeasy, and thank God," declared D. W. Griffith during an interview in New York this week. Bubbling over with enthusiasm, he voiced a wish that he were only 35 in order to carry out some of the plans he has in mind.

D. W. Griffith

"It has been said that motion pictures have passed out of the stage of infancy," he observed, "but that did not occur until the advent of sound. There are no limitations on talking pictures. The future will reveal startling advances in the technic of making them. However, the greatest need of production now is brains. Only brains will develop the art."

D. W. is to spend a month vacationing in and around New York, but he declared that he had not decided on his next vehicle. It may be a Dickens story, either "Pickwick" or "David Copperfield," and he also is considering filming the life of Sam Houston, waxing loquacious over the colorful life of the Texas character. He evaded a question as to whether Texan capital would finance the filming of "Sam Houston," but asserted that he may release it independently of United Artists, in which he holds a one-sixth interest.

The classics, he added, constitute a rich source of material. Color and wide film, he asserted, tended to destroy the "intimacy" of pictures.

General Theatres Net Jumps to $1.88 Share

Supplementing original report of General Theatres Equipment, which showed a six months' net of $4,024,333, or $1.41 a share on common, a second report revealed additional earnings of 47 cents a share on outstanding common when investments, including Fox Film's equity in earnings of Loew's are taken into consideration. This brings total share earnings on General common to $1.88 for the half-yearly period, ending June 30.

Company has marketable securities, which at current prices, cost more than $20,000,000, it is claimed. The company owns 48 per cent of total outstanding Class A and B shares of Fox Film.

N. Y. Hippodrome to Plan One More Season at Least

Plans to demolish the New York Hippodrome have been abandoned temporarily and the theatre reopens Saturday under a combination policy. It will be operated by RKO for another season at least. A feature picture and eight acts are on the opening bill.

Impossible

They are telling the story of a prominent producer out on the coast who telephoned his agent and left these instructions:

"What we need in our scenario department are several geniuses. Round up several tonight so that I can interview them tomorrow."

Philly Walkout Off; Musicians Agree to Truce

Philadelphia.—Threatened "walkout" of Philadelphia theatre musicians has been averted for the time being at least, the musicians having agreed to a truce extending to Sept. 11. Though their contracts expired last Saturday night, the musicians remained at their posts until the leaders of the union could negotiate further.

The Philadelphia situation became threatening last week when the Stanley-Warner interests announced that they would employ only forty-odd musicians instead of the more than 200 of the last contract, and with the announcement of the Fox that it would abandon its "grand orchestra" of more than 40 pieces in favor of a stage band of 17 members. The local musicians' union immediately insisted on a renewal of contracts on the same basis as 1929 and advanced a two-day ultimatum.

Following a conference between Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, and the local theatre managers, the ultimatum was abandoned and the truce period extended to Sept. 11, during which time the local musicians' committee, Romeo Cella, Harry Swerdlow and Ralph M. Dalton, will meet with William M. Goldman, Stanley-Warner general manager, and Dave Idzal, Fox manager. No contracts of any nature whatever will be signed until the expiration of the truce period.

Legit Subsidiary Formed By RKO, Le Baron Says

RKO has organized Metropolitan Prod. as a subsidiary to produce legitimate shows at the Mason, Los Angeles. Plays which show promise will be presented in New York. Frederick J. Latham is general stage director and Charles Harris business manager.

William Le Baron

Most of the plays will be filmed by RKO. William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of RKO production, will have charge of the new company's activities. Le Baron now is in New York.

Leroy to Direct Bow

Hollywood—Mervyn Leroy has been borrowed by Paramount to direct Clara Bow's next talker.

Labor Day Marks End of Weak B.O. Figures on Bway

With "Abraham Lincoln" turning in nearly $18,000 in its first week, Garbo packing the Capitol doors on a gross of $98,322, "Hell's Angels" selling to S. R. O. at both Criterion and Gaiety, prospects for an early fall revival along New York's big street look plenty bright. At least, a majority of houses are playing to normal business and not showing the red of summer intakes.

Labor Day's three-day holiday brought thousands to the town, which helped bolster this week's business, the flood of holiday vacationists out of New York reacting but little at most windows.

Ruth Chatterton's "Anybody's Woman" showed justification for a second week at the Paramount, where the picture drew slightly over $86,000. Other runs, except in a few cases, were high.

Estimated takings:

"BIG HOUSE" (M-G-M)

ASTOR—(1,120), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2, 7 days, 10th week. Other attractions: Comedy, "College Hounds"; newsreel. Gross: $19,822; sensational run for this house, figure holding up plenty strong in these late days of run.

"ROMANCE" (M-G-M)

CAPITOL—(4,700), 35c-50c-75c-$1.50, 7 days. Other attractions: Overture, Hearst Metrotone news, presentation ("Capitol on Parade"). Gross: $98,322, probably the highest proportionate gross of the week on New York's main stem; la Garbo is always sure fire at this house, which needed this high figure plenty after many under-par weeks of the summer.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN" (U. A.)

CENTRAL—(1,490), $1-$2, 7 days, 1st week. Other attractions: Short-reel comedies. Gross: $18,002; plenty high even for an opening week at this little house; looks good for a long pull.

"HELL'S ANGELS" (Caddo-U. A.)

(Playing simultaneously at Criterion and Gaiety)

CRITERION—$1-$2-$2.50, 7 days, 2nd full week. Other attractions: None. Gross: $18,200, maintaining the high level set by opening week, and looks good for a long run at both houses.

EMBASSY—ALL NEWSREELS

EMBASSY—(598), 25c, 7 days. Straight newsreel show, running continuously. Gross: $3,200, which means more than double par for this house, which constantly pulls in big dough.

"HELL'S ANGELS" (Caddo-U. A.)

(Playing simultaneously at Criterion and Gaiety)

GAIETY—(808), $1-$1.50-$2-$2.50, 7 days, 2nd full week. Other attractions: None. Gross: $17,100, still flying high in the clouds.

"OUTSIDE THE LAW" (Univ.)

GLOBE—(1,050), 35c-50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Comedy ("Carnival Revue"); cartoon, ("Honolulu").

"MOBY DICK" (Warners)

HOLLYWOOD—(1,000), 60c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Two short-reel comedies. Gross: $20,132, dropping $5,000 under opening week, which is entirely too much for this Barrymore opus.

"ANYBODY'S WOMAN" (Paramount)

PARAMOUNT—(3,700), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Stage show, newsreel, overture. Gross: $85,400; this big draw undoubtedly due to Ruth Chatterton, who usually pulls heavy takes at this house.

"ANIMAL CRACKERS" (Paramount)

RIALTO—(1,904), 65c-83c, 7 days, 1st week. Other attractions: Short ("Many Moons"). Gross: $26,700; only so-so for this house.

"EYES OF THE WORLD" (U. A.)

RIVOLI—(2,103), 35c-65c-85c, 3½ days, and then "Monte Carlo," which got off to an auspicious start, showing plenty of black on the books as compared with the red figures turned in by "Eyes." Gross: $12,900, for 3½ days, plenty low.

"COMMON CLAY" (Fox)

ROXY—(6,200), 50c-75c-$1, 7 days, fourth and final week of a record-breaking run during which entire four weeks' gross totaled nearly $465,000. Other attractions: Newsreel, overture, stage show. Gross: $107,538, a remarkable figure for this weekly change house considering the fact that first week's take was only slightly higher than closing.

"MATRIMONIAL BED" (First National)

STRAND—(3,000), 35c-50c-65c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Three short reels. Gross: $24,752; not the least bit impressive.

"OLD ENGLISH" (Warners)

WARNERS—(1,490), $1-$2. Other attractions: Vitaphone Varieties. Gross: $22,203, a honey, pulling plenty in the black on this first week's showing; looks good for plenty more.

"DAWN PATROL" (First National)

WINTER GARDEN—(1,493), 35c-50c-65c-$1, 7 days, 7th week. Other attractions: Frisco short, "Song Plugger." Gross: $26,825, plenty high.

Fox B. O. Figures Up 40%, Routing Depression Bunk

Oscar S. Oldknow, vice-president, and Harry Arthur, general manager of the Fox circuit, put a heavy battery of theatre auditors on the books of company holdings to determine exactly how bad this widely-touted depression era had influenced box office business. The check-up routed the most convincing arguments of pessimists: Business is 40% better at all Fox houses than in the same period for the past several years, and 50% better over similar weeks last year at 12 key spots.

Oscar S. Oldknow

Results of the survey, according to the Fox execs, indicates an early return of prosperity to all theatres, with the outlook brighter than it has been in many seasons.

All Fox houses which were darkened during summer months reopened on Labor Day. There were 12 in this group.

Marx Film Sends House to Record On $40,000 Take

Los Angeles—Playing at pop prices at the weekly-change Paramount theatre, the four Marx-men broke the year's house record with "Animal Crackers" on a $40,000 gross, which rated the comedy 160%. A big new stage show helped tremendously.

The Circle, grossing $17,700, or 145% on "Holiday's" fourth week; $18,250 and 188% clicked by "All Quiet" at the Criterion and the first week of Arliss' "Old English" which rolled up 200% on a $28,000 gross at Warners' Hollywood were the outstanding attractions of a week which was marred plenty by low figures.

First showing of the Spanish version of "Benson Murder Case" at the California International house brought $7,000, a splendid figure.

Production on "Fighting Caravans" starts the last of September. Otto Brower will direct.

1st Nat'l Films Hit High and Low Spots in Chicago

Chicago—The diminutive Castle took the Loop percentage lead with "Bride of the Regiment" (F. N.), hitting 234%, while the mammoth Oriental went into the red-tinged cellar with a gross of $27,300 (65%) using another First National picture, "Numbered Men." "Bride of the Regiment," playing to adults only, had the curious standing in line all week.

"Animal Crackers," was a winner at McVickers, getting $33,600, (120%), in the last seven of its first ten days. "Common Clay" maintained its sensational pace at the Roosevelt, taking $22,200 (105%) in its fifth week. The current week—its sixth—may be its last, however. "Anybody's War" is set to replace it.

"Little Accident," playing to adults only, finished a 17-day run at the Woods with $14,000 (125%) for its last seven days. The picture was replaced by "Dixiana" at the Woods, but was sent to the Palace for a final Loop week. "Holiday" finished a nice three wecks at the United Artists with $19,000 (85%).

Weather was good with only two warm days marring the week, but outside competition was strong. The National Air Races were luring the crowds daily and nightly, while the home games of the pennant chasing Cubs were also drawing heavily. Other outdoor spectacles were plentiful during the week.

Estimated takings: ,

"Common Clay" And a Concert Wow Seattle

Seattle—"Greater Movie Season" opened with special exploitation, publicity and advertising, and business among the show shops was generally very acceptable.

Fox Fifth Avenue, with "Common Clay," established high gross for the week, aided by a fine musical presentation featuring Max Dolin, NBC musical director, directing a 50-piece symphony orchestra. This replaced the usual Fanchon-Marco stage revue, absent for a week because of changes in routing. The 25-minute concert wowed the audiences.

John Hamrick's two houses showed a considerable increase in business with "Raffles" and "Journey's End." The latter looked to be slipping badly toward the end of the week, however, although both go into a second week.

The Fox theatre, playing "Romance" as an extended run feature, took a bad drop from the $15,000 that the film got last week at the Fifth Avenue, getting only about $6,350 for a rating of 65%.

Leo the Lion appeared in person in the city during the week.

Estimated takings:

'Flesh', 'Brides' Rate 150%; All In Frisco Click

San Francisco—Pleasing weather brought many to the theatres with credit for a good week also laid to the many good films. The assemblage of about 24,000 U. S. sailors also brought business.

Two of the larger houses did 150% business and four others hit a rating of 100% or over. This is considered especially good since thousands of children have already reentered schools which naturally takes business away from all amusements.

"The Call of the Flesh" did a gross of $40,000, rating 150%, while Loew's Warfield did the same rating and grossed $20,000 with "Our Blushing Brides." "The Way of All Men" at the St. Francis grossed $10,000 and rated 102%. Paramount drew crowds with "Anybody's Woman," which rated 100% and grossed $11,700.

The California stood out in front with "Animal Crackers." This picture grossed $14,000 and rated 100%. "All Quiet on the Western Front," shown for a third time at the Davies, rated 105% and grossed $8,500.

A very exciting state primary election seemed to help business instead of injuring.

Estimated takings:

"Quiet" Clicks 200% for Second Des Moines Week

Des Moines—"All Quiet on the Western Front" continued as the best seller, running for a second week at the Des Moines with a rating of 200%. The Paramount, next door, did very well with "Last of the Duanes" and "Let's Go Native," each rating 150%, but "All Quiet" drew the big line-up.

Buster Keaton in "Dough Boys" did well at the Strand, which rates its pictures very conservatively and gave this feature a very good mark with 100%. Weather was cool and pleasant.

Estimated takings:

"LAST OF THE DUANES" (Fox)

All Cleveland Runs in Record Theatre Splurge

Cleveland—It looked like good old times at local first-run picture houses, with crowds elbowing their way in and out of the foyers practically all week. The cool weather undoubtedly had something to do with it, but the real cause for the big rush was the unusual array of fine pictures available. It would be difficult to state which picture met with the greatest public response, each of them showing a splendid record. Top rating of 160% was made by "Anybody's Woman."

Estimated takings:

Still Two

Hollywood—Although Mary Pickford went to the trouble of having the name of her niece changed from Mary Charlotte Pickford to Gwynne Pickford, in order to avoid confusion, there still are two Mary Pickfords, the other being the former Mary Mulhern, who recently married Jack Pickford.

Portland, Fox's Birthday Party Takes $14,500

Portland, Ore.—Celebrating their fourth anniversary, Fox Broadway Theatre served a most entertaining screen and stage fare with George O'Brien in "Last of the Duanes," and the most pretentious Fanchon & Marco idea, "Victor Herbert." In addition to an increased number of tie-ups with book and music stores, Manager Floyd Maxwell and Marc Bowman, publicity director, had a monster six-layer cake topped with four candles under the spot lights in the foyer. With cooler weather, heavy word-of-mouth advertising brought out again waiting lines and shot the gross to $15,500, rating 130%.

Second position was secured by "Song o' My Heart" with heavy feminine appeal engendered by voice of John McCormack; gross, $14,500; rating, 125%. Two additional comedies, "Oh, Sailor, Behave," at the Music Box, and Four Marx Bros. in "Animal Crackers" at Paramount, also took well.

Estimated takings:

"LAST OF THE DUANES" (Fox)

FOX BROADWAY—(1,912), 25c-35c-60c, 7 days. Other attractions: Fanchon & Marco's Victor Herbert Idea with Buddy Howe, dancer; Ernest Belcher, leading line girls; William Powell, trick trombone; Broadway band with Jimmy Taft, m. c.; Ralph Richards, pianist; Henri LeBel at Wurlitzer; Disney cartoon; Terriss travelogue. Gross: $15,500. Rating: 130%.

"SONG O' MY HEART" (U. A.)

FOX UNITED ARTISTS—(945), 25c-35c-60c, 7 days, extra midnight. Other attractions: Metro Acts, Hollywood Varieties, Fox news. Gross: $14,500. Rating: 125%.

"ANIMAL CRACKERS" (Paramount)

PORTLAND PARAMOUNT—(3,068), 25c-50c, 7 days, extra midnight. Other attractions: "Swanee Shores," stage show with Phil Lampkin and Paramounteers; The Skateles; Tom Queen; Geo. Dewey Washington, tenor; Paramount news; Con Maffie, Wurlitzer; clever tie-up with Pacific Coast Biscuit Co. Gross: $14,000. Rating: 120%.

Deletions Ordered in "White Cargo" In Va.

Richmond—A second effort made to have "White Cargo" enter Virginia theatres after the State Division of Motion Picture Censorship had rejected the film has just caused several deletions to be made in the picture, it was learned today.

Rejection of the cinema offered by Trio Prod. after an examination in June, caused the Virginia censors to make the accompanying notation: "This film was rejected because it deals in marriage of whites and blacks. This contravenes the racial integrity laws of the state of Virginia."

A second examination of "White Cargo" caused the film-temperers to lighten it to a considerable extent by ordering several eliminations.

"Call of Flesh" Rates Hi Spot In Kansas City

Kansas City—From the standpoint of percentage rating, the Pantages came across the line a winner this week with a grade of 130% on an intake of $13,075 on "Call of the Flesh" and a Fanchon & Marco show, "Romance."

"Dixiana" at the Mainstreet gave the house $18,000, or a rating of 100%. The Uptown, the only first run neighborhood theatre, had a good week with "Ship From Shanghai," bringing in $7,200, rating 120%. "Good News" gave the Midland a gross of $17,250, which rates 115% for this house. "Common Clay" was shifted to the Royal after record-breaking business at the Newman the week before. The Fox picture continued to draw good business, but not as phenomenal as the run at the Newman. Intake was $5,200 or 115%. The Newman did nothing startling with "Love Among the Millionaires." Clara gave the house only $10,000 which is rated at 100%.

Hollywood—The new administration building at the Darmour-RKO plant has been completed under the supervision of Frank Dexter, technical director.

What, Another One?

Los Angeles—A New York comedian, according to Harrison Carroll, says that he has been two years trying to get a job in the films—but that he won't show a streak of yellow. He's going to stick it out and starve to death.

Today's News Picture

This is Simplex Glug, radical young cinema director, who is being hailed far and wide for his startling innovation in the mystery film. After finishing the "He's a Murder Case" in both French and English versions, Mr. Glug decided, without a word of encouragment from anybody, that it would be much more mysterious if the French version was released in America and the English one in France.

Theatrephones Installed In Fox Milwaukee House

Milwaukee.—Theatrephones have been installed in Fox's Wisconsin. It is the first house in the Northwest to have the phones, designed for patrons who are hard of hearing.

A section of seats equipped with the phones are marked with striped seat covers. People who wish to use the phones are asked to inquire of the usher, who will lead them to the proper section.

The phones are so designed and installed that not only is the patron able to hear the sound picture better, but he or she is also able to hear the stage show to a better advantage.

Mpls. Exhibitors Happy When B. O. Run in "Black"

Minneapolis—The silver lining from the dark cloud that has hung over the loop houses for many months is showing itself at last. The Minnesota again leads the field.

Showing "Manslaughter," the house grossed $30,000 which gives it a rating of 100%. Tieing the rating but not the cash figure were the Orpheum, the Century, the State and the Lyric. The Orpheum playing "Rain or Shine" grossed $22,000; Century, showing "Common Clay," for a second week romped home with $11,000; "Oh, Sailor Behave," at the State rang in $20,000.

Lyric, boosting "Golden Dawn," had a take of $2,720 to register 90%. The Aster registered 80%, lowest of the week with "Sweet Mama"; the gross was $2,000. The houses are planning to separate the farmers from their dough next week. The Minnesota State Fair brings all the yokels from their retreats. The best possible bookings have been made and from all indications it appears that a tough fight will ensue.

185% on $18,500 Gross for "Clay" Is High in Balto

Baltimore—With the first part of the week ideal for theatre going, there was a general tone of improvement over the previous week in patronage.

The outstanding high for the week was achieved at the New theatre where "Common Clay" clicked the phenomenal gross for this house of $18,500, a rating of 185%. Advertising appropriation for the house was increased. Special Sunday night preview for exhibitors and newspaper people was given.

"Dixiana" proved only fairly good as a puller at Keith's. An excellent musical with lots of hokum and comedy which the audience seemed to enjoy, but still it did only $4,400, rating 55%.

"Dancing Sweeties" took a nose-dive at Warners' Metropolitan. People did not take to it kindly. The estimated gross for the week was figured at $2,200 with the rating 35%.

Loew's Century had "Anybody's Woman," minus the stage show and music, and the gross was figured at $21,000, which would be 100%.

The Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers" proved a good puller at Loew's Stanley, doing $19,000 and rating 109%. The Marx Brothers are liked very much in Baltimore by theatregoers.

Coffin Handling Firm

Hollywood—International Publicists, Ltd., has been dissolved as a corporation and the business is now being conducted by Ray Coffin, who was formerly head of the publicity concern.

It's Unanimous

A member of Jimmie Quirk's "Photoplay" staff relates the yarn about Nick Stuart, who, after a recent radio broadcast, said to the "mike" operator: "Whew, I'm glad that's over."

Nick was unaware that the instrument was still tuned in and did not know that his remarks were audible to thousands of listeners until he received a batch of telegrams bearing the laconic message:

"So are we."

Sudden B. O. Spurt Sends All Boston Figures Skyward

Boston—Last week of the vacation season found three Boston theatres soaring to heights unknown heretofore in any corresponding week of any previous year, the Publix Metropolitan hitting $37,500 gross with "Manslaughter" and the Olympia and Uptown theatres playing day and date with "All Quiet on the Western Front," doing 130% and 120%, respectively, for a total of $34,000 at the two houses. The latter film has already had a previous showing of eight weeks as a road show, this being the first showing at popular prices.

Even at other theatres, business was good. "Midnight Mystery" did 115% at the Keith-Albee and "Rain or Shine" was held over for a second week at the Keith Memorial and maintained 100% for the week. "Call of the Flesh" did $22,000 at Loew's State, while Loew's Orpheum did $20,000 with "Way Out West" after Loew's State had played the film two weeks ago for $22,000. "Common Clay" moved over from the Metropolitan to the Scollay Square with $14,000 for the week. Weather, variable.

Widely Touted British Picture Pulled in Canada

Montreal—Main stem exhibitors of Montreal had mingled feelings during the week, although all were agreed that the tourist trade had picked up considerably during the past few days with the visitors spending a little more than the early travellers.

Greta Garbo in "Romance" tapered off perceptibly for its second week at the Palace and was quite a bit below average. "Atlantic," the British film at His Majesty's theatre, was ticketed for a long run but was taken off at the end of the eighth day, the house going dark. The pick of the week was "Anybody's War" at the Capitol and "The Sea Bat" at Loew's, Moran and Mack registering 100% at the Capitol with a total draw of $14,000. "Dynamite," run as a silent when the censors banned the talking version, wasted away at the Roxy in its second week, doing only $2,000 in a 550-seat house in spite of ballyhoo. The weather was fair.

The apparatus is built without belts or chains, and its sound head has dual exciting lamps and photo electric cells.

Oakie's Next "Sea Legs"

Hollywood—"Sea Legs" has been chosen as the release title of Jack Oakie's latest talker for Paramount. The story was written by George Marion, Jr., and directed by Victor Heerman. Lillian Roth, Charles Sellon, Eugene Pallete and Harry Green are in the cast.

Rogers' Next Titled

Hollywood—"Along Came Youth" will be the release monicker for Charles "Buddy" Rogers' next picture. Frances Dee plays opposite the star and Lloyd Corrigan and Norman McLeod directed.

Actors and Illusions

Hollywood—Ronald Colman's creed, as revealed by him to a local scribbler:

"If I have any philosophy it is to mind my own business as well as I can and keep order in my affairs.

"I am not a good mixer. I have no small talk. I only feel at home with people I know well and who like the things I like.

"What I do after I leave the studio is my own business, unless I break the peace or become a public nuisance!

"Acting is an illusion and the actor should be an illusion, too."

Canada Exhibit Pulls Tourists To Toronto Runs

Toronto — The Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto's pride, was in full swing during the week and the town was full of visitors from all parts of Canada and the States. Many attended the theatres and business was active. Moreover, Uptown theatre fans flocked to take a last look at Jack Arthur's deluxe presentations there before they blossom out as Publix units at the Imperial theatre. The result was that "Queen High" at the Uptown led the procession with $16,000 for 100%. "Anybody's War" also looked good at the Imperial for $15,000 while swell vaudeville helped "Courage" at Shea's Hippodrome to $15,500. There were two held-over attractions, "Common Clay" at the Tivoli and the British "Splinters" at the Royal Alexandra but they were no go, being lost in the rush. Weather, mostly fair.

Reopening After 3 Years

Kokomo, Ind.—The Indiana, one of the largest houses in this section of the state and which has been closed since the advent of talking pictures, will be opened within a few weeks, according to Publix. The theater is being equipped for sound.

"Clay" Held 4th Week at Phila., A House Record

Philadelphia—With Eddie Cantor making a personal appearance as the Mastbaum's stage headliner, the gross at this theatre jumped to $47,000 for a rating of 120%, a high mark of the summer for this house.

For the third week of "Common Clay," the Fox maintained a figure of $31,000, considerably above average, and enough to warrant its being held for a fourth week, the first time in the history of the theatre that a film has played for four weeks.

The Arcadia will jump into headline prominence during the week by joining the ranks of the first run theatres, having signed a contract with Paramount to present several of its films first run. "Grumpy" will be the first to be shown.

The sixth week of "The Big House" at the Stanton brought $10,000, enough for a 100% rating. The film continues for another week at least. Other houses were slightly off their usual grosses.

"Unguarded Girls," with a strong ballyhoo and a "woman only" showing, grossed $11,000 at the Chestnut, a legitimate house, considered to be a good figure.

It's All in Fun

Hollywood—Eddie Quillan was discussing his Pathe production, "Night Work."

"Then a girl enters and does an aesthetic dance," said Eddie.

"I don't like those anaesthetic dancers," interjected a proper boy.

"Not anaesthetic," corrected the comedian, "aesthetic— aesthetic."

"Well, what's the difference?" demanded "props."

"An anaesthetic is something that deadens a pain—"

"Yeah, and an aesthetic gives you one!"

Eddie did a fade-out.

Amos 'n' Hisses

Cincinnati—An appropriate theme song for a newsreel recently shown at the Palace would be "A Little Hiss Each Morning." When Amos W. W. Woodcock, new Federal prohibition director, appeared in the newsreel and made a brief appeal for prohibition enforcement, the audiences greeted his talk with plain and fancy hissing. This is the first instance on record in Cincinnati where a prominent figure in a newsreel has been treated like the stage villain of the old-fashioned melodrama.

"Quiet" Thrills Ottawa; Grosses $6,800 or 115%

Ottawa—The Canadian Capital had a big thrill during the week with "All Quiet on the Western Front" at both the Regent and Imperial theatres. The Universal special walked away with a gross of $6,800 for a rating of 115%. At the Imperial it was presented three times daily where it grossed $4,100 for 95% at advanced prices, the matinees being off because the women were shy.

"Hell's Island," at B. F. Keith's, blocked traffic for three days at $4,500 while "Lawful Larceny" clicked at $4,050 for the last half after the Governor-General and Viscountess Willingdon bestowed vice-regal patronage on the first night. The weather was mostly fair.

Estimated takings:

"ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT" (U.)

REGENT—(1,225), 25c-75, 6 days. Other attractions: Movietone news, cartoon comedy, "Barn Dance"; orchestra. Gross: $6,800, (with extra midnight show). Rating: 115%.

"HELL'S ISLAND" (Columbia)

B. F. KEITH'S—(2,596), 15c-50c, 3 days. Other attractions: Pathe news, Krazy Kat in "Jazz Rhythm"; "Fellow Students" (comedy). Gross: $4,500. Rating: 90%.

Dog Jail-Birds

Hollywood—Jules White and Zion Myers, creators of the "All-Barkie" series of dog comedies for M-G-M, have been signed on term contracts. Their next barkie will be "The Big Dog House," a satire on prison pictures.

A Bas "Monsieur"

Hollywood—"Men of the North" is the release title for M-G-M's talker, formerly called "Monsieur Le Fox." Gilbert Roland and Barbara Leonard have the principal roles in the picture, which was directed by Hal Roach.

FEATURING

PICTORIAL THEATRE PARADE

At Dennis on Cape Cod, Rockwell Kent, noted American artist, has painted a mural that is twice the size of Tintoretto's "Paradise" and which holds the record for a decorative canvas of its type.

Balch and Stanbery, Los Angeles architects, contrive a new decorative treatment to hide ventilation ducts. An interesting and informative construction trend.

Rough plastering to make a Spanish motif more Spanish is one of the features of the Mid-West, new Warner theatre in Oklahoma City. This splendid example of the atmospheric in theatres is treated pictorially and textually, and is worth careful reading by showmen everywhere.

INDEPENDENTS AND THE CHAINS

Can the lone hand stand the gaff? Montgomery S. Hill, a circuit operator, thinks so and explains in hard-hitting fashion why. Don't miss this.

JOHN EBERSON SUGGESTS—

A plan to make the theatre the entertainment center of its community by extending its facilities to amusement by-products. This may solve your problem. Look it over.

AN OLD SHOWMAN REMINISCES

Forty years hard at it and now on the sidelines, Uly S. Hill says the good, old days are gone and explains why.

Another Fox house. The Hanford in the California town of that name.

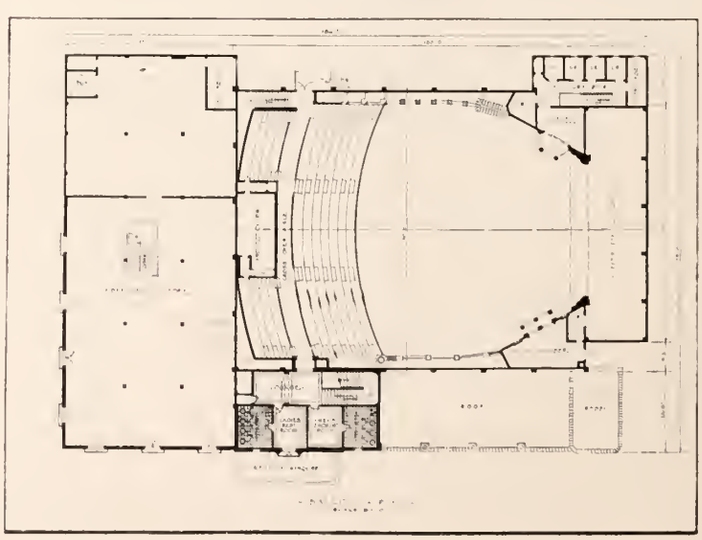
Hide Ventilation Via Decoration

HANFORD, CAL.—Ingenious concealment of the exhaust ducts of the ventilating system is a feature of the Fox, recently completed here. The house was designed by Balch & Stanbery, Los Angeles, and is somewhat similar to the Fox Visalia theatre this firm designed.

Left — Facsimile of main auditorium plan of the Hanford, designed by Balch and Stanbery, of Los Angeles.

Keeping the cost to a minimum, but at the same time providing every modern convenience required in the present day theatre, was called for in the specifications. The building, including stores, cost $163,000.

Other features are the startlingly realistic imitation wood beams grained in the cast of the foyer ceiling, and the focusing of attention upon the proscenium from the floor up to the large arch.



The ventilation is provided by an updraft system, the air being introduced through mushrooms at the floor. An exhaust duct and opening are provided on the under side of the balcony and at the sidewalls, back of the atmospheric treatment.

Through this arrangement, with the exception of those on the under side of the balcony, there are no exhaust grilles visible from the under side of the auditorium.

Simplicity marks treatment of the foyer as the illustrations show. The imitation wood beams are decorated in such a manner that even the closest observation fails to disclose that they are made of anything but actual wood.

In the center of the foyer is an inviting fire place and on the opposite side is a tile drinking fountain, which is supplied with ice water from an electrical Right — The balcony, as visualized in the architect's blue prints.

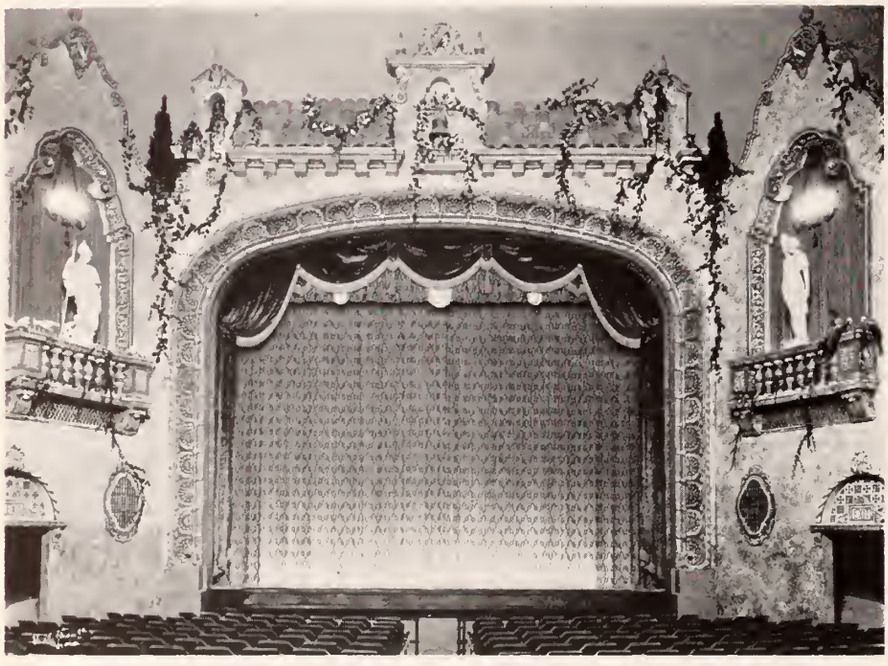
The charm of the atmospheric house, when properly executed, is shown in this illustration of the auditorium of the Hanford.



No restrictions on spaciousness in this lobby. Note width of promenade and rich texture of Spanish - motif decorations.

Rough Plaster For Atmosphere

The lobby of the new Mid-West at Oklahoma City. The beamed ceilings add to the decorative effectiveness of the whole.

The stage and auditorium of the Mid-West, atmospheric to the last detail

OKLAHOMA City — The Mid-West Theatre, Oklahoma City's latest, built at a cost of $1,000,000, is a haven for those who are partial to the out-of-doors and who delight in the charm of old Spanish architecture.

The Mid-West is the realization of a dream of the directors of the Mid-West Enterprises Co., a chain owning five Oklahoma City theatres, recently purchased by Warners.

Ideally located in the center of the city's business district, the theatre is accessible to the public using the street car service with the giant terminal just across the street from the house.

John Eberson was the designer of the new theatre, and, following the instructions of the Mid-West chain, apparently spared no expense in making it not only the finest house in the state, but one of the finest in the country for its size.

Standing as an indication of the progress of the state, the theatre, combined with an office building, rises ten stories above the street which a few years ago was prairie.

Noting the tendency toward simplicity in architecture and in decorative charm without ostentation, Eberson has designed the Mid-West accordingly.

Crossing a sidewalk of striking design in tile covered by a massive marquise, entrance is made through doors decorated with hand-wrought iron. One steps into the lobby from the box office which is a unique little affair of native walnut, finished in the spirit of the old Spanish mission.

The lobby is one of extreme massiveness with high ceiling and ornamented plaster walls. Here and there are wall niches holding imported statues and many plaster busts, while the walls show figures raised in bas-relief in the wall finish.

The lobby is strikingly decorated with iron railings affording entrance and exit lanes to the foyer while old-fashioned chandeliers with prismatic effects hang from the vaulted ceilings. Colorful banners and tapestries set the effect off in striking style.

The foyer presents an entirely different appearance, for from the spaciousness of the lobby the patron steps through the ornamented doors to an atmosphere of dignified refinement, with heavily carpeted floors, gorgeous trappings, odd mirrors, large vases and beautiful floor lamps. All this combines to create an impression of quiet splendor.

On the stairway on either side to the mezzanine one again encounters a further display of exceptional beauty, for this

A bit of the Old World transplanted to Oklahoma City. This is one of the rest rooms of the Mid West.

Another interesting corner of Oklahoma's newest house. Rough plastering on the walls was deliberately planned to make more effective the Spanish motif.

Looking toward the stage of the Community. This house is a typical example of the type of theatre Publix is building in limited numbers for small communities.

Colonial House for a Colonial Town

NORTH Attleboro, Mass.—Early American architecture, authoritatively reproduced, high lights the Community, one of the smaller Publix theatres for which plans were designed by Krokyn, Browne and Rosenstein of Boston.

Dignity was sought by the builders, who feel that the completed work successfully carries out the ideas in mind before the plans were drawn.

The Community is large and spacious. The outside lobby is 20 by 30 feet and contains a large ticket sales booth and advance ticket line office as well as frames for posters and displays announcing current and coming attractions. The foyer, which is 80 feet wide by 18 deep, is of almost severe simplicity relieved with tasteful touches including hangings, pictures and indirect lighting effects.

Entering the auditorium, the impression is one of cool, chaste beauty. Boxes, loges and balcony were purposely omitted, for the Community is of the stadium type and therefore is without balcony. Fifteen thousand seats, upholstered in red jacquard velour, fill the floor, which gradually elevates towards the back of the house into the stadium. The seats are spaced so as to allow plenty of leg room.

Simplicity the Keynote

The interior is a pleasing harmony of architecture, color, luxurious hangings

WHAT DO YOU SELL TO YOUR PUBLIC?

The modern picture theatre calls for heavy investment in building, lighting effects, curtains, drapes, furnishings, etc. Luxurious appointments are the order of the day and lavish expenditure is evident in every direction where it is likely to be seen and impressed upon the visiting public.

There is no denying that all of this is important and worth while. It draws people but these come not primarily to gaze upon artistic magnificence, but to see and hear pictures.

Only for a few minutes before the show and during brief interval between shows, will attention be given surroundings, furnishings and embellishments which represent a large proportion of the investment.

In contrast to this, the screen entertainment, lasting at least an hour and a half, proceeds from projection apparatus representing a very small percentage of the total cost of the enterprise.

DOES IT NOT STAND TO REASON THAT THE PROJECTION EQUIPMENT CONSTITUTES THE MOST VITAL FACTOR AFFECTING SUCCESS OR FAILURE OF THE HOUSE?

If a heavy outlay for adornment and luxury are justifiable, even though these be only of incidental interest,

WHAT EXCUSE IS THERE FOR AN INSTALLATION OF ANYTHING LESS THAN THE MOST PERFECT PROJECTORS OBTAINABLE?

Theatre success — aside from good judgment in selecting pictures — depends upon faultless projection. Sound reproduction is also important but this in large measure is good or otherwise, according to projector used.

Therefore, selection of machines to go behind portholes is entitled to the most careful and unbiased consideration. Nothing is more important than this.

NO UPKEEP TO WORRY ABOUT

One of the most interesting and valuable facts about G-E motor-generators, aside from excellence of performance, is their "stand up" qualities under conditions of constant use.

Barring replacement of brushes at long intervals, there are no parts to be renewed from time to time, nor is outlay required to keep the motor-generator functioning at its best, right along, without a let-down.

As exclusive distributor in the United States of G-E motor-generator sets in the theatre field, the E. E. Fulton Company will gladly furnish complete information on this line. Or, if more convenient, address your inquiry to the nearest G-E office.

So the inside of your theatre will bring patrons from without!

NOW the spotlight is turned from the outside of the theatre to the inside. From the exterior that first attracts patrons to the interior that actually sells and keeps patrons sold. Owners and managers now focus attention on the seated audience . . . make the interior of their theatre so inviting that it brings patrons from without!

In the competition for patron favor, seating . . . the chairs your audience sit in from 2½ to 3 hours, can be made to contribute definitely to bigger volume. For comfortable chairs . . . seating that permits of healthful relaxation is always appreciated by the theatre goer. Showmen find that extra comfort brings extra profits.

So, American Seating Company undertook research. Posture specialists worked with engineers. Chairs were built to conform with proved posture principles. From a maze of research findings, came comfort features that were quickly recognized by the motion picture industry. Roomy, luxurious chairs . . . seating built to fit the body—to correctly support the spine . . . to give the utmost in easy, natural comfort without slumping.

Illustrating Theatre Chair No. 8136 with 843 Standard
A comfortable chair of unusually attractive design that is meeting with the enthusiastic reception of theater owners and managers. Specially built for maximum sound absorption. Only one of the many American Seating Company types and styles of theatre seating.

Then followed acoustical research. It was found that seating had a direct bearing on the acoustics of the theatre . . . that properly built seating had a sound absorption value that assisted in producing more perfect sound effects. Chairs were built that stopped excessive reverberation, echo and hollow sounds—that helped sound reproduction and eliminated rasping noises, jumbling of words.

Your theatre—reseated with these comfortable, acoustically correct American Seating Company chairs will prove to be a magnet of patron drawing power . . . an investment you must eventually make if you expect your daily receipts to show a steady, healthy increase. THE CHARM OF COLORED LIGHT FOR YOUR THEATRE

YOU want it, of course. There is no substitute for the restful beauty it creates—and the public expects to find that beauty in your theatre.

Edison MAZDA* Colored Lamps offer the most effective and most economical answer to your colored lighting needs. Their smooth surfaces (the color is inside the glass) offering little attraction for dust, make cleaning less frequently necessary and much easier to accomplish.

And just now, when the seasons are changing, Edison MAZDA Colored Lamps can be especially useful. From an effect of airy coolness, you will want to change the atmosphere of your house to one of inviting warmth. Why not accomplish the change by merely changing the color of the lighting in your lobby and foyer? Just change to Edison MAZDA Colored Lamps of a warmer tone, and at once the whole atmosphere of the house is changed.

And if you like, you may have the advice and assistance of an Edison Lamp Works engineer for your lighting problems. Just write to Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Nela Park, Cleveland, Ohio. This service is rendered without charge.

Can the Ind'p't Put His House Over? Chain Man Asks and Solves the Riddle

It Cost This Operator Money To Discover These Pointers on House Operation

His Experiences Are Yours For the Reading

By MONTGOMERY S. HILL
Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina

BEFORE consideration can be given operation it must be assumed that we first of all have well equipped theatres to operate. By well equipped I mean that it should have the following physical features:

1. An attractive front for sales and to create favorable impressions.
2. On the inside it must have physical comfort, which includes satisfactory seats, reasonably good ventilation, proper lighting, and essential touches such as carpets, drapes, acoustical treatment, etc.
3. Good projection equipment that is well maintained and operated. This includes the right sort of screen, properly set.
4. Good sound, which includes good quality and dependability of performance.
5. Presentation aids such as light, curtain, screen set, etc.
6. Necessary safety appliances such as adequate exits, properly equipped, panic bolts and cleared exits.
7. Satisfactory force to operate the theatre, including maintenance.
8. Cleanliness—As we have no right to expect people to come to our theatre unless it's kept absolutely in order.

The above physical requirements are essential in the complicated theatre operation as we find it today.

Let us dwell for a moment on some of the phases of operation that do much to make a theatre a success or a failure.

Arranging the Program

Cany anyone doubt the value of careful study of the program the theatre has to offer? It not only means that a program must consist of the best product available at prices the theatre can afford to pay, but, also, it means that the program must be well balanced, there must be in it the element of contrast, which is merely a way of saying that it must have comedy, drama, beauty, color, so linked together and so presented that it is worked up from a good beginning to get better and better as the show progresses. Let us consider some thoughts about program building:

1. It stands to reason that a news reel can be edited to be made more effective in any community. There are some shots that from entertainment standpoint, could be eliminated in your community to the program's advantage. Certainly the news reel should open big and you should vary the shots so that there will not be a sameness of character as the news reel progresses.

2. It also stands to reason that a highly dramatic, heavy feature requires the lightening effect of comedy relief before or after or both; conversely, a comedy feature requires the balancing and contrasting value of a dramatic short subject. Highly tragic features, such as "Journey's End," "All Quiet on the Western Front," have startling endings requiring a silent pause at the end —You should then follow with a light cartoon, or comedy number giving the audience that relief that is quite essential.

3. The assembling of these units of the show with the aforesaid balance and contract will make of a mediocre program a good program, and will make of a good program an outstanding two hours of entertainment.

Determines Standing

In considering presentation I like to think of Jule Delmar's story at a meeting of Southern Enterprises held in Atlanta a number of years ago. In explaining the difference between "big time" and so-called "small time" vaudeville, he did so by saying the difference is in the manner of presentation. He gave as an example the following: You go downtown, go into a Greek restaurant, order a half a grapefruit. A fat waiter slices a grapefruit, puts it in a heavy piece of china, dishes it down the vintrolite counter, gives you a blunt spoon with which to eat the fruit and you pay him 15 cents for the order. Down at the Biltmore dining room, in an atmosphere of beauty and comfort, you enter on well carpeted floors a music filled room of architectural splendor, with attractively equipped tables, well liveried waiters render you a class service immediately, you order half a grapefruit—It comes in resting on a high comport of crushed ice, the seeds have been removed, the grapefruit is neatly cut out and a cherry in the middle. You are furnished a fruit spoon, and pulverized sugar. You pay 40 cents for the order. It's the same grapefruit. The difference between the 15 cents and 40 cents value is in the manner of presentation. So it is with your programs of today. Assuming that the equipment is reasonably good, we have this same sound show to present which Broadway presents and this is the great stride forward the industry has taken in the entertainment field. How are you presenting this program, in a 15 cent or a 40 cent manner? People know, demand and appreciate values. Remember that!

Keep Booth Shipshape

Of first importance, therefore, is the presentation of this program. In this complex business, presentation has much to do with the success or failure of a theatre. There has never been a time when there was such a demand for color, life, variety, novelty, as there is in the presentation of programs today. This is made all the more important in the all-sound programs because you lack in the strictest sense of the word the human color that a person can put into a show, but it is being definitely proven daily that a sound program can be greatly enhanced in entertainment value by the deft, clever, novel treatment that can be given it. And people pay money for the unusual treatment! Again projection plays a most important role and the projection room is one place where equipment should be kept in the finest condition physically. Your projection must have definition, it must be bright and well cut, it must be smooth, there must be no waits, blank screens, and changeovers must be so smoothly made that the audience is not subjected to any break in the action or the dialogue.

Controlling Sound

Can you imagine anything more important in the theatre today than the proper control of sound? What are you doing in your theatre to make sound perfect? It was assumed in the first place that you had the necessary equipment and acoustical treatment, but these mean nothing if sound isn't intelligently observed and properly controlled. How is this to be done?

a. Every sound program should be previewed and volume cues arranged for most effective presentation. This, also, acquaints the operator with the changeover cues, and it gives the sound observer or the manager or both, the opportunity of learning the dramatic action of a picture, an essential knowledge in proper sound control.

b. Sound must be controlled from the floor; this means there must be someone charged with the responsibility of observing and checking sound at all times. Ventilation variations in crowds, outside noises, all tend to vary volume, and only an alert sound observer is in position to get the sound adjusted quickly for the benefit of the audience.

c. In observing sound the observer should not be in the rear near the aisle entrance because his ear is affected by outside noises, by air rushing through the opening, but he should be down in the audience a few rows so he may observe what the patrons are getting. He must regulate the sound based upon a natural volume. One of the best ways I have learned to observe sound is to either shut my eyes or turn my back to the screen, and then determine if the sound seems to be a natural tone and of a natural pitch as coming from the stage.

A Showman's Manual

IN the accompanying article by M. S. Hill, one of the South's leading showman,' is contained in brief a manual of showmanship, covering briefly though broadly nearly every phase of theatre operation.

Hill's article is based upon his recent speech before the Southeastern exhibitor convention, which was a highlight of the sessions.

d. Some of the fine points of sound control that add so much to a program are stepping up the fader on newsreel titles, emphasizing funny gags by increased volume, varying volume for openings and closings, checking carefully on disc changeovers so that the dialogue, music, or action will be continuous. Add to this that touch of light, color, variety, novel treatment, that you can give your show from time to time, and you will begin having people wonder what you are going to do next, and when you do that, you are operating a theatre with thought and, more than likely, with success.

Manpower Big Factor

The strength of any business rests upon its personnel—its manpower. What are you doing to improve yourself in this business and to select and train your employees? Are you making your theatre radiate personality through the attractive, and the natural courtesy of your cashier, your doorman, your ushers, yourself, or are you letting your theatre suffer because of the lack of that attractive personality that human beings appreciate and demand?

A natural courtesy is essential and your employees should be selected with due consideration to their moral character, personality, their ability, and their ambition to learn. Those employees have almost complete control of the success of your business and when you consider that, you begin to appreciate what moral character is in your personnel.

The training of employees cannot be overstressed and, after all, those employes are going to be guided by your action, so you set the pace, you establish the standard, and you will find your employes, if properly selected, following in your footsteps. Train your employes to know their business, let each of them know what his responsibilities are—give him a plan for the work that he has to do, help him to organize himself, teach him the economics of the business, teach him to feel this business, create within him a desire to go forward, to learn, to progress, and last, but not least, make him enthusiastic. You can't expect these ideals in the employe if you haven't these ideals yourself.

Sound's Many Sales Angles

I like to think of selling in the light of this—"The manager of a 1,000 seat house can make 1,825,000 sales every year. He must sell to persons of all ages, and of various intellectual powers; he must sell his product for 365 days in the year and not just during any periodic selling season. His selling time on any one product is limited and once his program has changed he has lost forever the opportunity to sell more of that commodity. The nature of his business is such that he cannot afford to decrease his efficiency for even the shortest while, because the resulting losses can never be made good."

Now comes the problem of selling the programs, the policies, the theatre. How much real study are you giving to this? Have you stopped to realize that in the sound picture of today that you have a great combination of all the merits of the roadshow, vaudeville, and pictures to present to your public? The people have seen great shows, and have become shoppers for entertainment, so this business has evolved into something bigger than merely opening your door, and collecting money.

If I were to get over one thought with respect to selling, I would want it be to the great importance of an intelligent anlysis of the sales appeal. There's no limit to the value you can get from this intelligent analysis. If you get the analysis, if you understand the appeal that you have you can then arrange a master advertising campaign, and from the master campaign you can use those mediums to sell that you can afford economically, and that will cover the field in sales appeal. Please remember that the analysis of the appeal that you are selling is to my way of thinking the one thought about selling that you should remember, and put into effect. It's the lates or the extra 15 per cent of effort and thought put into a proposition that spells the difference between success or failure, or the difference between a great success and a poor success. Think that over.

Good Advice

CONSIDERABLE damage, involving much expense, has been caused by managers failing to regularly inspect the roofs of theatres. Drain pipes have been plugged, water backed up and seeping through the roof because the troughs have been clogged with debris. Paper, lamp cartons, leaves, light globes and bases have been allowed to accumulate and when rain comes they are washed into the down spouts.

Roofs at all times should be kept clean in order to eliminate drains becoming clogged. This can be done only by regular inspection.—"Now" (Fox West Coast Theatres' house organ.)

Use of Various Media

Let us consider now the mediums of sales appeal. Normally I have listed these mediums as far as our use of them is concerned, into five classes as follows:

1. The screen of public address where you are already appealing to picture patrons. Screen sales should be easy to those people, and you, therefore, have in your screen probably your most effective medium of sales. Consider, therefore, the value of your screen based upon the number of people you may be playing to, and use that screen thoughtfully, intelligently, and it will bear fine returns. The screen is especially effective to sell an attraction if the preceding attraction attracts a big audience. This naturally gives you a fine circulation for your screen ads. If you have a public address system, be careful what you say, how you say it, and how the voice sounds. Don't let the public address system poorly used reflect on the quality of your sound.

a. Edit your advertising trailers and be even more careful what goes on your screen than you are of what goes into your newspaper ads.

2. Your Front or Lobby—The front or lobby is your show window. Its value depends upon the location with respect to pedestrian and vehicular traffic and so it should be bright, attractive, and effective. It should radiate gayety, life, color, entertainment, enthusiasm. A front's function in selling is also to make immediate sales. There are three different elements that have a great deal to do with ticket selling values in lobby displays.

a. Element of contrast—To assure changes with each program so the public will wonder what's happening next in that lobby.

b. The element of environment—This means to create the proper atmosphere with respect to the picture itself, letting your lobby be a sort of prologue to your picture so that it will actually convey to potential patrons the type of entertainment you will show.

c. Element of flash, punch, or lustre. A never changing front fails to capitalize on the unusual.

3. Newspapers—Newspapers give you wide circulation and afford probably the most effective method of reaching outlying territories that are available now because of good roads and the automobile. Regular newspaper ads keep your theatre in the public's eye. It gives the best means of emphasizing what your show really is by giving you an opportunity to explain its type, its cast, and enough of its story to create interest. It affords you one of the best opportunities of emphasizing your supporting program, which is always important. The following eight principles will serve as a guide in newspaper work.

a. Get the attention of your prospect.
b. Interest and convince the prospect.
c. Be sure that your ad moves to sales.
d. Always consider the feminine angle. Women are responsible for the greatest proportion of movie patronage.
e. Always consider the mental age of your readers. Be simple in your expressions and elemental in your appeals.
f. Establish a reputation for reliable advertising. This does not mean that you must rate the picture for your patrons, but avoid any statement which your readers will find to be untrue.
g. Now that sound has been fully accepted, sell the voices of your stars just as faces and figures were sold in the past.
h. There is a difference between announcing and selling. Don't just announce. Sell!

It's up to you to determine in your field of endeavor the advantage of advance selling in newspapers, the advantages of newspaper tie-ups and of selling your newspapers the great value of the motion picture and your programs as general news value. Certainly the great number of people who attend theatres and who buy fan magazines seem ample proof that picture datum is news.

4. Bill Posting—There have been great changes in bill posting recently. Although slightly prejudiced myself against bill posting, I refer to you these facts.

The disadvantages of bill posting are: a. Excessive cost, especially for theatres having frequent changes. b. Unless properly lighted, the board's value lost half of the time. c. There are so many bill boards advertising so many commodities that a few boards are lost. d. Bill posting practically valueless unless neatly done.

The advantages of bill posting are as follows: a. Excellent where well-known title and star make an announcement of real sales value. b. Occasional posting makes big flash easier by comparison. c. Good pictorial paper attractive to children, whose patronage the theatre now needs. Generally speaking, I consider the cost of bill posting can be more effectively used in other mediums.

5. Miscellaneous or Exploitation—This includes all other forms of advertising not above mentioned such as ballyhoos, window displays, stunts, contests, mailing lists, etc.

Building Goodwill

I like to add to these five mediums the very important one which, after all, is a part of each medium and that is good will or institutional advertising. This brings me to the very important angle of civic endeavor and the value of making your theatre a source of community pride and a center of community interest. Are you doing your part in your city to make your city prosper and progress? Is there any way for you to prosper and progress unless your city prospers and progresses? Are you putting your shoulder to the wheel to promote all civic activities that are for the good of your community? Are you rendering an unselfish civic service to the community of which you are a part?

If you are doing less than giving your best to each community where you have theatre interests you are not only inviting competition and expensive legislative action against the industry but you are missing the real chance to enjoy the maximum of success. Be sold enough on this industry and your theatre to be proud of both. Let your spirit of enthusasm impart itself to others. Get away from the inferiority complex and realize the wholesome recreation you render is essential, and you will start to realize what it means to be a civic leader and a successful theatre man.

Spoor "Intersound" to Eliminate Light Rays in Recording Talkers

New Process Employes Phonographic Etching Method on Print Edge; Cost One-Twentieth, 10,000 Runs, Is Claim

A RADICAL departure in sound recording is said to be embodied in the "Intersound" process developed by George K. Spoor, pioneer Chicago producer, in conjunction with P. John Berggren and Fred J. Lindgren, a Chicago electrical engineer. Berggren and Spoor are the co-inventors of the "Natural Vision" camera, which is said to create a three-dimensional stereoscopic effect, and with the completion of the sound innovation, Spoor announces, he will re-enter the production field the first of the year, meanwhile licensing other producers.

"Intersound," according to Spoor, "will revive the industry and reduce the cost of recording to one-twentieth of its present expense. New patrons will be drawn to the theatres by the beauty of the three-dimensional pictures on the screen."

The new recording process utilizes mechanical instead of electrical means, based on new principles. Sound is etched on the edge of the film, instead of on a sound track, and prints can be run through a projector nearly 10,000 times without appreciable wear, the inventors claim.

Instead of converting sound into light and then back into sound again by means of photoelectric cells, amplifiers and other electrical devices employed in the industry from its inception until the present, the new process is said to carve sound grooves by purely mechanical means on the photographic film, resembling the grooves on a phonograph record. A small "pick-up" device on the projection machine, with a sapphire roller, fills the capacity of the phonograph needle to transfer the sound to the loud-speakers in the theatres.

Now Working on Color

The location of these sound grooves constitutes another departure from the present methods, Spoor asserts. While the present photographic "light-sound tracks" are placed on the surface of the film, directly alongside the perforations, these mechanical sound grooves are engraved on the edge of the film, thus leaving the surface free for the photographic images.

At the same time the inventor revealed that he is engaged in perfecting a process for taking color pictures, which he expects to be an improvement on the present methods. The new system, he said, would make it possible to get what is known as "critical resolution," giving sharpness to the background of the picture as well as to the foreground and the middleground. The present methods, he said, produced a "feathery," out-of-focus background.

The first step in the new sound engraving process, the inventor said, is the making of a "master record," which is carved on plain, not emulsified, celluloid, at the same time the photographic negative is being taken. From this master record, when the photographic positive prints used in the theatre are completely assembled, the sound record is engraved into the edge of the positive prints by means of an engraving machine which reproduces the master record faithfully in every respect.

"By placing a roll of clear celluloid," said Spoor in describing the new process of manufacture, "upon a disc and passing it over a sprocket drum onto another receiving disc, the record is carved into the edge of the film, while it passes over the drum, with a steel knife point, which is actuated by the vibrations of the microphone. This produces the master record.

"The duplicates from the master record are also made by mechanical cutting means. In this case we have two rolls of filament, one of which is the master record, passing over one drum, and the other the positive photographic print upon which the impression is to be duplicated. The latter passes over another drum, immediately alongside the master record drum, the carving tool actuated by the first filament reproducing to the edge of the second.

"When this is done the sound record for the theatre is complete with the carving into its edge. All it needs then is the pick-up device to reproduce the sound.

"In the present photographic light-track system five stages of amplification are used between the microphone and the recording machine. This causes the well-known distortion, known as 'the barrel-roll,' which always occurs with the use of amplifiers.

"With the inter-sound carving system no stages of amplification are used, the reproduction of the voice coming from the microphone direct to the edge of the film. For this reason there is no loss of naturalness of the voice in the instrument.

"In addition to the improvement in tone quality our new sound films will bring about a saving estimated at $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 a year in the operating expenses of every talking picture studio. For example, there are at present about 30,000 feet of photographic soundtrack going into the cutting rooms of each studio on the Coast every day. The product costs about 10 cents a foot, or a total of $3,000. Now, by the new process it becomes possible to turn 30,000 feet of film into sound with only $40 worth of celluloid.

"The 'pick-up' device, used for reproducing the sound in the theatres, is no larger than the ordinary pocket cigar lighter and costs less than $2 to make, as compared with the present price of $2,660 for the projection sound head."

THE magnificent new Gateway, the Publix B. and K. house on the Chicago northwest side, was seated with Heywood-Wakefield de luxe chairs. This beautiful theatre, executed by Rapp & Rapp in their famous "atmospheric" style, was designed and built primarily as a "sound" house. Each item of equipment was considered from a sound reproduction standpoint and Heywood-Wakefield de luxe chairs were chosen! . . . Many other leading architects and showmen have become convinced that Heywood-Wakefield chairs are ideal for sound houses — that this de luxe theatre seating has the extra class, comfort, and box office appeal needed in the business today. Publix has installed over 150,000 H-W chairs — RKO, Warner Brothers, Schine, Netoco, and a host of other enterprising showmen are using thousands of these stylish and comfortable seats. . . . Why Not Theatres As Shopping Center, Too?

By John Eberson

THE principles of economic distribution and the arrangement of a program which will spell advantage to the amusement loving public, as well as the producer, have made it necessary in many cases for the chain or individual operator to maintain control of practically all of the playhouses in a given locality, some of which are dark.

Chains of theatres are being formed, and others are being augmented by new houses purchased.

There are a great many towns in the United States where this development has brought about a situation whereby given towns have one or two theatres too many—too many from the standpoint of products as well as seating.

But what to do with the old theatre! It has a good location—it is somewhat antiquated in its embellishments and furnishings, but does it not offer some merchandising opportunity?

There it stands, a building with a self supporting roof, susceptible to almost any kind of remodeling, but usually too large to be offered for tenancy to one merchant.

Indoor Golf Not Enough

A freak development has prompted owners to install miniature indoor golf courses. I do not believe, however, that miniature golf courses exclusively will solve the problem. It is principally an out-door game and while we count golf enthusiasts by the thousands, I do not believe that the exclusive surrender of an old theatre building for indoor golf only, will be attractive enough to bring the returns required to make this a paying proposition.

Let us visualize an operater who has for good reason bought out his competitor and now controls all the theatres in an industrial town with a large percentage of population represented by young men and women working in factories and in industrial plants. The building of new theatres in many cases results in overseating of the town. The owner's thought of renting the old opera house which has served for more than 30 years is discussed with the real estate man. The property is a large one and well located on Main Street, but the owner finds that most of the big chain stores and old established department stores are permanently located, and there are few possibilities who can pay Main Street rents for such large footage.

Advocates Arcade Idea

Now let us just remember that this typical American town which, like many others, has a good many very honest and worthwhile small merchants who sell articles of value at the right price, and who are really serving the community. However, their business is so small that they cannot afford to pay Main Street rents. Would it not, therefore, be logical for the theatre owner to take his theatre and remodel it so his first floor could be arcaded and he could create a great many individual bazaar or arcade spaces which could be offered to these various small merchants, thus giving them an opportunity to do business, and at the same time opportune the down-town shopper to come in contact with this type of service and merchandise?

Every town of that size has a florist who has fine greenhouses on the outskirts of the city, desirous of having a downtown place where he could display the best of his wares and take orders. However, he cannot compete with the big shoe man and dry goods man for store space on Main Street, but he would gladly take a booth or small shop in the new arcade, where he would do a thriving business.

This may also be true of the young lady who has become an expert in beauty parlor work and hairdressing, but as she is working single-handedly, her business and following are small. She must confine herself probably to renting the back room in some dilapidated office building. This arcade would allow her to rent a small space and do business right where everybody could see her and find her.

The dry cleaning establishment, with its factory across the railroad tracks, probably would gladly rent a small place in this arcade to take orders and arrange deliveries. A radio shop at the entrance, and a barber shop in the rear of the arcade, with a connection to the basement, where bath parlors are arranged for. Just think of the many hundreds of young men who live in boarding houses, practically strangers in town, who miss the comforts of home, but who would find in a place of this kind opportunity to buy for reasonable prices the comforts of sanitation and health, which are lacking in their overcrowded boarding house district.

Think of a photographer catering to amateurs, with film developing and a small volume of sales of cameras. The new theatre arcade should be his home, as he can be accommodated for a very reasonable rent.

Other proposed occupants: A sheet music store, novelty shop, baby's dress wear, a small printer's shop, shoe shining parlor for men and women, taxicab office, small stationery and gift shop.

Golf Course on 2nd Floor

Now, I have always learned that all arcades must not only start somewhere but must lead somewhere, and must contain points of interest which will prompt people to leave the main street sidewalk and enter the arcade, and for this I have in mind the creation of a miniature golf course on the second floor of the old theatre with the entrance in the rear.

In passing the arcade towards this second floor entrance the patron would pass a giant soda and food fountain built in the center of the arcade, brilliantly lighted through a skylight cut in the old theatre roof, and a shaft creating an oval in the second floor miniature golf course. In the basement: billiards, pool, bowling alleys, lunch counter, vending machines of all sorts, a well organized and well managed club for the young working men of the city.

In building the golf course on the second floor but a few additional columns will have to be added to the typical balcony construction. The rear platforms and risers of the balcony should be removed, and I visualize in the rear of the balcony an artistic structure representing the front porch of a country club. There I would house and make my starting point for the miniature golf course; save all the old loge sections, which I would transform into a dance floor and arrange terraced seating for those who want to watch the game while eating.

Camouflaging Not Costly

Winding right and left from the extreme end of the balcony I would construct fairways converging at the proscenium arch, and then slipping up and down on the stage and returning to the rear of the balcony with interesting hazards, taking advantage of the extreme height of stage and main auditorium ceiling and camouflaging this section of the structure in some "atmospheric" style. It may be a Swiss mountain scene with a clubhouse carrying the character of the Swiss dairy, or a scene in southern France, with a clubhouse representing a chocolate shop, or a Spanish Garden—a clubhouse representing the court yard of a Spanish hacienda.

To a skilled force the camouflaging and proper lighting of such an amusement center is an easy matter and not a costly one. In other words, I propose to take the old theatre, devote the entire basement and first

Although it is away from his regular work and thought as a theatre architect and designer, a sense of duty to the industry in its efforts to deal with overseating and dark theatres, has prompted John Eberson, designer of many leading theatres throughout the world, to come forward with the suggestion he so ably outlines in the accompanying article. His suggestion is the result of careful thought and study during Eberson's travels throughout the world, backed by the veteran architect's intimate knowledge of small town conditions.

Low Percentage of Houses Get Full Benefit of Sound Due to Acoustics

Only 50 Per Cent of W. E. Houses in Middle West Survey Delivering "Commercially Adequate" Sound Although 88 Per Cent Receiving Satisfactory Sound at Horn Mouth

WHILE strides have been made in improving acoustics, not more than 50 per cent of theatres visited in his trip to a number of territories were delivering quality of sound to their audiences that could be considered commercially adequate, according to Herbert M. Wilcox, operating manager of Electrical Research Products.

This low average obtains, he says, in spite of the fact that "in nearly 90 per cent of the cases observed, the sound being projected from the loud speakers into the auditorium was of exceedingly satisfactory quality." In other words, between the projection from the loud speakers and the reception by the audience, the sound was impaired, due to acoustical disadvantages.

Wilcox's survey of houses wired by Western Electric embraced such territories as Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Chicago, Des Moines, Kansas City, St. Louis and Denver. So far as mechanical features are concerned, he says, this compares with a rating of 84 per cent six months ago and 76 per cent a year ago.

Says Bad Acoustics Hurt

High quality reproduction at the horn mouth "can deteriorate seriously before reaching the ear of the listener if acoustic conditions within a theatre are bad," Wilcox declares.

"Box office intake," he says, "bears a definite relation to the satisfaction which an audience enjoys. Consequently theatre owners have a responsibility to their customers to the extent of providing acoustic conditions which will permit transmission of sound from the horn mouth to the listener's ear in a pure and ungarbled condition. It is unfortunate that the vast majority of motion picture houses were built before there was any thought of talking pictures becoming a reality, and consequently there are relatively few theatres in which acoustic conditions are more than tolerably satisfactory.

Instructions Ignored

"Fortunately, it is possible to compensate for these deficiencies either mechanically through the proper arrangement and flaring of loud speaker horns back of the screen, or to a minor degree electrically through filtering. It is also possible in many instances to apply acoustic treatment to certain portions of the theatre walls and ceiling at relatively little cost which, if applied intelligently and in accordance with certain definite formula, can vastly improve the conditions within a theatre to permit the transmission of sound from the horn mouth to the listener without undue distortion.

"As part of our service we have developed a department of acoustic engineering, which is competent to make acoustic surveys and prescribe acoustic treatment which will provide maximum improvement with minimum expenditure. So far this department has made surveys and given aid and advice to approximately 2,500 theatres. Unfortunately, a rather small percentage of these theatres have carried out the recommendations made to them either in whole or in part, so that there still remains much to be desired before the requirements of a discriminating public can be entirely met.

"As a result of my observations on this trip I believe that it is entirely reasonable to expect that reproducing equipment can be maintained and operated in such a manner as to insure regularity of performance and of a quality that will transmit faithfully to the listeners' ear all that has been put into the record by the recording studio.

1,000 Emergencies in Month

"As regards assurance that 'the show will go on,' I might point to the fact that in December, 1928, we cleared 1,000 emergencies in approximately 1,000 theatres, while in July of this year we received and cleared 480 emergencies from 4,500 theatres. From an average of one emergency per theatre per month, the hazards of operation have been reduced substantially to one emergency per theatre per year. I am under the impression that this record would compare favorably with theatre operations in the old silent days prior to the advent of sound. And it should be borne in mind that the delicate and relatively complicated equipment required for sound reproduction offers many more hazards than the equipment required for the showing of silent pictures.

"We believe that the major factor contributing to these results has been the development of a competent service organization trained first to maintain equipment so that trouble will be avoided and second, to clear trouble when it occurs quickly and efficiently. The telephone and the automobile have contributed largely to the effectiveness of the operation of our service department. It is, of course, highly important that we be so organized that an exhibitor can reach an engineer almost immediately in case of trouble. To this end we have established branch offices in 38 cities and I believe that a vast majority of our customers are within a telephone toll radius of considerably less than one dollar. As for transportation, there are 450 men on our service staff, who travel upwards of 100,000 miles per week, practically all by automobile. As an indication of the mobility which the automobile affords our service staff, one of our engineers recently covered an emergency call 115 miles from his headquarters in exactly two hours.

"Business conditions observed on the trip were, in general, quite satisfactory. The old rule still holds that if you can give the public good entertainment, the box office will do business. That rule was strikingly illustrated in St. Louis where I found two theatres that had adequate quality of reproduction and were showing entertaining pictures to be doing excellent business in the middle of a hot wave. And at the same time business in other houses around there was far from capacity.

"Looking backward over the past two years I feel greatly encouraged over the progress that has been made in improvement of sound pictures, both in the studio and in the theatre, and an important contributing factor to this result is the growing appreciation of theatre managers of the necessity of delivering to their audiences a quality of sound which, in its illusion, is on a par with the illusion created by the silent picture."

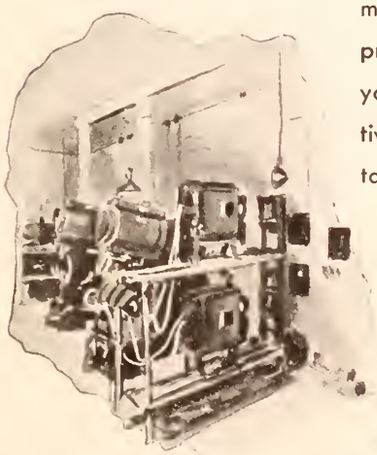
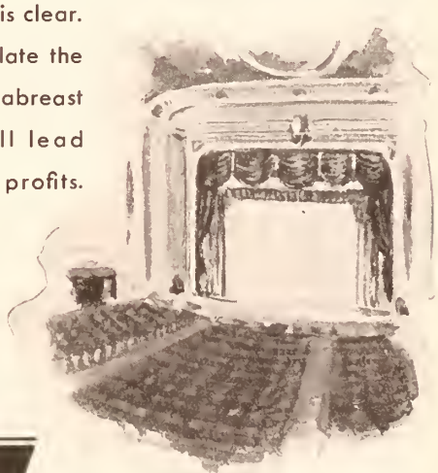
Acoustone Helps Sound In Fox Coast Houses



Hollywood—Acoustone is the sound absorption material used in several theatres of the Fox West Coast chain to better reproduction. The material is artistic and decorative and has unsuual qualities of even absorption at all frequencies, according to Dr. Vern O. Knudson, acoustical authority of the University of California.



Among theatres of the circuit which have installed Acoustone are: the new Fox-Pasadena, at Pasadena, and the Capitol and Rosemary, Long Beach. The material is manufactured by the Acoustone Co., Ltd., Los Angeles.

You remember Aladdin . . . that big Wish and Rub Man from the Orient. One day he saw an old-fashioned lamp in the window of an antique shop. He offered to buy it but the shop owner wanted too much. "Aw g'wan an' die!" says Aladdin, scoring his point with customary politeness. Then he picked up the lamp and the fellow did die. Aladdin was delighted. After that he spent his spare time wishing and rubbing. In this way he produced practically everything from a stone-age Packard to his idea of a Night Club, completely equipped except for the cover charge . . . It is frequently pointed out that times do change. Aladdinistic tendencies have sought new outlets. But today, as far as the theatre equipping business is concerned, they still exist—in more rational and far more practical form. Every time your National Representative calls on you, you are talking to a modern Aladdin.

It's true he has traded his lamp for an order book. It's true also that the system is somewhat reversed: (1) He wishes (that you'd use his order book), (2) you use it and (3) he brings you anything you want . . . I don't know whether the quality of Aladdin's lamp-produced merchandise was guaranteed or not. Authorities differ. But this Modern Aladdin guarantees his. Every bit of it. New Television Device Eliminates Mechanical Scanning, Is Claim

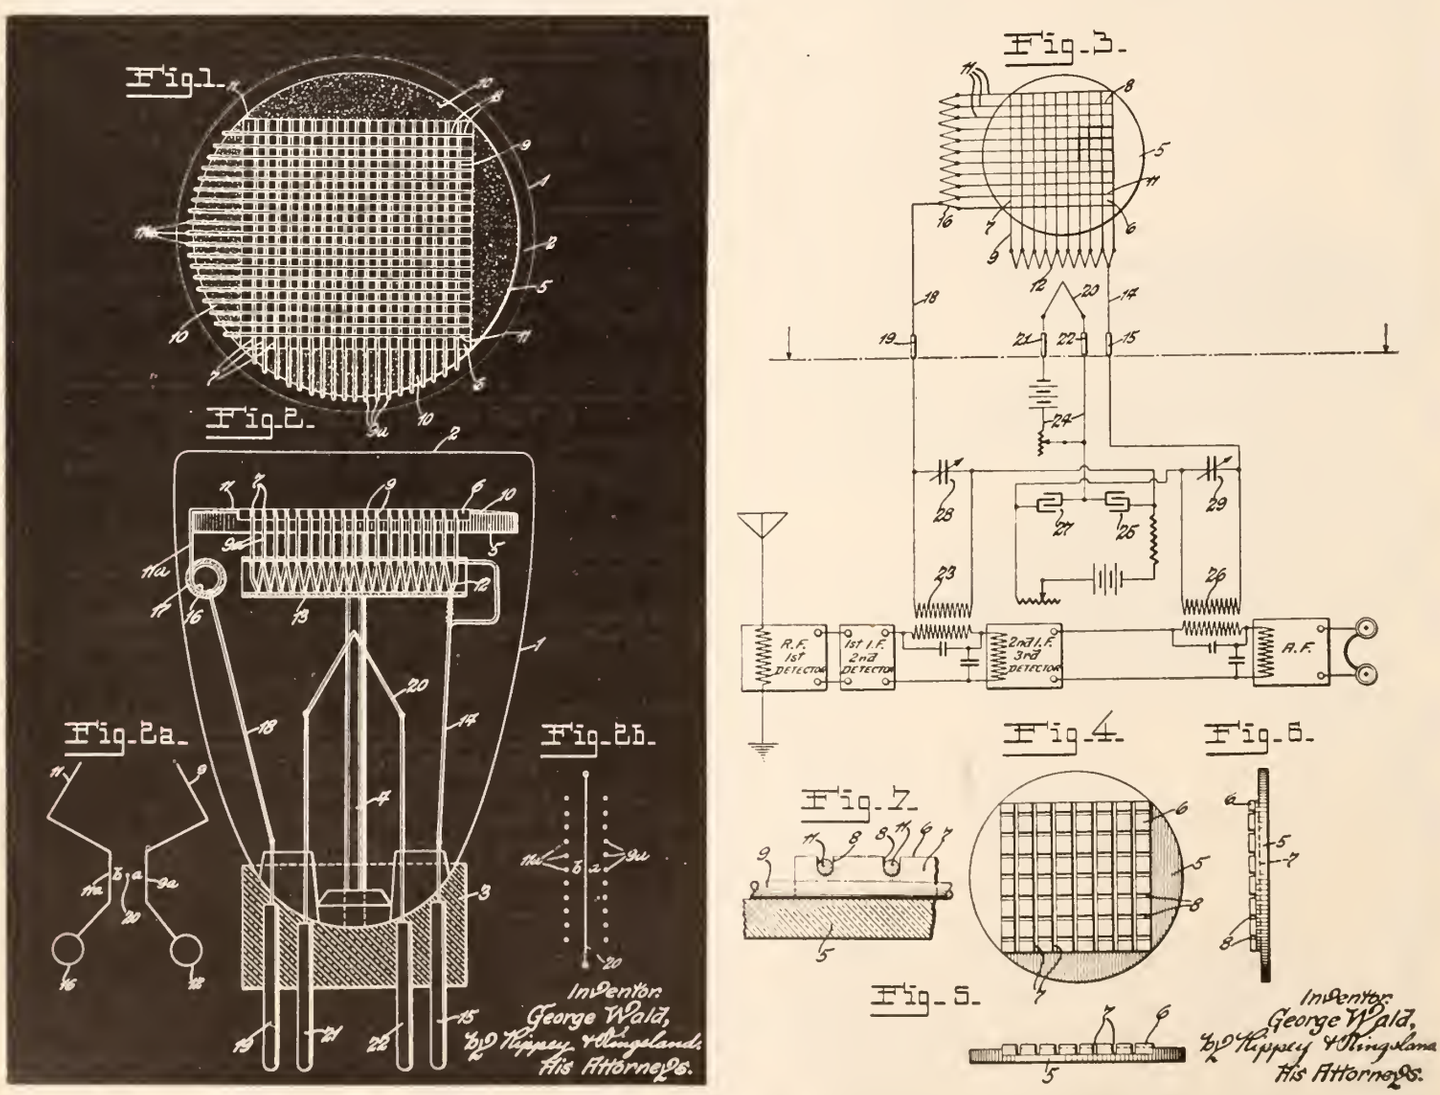
Image Scanned Electrically, and System Removes Limit as to Size While Retaining Synchronization, States Army Lieutenant Inventor—Slight Changes Enables Any Reception

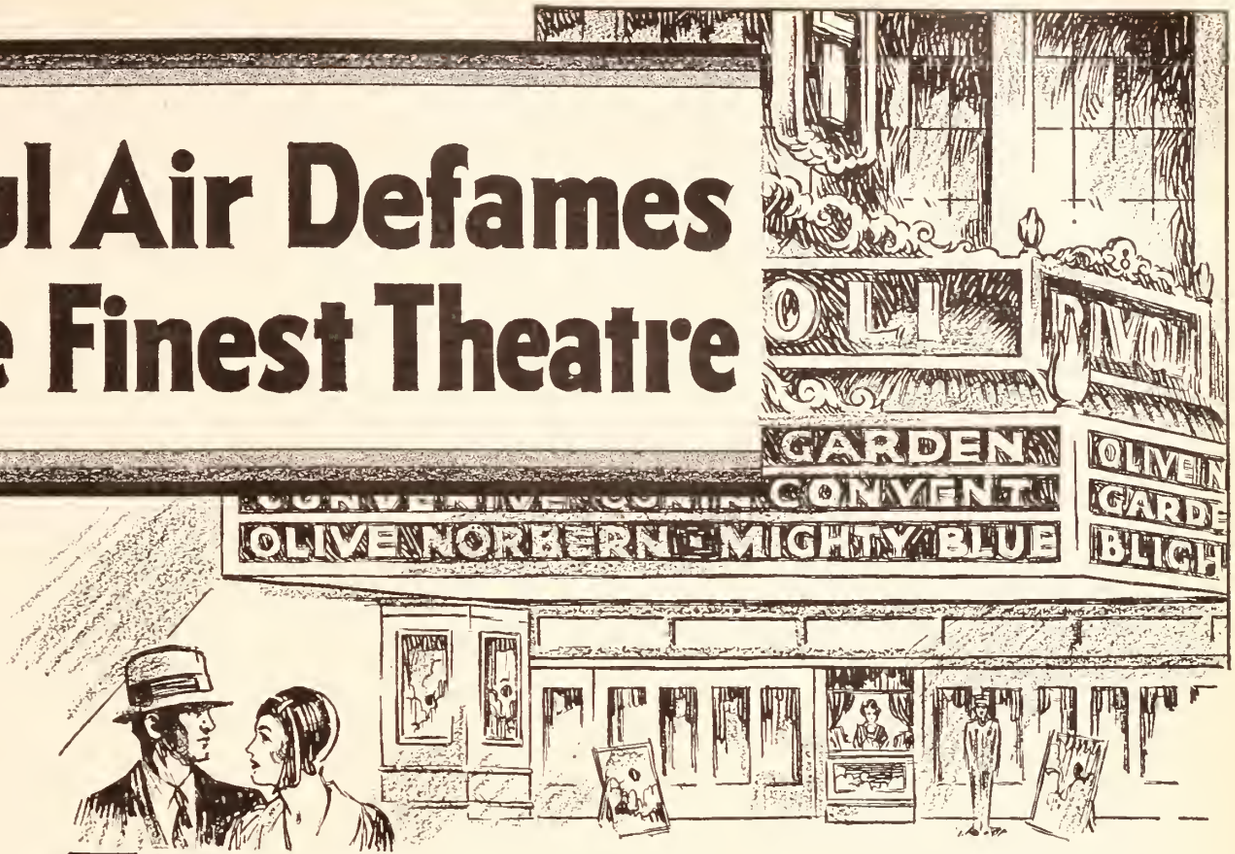
MT. CLEMENS, Mich.—Use of any mechanical device is eliminated in the television transmitter and receptor developed by Lieut. George Wald, of the Quartermaster Corps, U. S. Army, station at Selfridge field here. The image is scanned electrically, which, Lieut. Wald says, "removes the limit as to size and retains perfect synchronization."



The basic idea of the invention is covered by U. S. Patent No. 1,754,491. Its operation is described by the inventor as follows:

A series of anodes and cathodes are secured in a holder forming the ordinates and co-ordinates of the image. These anodes and cathodes connect to taps of secondaries to which anode and cathode variable frequencies are applied. The currents in the ordinates and co-ordinates distribute themselves in accordance with Kirchhoff's law so as to produce a maximum voltage drop across one crossing point only at a time of the ordinates and co-ordinates, thus producing only one bright point on the image frame of the receiving tube. As each train of variable frequency sweeps by the cathodes the bright point of the image produces a line, and as each train of variable frequency sweeps by the anodes a whole frame of the image is traced. The time relation of the ordinates and co-ordinates is such as to cause a systematic image scanning by the bright glow point. The television current is superimposed on the cathode current therefore the bright scanning point becomes responsive to the television current and reproduces the image.

Fig. 1 and 2 show a modified tube which places within the tube that part of the secondaries that have the tap-offs connected to the ordinates and the co-ordinates of the image frame. This tube has six prongs, four connected as shown and one each connecting to the anode and cathode tuning condensers at points X and Y respectively. These condensers adjust and center the image on the frame. Figures 2a and 2b shows the selectors which retain the variable frequency oscillations between the ordinates and co-ordinates of the image and the filament center distance. While the anodes and cathodes crossing points are in parallel to the selector. Owing to the lesser distance between these anodes and cathodes crossing points than the selector the bright glow point on the frame is maintained in its scanning sweep across the image.



The transmitter tube Fig. 7 operates on the same principle. It uses numerous light-active-cells, combined with a triod amplifier producing a television current superimposed on two variable frequency currents. The television current is then detected through a detector tube which suppresses the vari-

Foul Air Defames The Finest Theatre

NOTHING so quickly gives people the wrong impression, when entering a beautiful theatre, as to be greeted by foul, ill-smelling stale air.

This evil condition is entirely corrected in any theatre by Healthful Kooler-Aire, the complete cooling and air conditioning system. It changes the air entirely every four minutes, or oftener, as required. The fresh, incoming air is cooled and washed free of soot and dust. Then it is circulated---slowly, steadily, QUIETLY to every part of the house.

In winter, Kooler-Aire keeps in motion and redistributes hot air above radiators and other areas where excessive heat collects, thus saving considerable fuel and increasing patrons' comfort.

Costs less to buy and operate. Our liberal financing plan puts Kooler-Aire profitably within the reach of every theatre. Take advantage of it this season. Put in the proved system that has made good for Paramount-Publix, Warner Brothers, Fox, R-K-O and other circuits and independents from coast to coast. May we send this book? Write today.

NATURE'S REFRIGERATION

THE

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

IT IS necessary at this time to qualify one of the statements made about condensers. The quotation has been made to the effect that the charging of a condenser or the discharging of that unit involves the transfer of electrons from the negative plate to the positive plate. Such a condition gives rise to the question relative to the source of the electrons and if the electrons actually move from one plate to the other.

Now, this question is trivial insofar as the application of the unit is concerned but because of its puzzling nature we quote the assumed condition. The electrons do not move from plate to plate. They are displaced in the conductor until number of electrons upon the plates are, of such quantity that the potential difference across the plates equals the charging voltage; or the potentials on both plates are equal and the condenser is discharged. Thus, the electron upon the negative plate never reaches the positive plate during charge or the electron upon the positive plate never reaches the negative plate during discharge.

The statement that the electrons move from one plate to the other affords a convenient expression.

Just as it is possible to arrange resistances in varied manner in order to achieve a certain condition or to provide a certain value of resistance, it is possible to arrange condensers in varied fashion; to provide a resultant capacity which is greater than that of one condenser; to provide an arrangement which will enable the application of a potential higher than is possible with any one condenser available or to provide a final value of capacity which is less than that of the units at hand. Such combinations of capacity are parallel and series. Before entering upon the various forms of connection, let us dwell for a few moments upon voltage rating.

Voltage Rating—One of the paramount items allied with all forms of capacity, that is, all types of condensers is the voltage which may be applied across the terminals of the condenser. A few words relating to this subject were mentioned in Lesson 14. In view of the fact that the position of the condenser in any circuit is such that it is subjected to some value of potential, it is customary to rate capacities, i.e., condensers in capacity and operating voltage figures. This is essential because the dielectric material within the condenser will stand only a definite amount of voltage. Excess voltage punctures the dielectric material and the unit is unfit for further use.

An interesting point in connection with paper condensers is that, while the thickness of the dielectric material governs the permissible voltage, condenser construction is such that the thickness of the dielectric is not varied by using single sheets of varied thickness. Instead the thickness of the dielectric sheets remains the same, but the number of sheets are varied. Thus if for example, a single sheet is .0005 inch thick and will withstand 150 volts, and a higher potential condenser is required, the dielectric material will not be a single sheet of greater thickness. The new condenser will employ three of four layers of dielectric material of .0005 inch thick. The above quoted relation between the voltage and the thickness of the dielectric material is merely illustrative of the subject and does not refer to actual rating of materials. As a matter of fact, the usual minimum number of layers of dielectric material is two. The reason for this is that the finest of papers has a large number of pinholes and by using more than one sheet, the positions of the pinholes are changed so that they do not offer a single continuous path through the dielectric material.

This is the time to refer to the effective and peak values of voltage as stated in Lesson 12. If a condenser is rated to withstand 1000 volts D.C. this value refers to the maximum voltage of D.C. character as specified. This specification does not allow the application of 1000 volts A.C. Instead, the value of D.C. voltage rating can be classed as the equivalent peak value of A.C. voltage; which would make the effective value much lower. In other words, a 1000 volt D.C. rating is suitable for use upon an A.C. circuit with a maximum r.m.s. or effective value of approximately 700 volts. As a matter of fact, greater tolerance is usually allowed and the maximum effective value of A.C. voltage applicable to a condenser rated at 1000 volts D.C. is about 600 volts.

Condensers rated in A.C. values usually refer to the r.m.s. value, unless statement to the contrary is made, i.e., reference to a peak value. The usual form of rating is in D.C. and AC.. values of voltage, thus:

Capacity	D.C.	A.C.
1. mfd.....	200.....	125 r.m.s.
1. mfd.....	500.....	300 r.m.s.
1. mfd.....	1000.....	600 r.m.s.
1. mfd.....	2000.....	1100 r.m.s.

The above mentioned r.m.s. values allow a peak value which does not exceed the rated D.C. voltage rating. Thus, the peak value of voltage encountered when the r.m.s. (effective) value is 300 volts is

$E_m = 300 \times 1.414$
$= 424.2$ volts

The maximum D.C. voltage rating of 500 volts allows sufficient tolerance.

Electrolytic Condensers—In contrast to the paper condenser which, when ruptured, is unfit for further use, electrolytic condensers of certain types are self healing, but still bear definite operating voltage ratings. Furthermore, these condensers are of such formation that they bear definite polarity designations. In other words they are polarized, have positive and negative leads and must be used in that manner. Electrolytic condensers can be described as follows:

Certain metals such as magnesium, aluminum and tantalum when immersed in an electrolyte possess the property of passing electric current in one direction and not in the other. In other words, unilateral conductivity. This property is present so long as the voltage required is not greater than a critical value. If two such metals are placed within an electrolyte practically all flow of electric current ceases and constitutes a condenser.

In the "wet" type of electrolytic condenser, a thin coating of oxide and a thin layer of gas are caused upon and above the active metal anode. The active surfaces then are the metal anode as one plate and the electrolyte solution as the other. The oxide film and the layer of gas function as the dielectric. When polarized the electrolyte is the cathode or negative terminal and the rectifying metal is the anode. By rectifying metal is meant the metal which receives the oxide coating. This metal, in conjunction with the oxide coating and the layer of gas, actually displays a rectifying action or valve action in that it allows the flow of current in one direction but does not allow the flow of appreciable current in the other direction. The metal usually used in "wet" electrolytic condensers is aluminum arranged in the form of a spiral, thus providing a large active area within a small space.

In the "dry" type of electrolytic condenser, the electrolyte is in the form of a paste held in contact with the active metal.

This Is Lesson 15 in the Rider Series on Sound Projection

We make special reference to the fact that in contrast to the paper or other form of solid dielectric condenser wherein current does not flow at all if the dielectric is perfect, electrolytic condensers allow the leakage of a small value of current through the dielectric. The critical voltage is that which allows the flow of the maximum permissible leakage current.

The disadvantage of leakage current is in itself not of great moment because the actual value of current is small (about .2 mil per mfd.) and when used in such manner that a small leakage current does no harm, the condenser enables the achievement of a large value of capacity within a very small space, that is, small in comparison with the space required for a much smaller value of capacity in the paper dielectric type of condenser.

The "wet" type of condenser is usually designed for voltages approximating 300 to 400 volts. Recent developments have produced "dry" condensers of this type. The usual range of capacities to be found in electrolytic condensers rated at comparatively high voltages is between 4 and 70 microfarads. The range of capacities for low voltages between 2 and 12 volts extends from about 1000 to 5000 microfarads.

Another difference between the electrolytic and the paper type of condenser is that, exclusive of voltage rating, the paper type of unit is applicable with equal facility to A.C. and D.C. circuits. Such is not the case with the usual electrolytic type of capacitor. It is polarized and designed for use on D.C. circuits. When allowed to operate upon A.C. circuits for an appreciable period of time, damage results.

Still another peculiarity of the electrolytic type of condenser is that the capacity is a function of the structure of the unit and also of the leakage current. The dielectric material in such units is an oxide coating and a layer of gas upon the surface with a very high dielectric constant. When the condenser is made, this layer must be produced and it is the result of the application of a "forming" voltage. The higher the forming voltage the thicker the layer of oxide and gas. As to capacity, the thicker the dielectric layer, the lower the capacity, which means that the higher the forming voltage, the lower the capacity. As a matter of fact, the capacity is inversely proportional to the forming voltage.

Electrolytic condensers may be employed at voltages somewhat higher than the rating but the value of capacity will be reduced. Such practice is dangerous because of possible injury to the condenser unit and should not be a habitual form of operation.

Capacities in Parallel—The occasion frequently arises when a certain capacity is required and the exact value is not available. Connecting condensers in parallel provides one means of securing a resultant value higher than that of any one of the condensers in the parallel arrangement. As in any parallel arrangement, the elements are in parallel when the voltage applied is the same across all the elements connected between the same two points in the circuit. Thus in Figure 50 condensers A and B are connected in parallel. If points X and O represent two points in a system, the voltage E from the battery B is the same across condensers A and B. One of the factors which governs the capacity of any condenser is the area of its active surfaces. Joining capacities in parallel is the equivalent of increasing the area of the active surfaces in a definite manner. By definite manner, we mean that the increase of capacity when condensers are in parallel follows along a certain prescribed manner.

As is evident in the illustration, the same potential charges the two condensers, or

$$E = e_2$$

Since the same difference of potential charges both condensers and the charge Q applied to each condenser or the quantity of electricity in each condenser is

$$Q = C \times E \text{ and } E = e_1 = e_2$$

the total charge will be

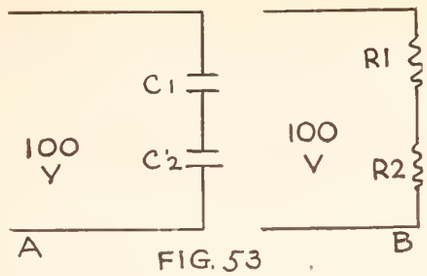

FIG. 53

$$Q_t = Q_{c_1} + Q_{c_2}$$

and

$$CE = Ce_1 + Ce_2$$

whence

$$C = C1 + C2 \qquad (52)$$

Thus the law of parallel condenser is,

That the resultant capacity of condensers in parallel is the sum of the individual capacities.

If we assign numeral values to C1 and C2 and say that

$$C1 = .01 \text{ mfd}$$

and

$$C2 = .05 \text{ mfd}$$

The joint capacity of C1 and C2 in parallel is

$$C_t = C1 + C2$$
$$= .01 + .05$$
$$= .06 \text{ mfd}$$

If we say that the value of E is 100 volts and the charge Q in coulombs

$$Q = \text{Capacity in farads x volts} \qquad \text{(equation 48)}$$

$$Q_1 = .0000001 \times 100$$
$$= .000001 \text{ coulomb}$$

and

$$Q_2 = .0000005 \times 100$$
$$= .000005 \text{ coulomb}$$

and since

$$Q_t = .000001 + .000005$$
$$= .000006 \text{ coulomb}$$

whence according to equation 49

$$Ct = \frac{.000006}{100}$$
$$= .00000006 \text{ farad} = .06 \text{ mfd}$$

The method of determining the resultant capacity of a parallel bank is carried out in the same manner irrespective of the number of units in the bank or of the relative values of these units. Suppose that we have four condensers as in Figure 51. The values are as designated.

$$Ct = C1 + C2 + C3 + C4 \text{ etc.}$$
$$= .164 + .075 + .002 + .0001$$
$$= .2411 \text{ mfd}$$

The use of condensers in parallel involves no complications. One fact only must be remembered. All of the condensers in the parallel bank are subjected to the same potential; hence all the condensers, individually speaking, must be of such design as to withstand the applied potential. This does not mean that all must be of the same rating. The minimum rating should be at least the applied voltage. When one condenser is to be connected in parallel with another, it is not necessary to remove the unit already in the circuit in order to join it with the other. Simply connect the second condenser in parallel with the first.

If the condensers are of the electrolytic type, correct polarity is essential. Modern electrolytic condensers are marked to indicate polarity.

A red lead indicates the positive terminal and a black lead indicates the negative terminal. When connected in parallel all like polarity leads should be joined.

Connecting condensers in parallel does nothing else but increase the capacity of the condenser bank. It does not enable the application of higher potentials, even if one of the condensers in the parallel bank bears a voltage rating higher than the remaining condenser or condensers as the case may be.

A good guide relative to the means of solving for parallel condensers is to remember that they vary as series resistances. Series resistances are additive and parallel capacities are additive.

Capacities in Series—When condensers are connected in series, the circuit arrangement differs from the parallel system. Compare Figures 50 and 52. The latter shows the same two condensers connected in series instead of parallel. In contrast to the parallel arrangement, condensers connected in series are not subjected to the complete charging potential. Instead each condenser in the network is subjected to only a part of the total charging voltage E from the battery B shown in Figure 52. Whereas the total capacity of paralleled condensers is greater than that of any one, the largest one in the parallel network, the final capacity in a series system is less than the smallest capacity in the network. The calculation of capacities in series is like the calculation of resistances in parallel. The law governing the resultant capacity of a series combination is:

The resultant capacity of a series combination is the reciprocal of sum of the reciprocals of the individual capacities.

Referring to Figure 52, the voltage E does not act upon both condensers. Instead it normally is divided between the number capacities in the system, but not necessarily in a uniform manner. Irrespective of division,

$$E = e_1 + e_2$$

$$\text{and } e_1 = \frac{q_1}{c_1}$$

$$\text{and } e_2 = \frac{q_2}{c_2}$$

$$E = \frac{Q}{C} = \frac{q_1}{c_1} + \frac{q_2}{c_2}$$

whence

$$\frac{1}{C} = \frac{1}{C_1} + \frac{1}{C_2}$$

and

$$C = \frac{1}{\frac{1}{C1} + \frac{1}{C2}}$$

If we apply the numerical values shown in Figure 50 to the condensers shown in Figure 52, the resultant capacity of the series system becomes

$$C = \frac{1}{\frac{1}{.01} + \frac{1}{.05}}$$

$$C = \frac{1}{100 + 20}$$

C = .00833 mfd is the resultant capacity of the combination. As is evident the final figure is less than the smallest capacity in the combination.

If two condensers are connected in series, the final capacity is equal to the product of the capacities divided by the sum, viz.:

$$C = \frac{C1 \times C2}{C1 + C2}$$

or

$$C = \frac{.01 \times .05}{.01 + .05} = \frac{.0005}{.06} = .00833 \text{ mfd}$$

Like Condensers in Series—If all the condensers in the series system have like values of capacity, the final capacity is equal to the End of Expansion of National Circuits in Class A Cities Throws Bulk Of Building Activities Into "Backbone" Spots of Nation

STOCKTON, Cal.—Property on which the historic old Budd House now stands has been sold to National Theatres Syndicate for the newest link in its chain of California houses. The new venture will cost $300,000 and seat 2,000.

Ipswich, Mass.—Early September has been set for opening of the Strand, one of the Philip Smith group. ERPI is wiring for sound, and a Magnascope wide screen will be installed.

Alameda, Cal.—On Sept. 15, Richard J. Nasser and associates will start work on a $500,000 theatre structure on the north side of Central ave., between Oak and Park.

Steubenville, O.—"Ingagi" opened this town's new house, the Rex, a 1,300 seater. C. J. Vogel was general contractor. W. B. Urling operates.

Belle Fourche, S. D.—Black Hills Amusement Co. will replace its local house with a new structure. Bids now are being received.

Yoakum, Tex.—Operating only at night because of its own competitor, the Greater Grand, a new Grand, has opened under management of Yoakum Amusement Co.

Hayes Center, Neb.—Contracts were let this week for building of a new theatre on the site of the theatre destroyed by fire recently.

Perryton, Tex.—Carl Ellis spent $85,000 in construction of a new house just finished.

Harrisonburg, Va.—Shenandoah Valley Theatre circuit is negotiating with contractors for construction of a theatre building to cost $160,000. Site is located at Court Square.

Roanoke, Va.—Theatre Holding Co. is considering erection of a $500,000 house on Tazewell, directly behind the Elks Club.

Burlington, Vt.—The site of the burned LaFrance hotel on Main street will house a theatre, now in construction and to be operated by Paramount jointly with Queen City Realty Company. Charles Smith & Son, Derby, Conn., is the contractor. Cost, $350,000. Architects, Mowll & Rand, of Boston.

LaGrange, Ga.—Mayor H. C. Fincher delivered the opening address at ceremonies attending the premiere of the LaGrange, owned by Oscar Lam. The house cost $125,000, seats 1,020 and is located on Main Street.

Custer, S. D.—Manager Kurka has opened the Garlock, closed for complete rebuilding.

Expansion Belies Depression Talk

Hollywood—Expansion program of Fox West Coast Theatres is being continued throughout the Coast territory. Several new theatres will be opened by Harold B. Franklin during Greater Talkie Season.

In Pasadena, the remodeled and redecorated Fox opened Aug. 15, simultaneously with the official opening of Greater Talkie Season. Sept. 1 saw the opening of the new $800,000 Fox Wilshire at Wilshire and Hamilton, Los Angeles. Friday the redecorated California is being opened at Berkeley.

In Centralia, Wash., the new $250,000 Fox will make its bow Sept. 10. The house will be under the direction of Fox West Coast Theatres in conjunction with Finkelstein and Rosenberg. Sept. 15 will see the advent of the new $250,000 Fox at Stockton.

In addition to these completed projects, Fox West Coast will operate a $250,000 theatre to be built at Pasadena, of early California design. Edwards & Plunkeet are architects and Henry Beller will be the builder. A $1,000,000 theatre is to be built at Spokane, marking the firm's entry into that city. At Tacoma, a theatre is under way, and a number of other houses are under way or planned in southern California.

This building program graphically depicts the theatrical field's refutal of rumors of business depression, according to Franklin, who contends that the fall will see business conditions as firm and stabilized as ever before.

GENEVA, N. Y.—Riveting has already started on Schine's new house, to be opened simultaneously with the chain's new Cortland theatre.

Rapid, S. D.—Seating 450, A. L. Brown and J. B. Shearer have opened the State on Main Street.

Rochester, Pa.—Majestic Amusement Co. is sponsoring construction of a 1,600 seater of Hindu-Chinese architecture.

Beaver Falls, Pa.—Unnamed theatre interests will operate the house being built here.

Norristown, Pa.—This town's new Norris Amusement Co. house is rapidly nearing completion. Opening is set for early October. W. H. Lee drew plans for the $1,000,000 house.

Milton, Pa.—The Bijou will be replaced by a new modern theatre. Milton Theatre Co. operates.

MAKES GOOD

DURING the oppressive heat waves that swept the country this summer, Arctic Nu-Air equipped theatres gave positive relief. Cooling gets the crowds!

No matter how hot it is outside, this powerful system keeps the audience refreshed and comfortable with a steady, cooling breeze, refreshing as a boat-ride in Lake Superior.

All-Year Ventilation

Now, with cooler weather coming on and winter at hand, Arctic Nu-Air again proves its big advantages—gives you a constant, steady supply of fresh air, ejects all foul air and unpleasant odors, prevents both overheated and chilly areas—changes the air completely every few minutes or as often as required.

Multi-Speed regulation by Remote Hydraulic Control. This exclusive feature means that you can run an Arctic Nu-Air at exactly the desired speed, not simply a few set speeds which are too fast or too slow. Controlled from any part of the house, by manager or usher.

Don't let poor ventilation handicap your best season. Write us today for details about Arctic Nu-Air.

U. S. Projectors Too High Priced for Market in India; France Takes Lead

Trade There Admits Superiority of American Makes Over European Rivals, But Limited Field Forces Trade to Buy Cheaper Equipment

WASHINGTON—The price scale of American projectors, computed to be fifty per cent greater than the Pathe machine, the most popular make in India, is retarding the sale of domestic equipment in India.

In trade circles in that country, it is admitted that American projectors are superior in mechanical precision, control of the arc, and their ability to get the best results from poor prints, yet the limited theatre field has apparently swung what trade exists to Pathe.

So the Department of Commerce points out in its survey on the possibilities for American equipment in the Far East and Africa. The full text of the Government report on India follows:

India

From Report Submitted by Warren G. Patterson, Assistant Trade Commissioner at Calcutta; Edmund Montgomery, Consul at Madras, and H. H. Dick, Consul at Rangoon

In British India, including Burma, there are 309 theatres with a total seating capacity of 222,655. The exact figure in the Indian States is not known, but it is estimated that there are an additional 60 theatres and some 37 seasonal theatres located in the "hill stations" which are open only a part of the year.

Large, luxuriously appointed theatres. such as are found in the United States, do not exist in India. There are a few comfortable well-ventilated theatres located in the port cities, but in the majority of cases Indian theatres closely resemble those in the United States of 20 years ago. Although the average seating capacity of an Indian theatre is 800, it has been estimated that the average attendance is 200. With 309 theatres in operation there is a total average daily attendance of only 61,800. This is mainly attributed to the small number of theatres, the low earning power of the masses, and the fact that the great majority of the population reside in small villages where a theatre would not be a profitable establishment.

Standard Projectors.—The greater number of projectors installed in India are Pathé. This is due primarily to the fact that it costs the exhibitor just about a half of the price of a recognized American professional projector. Due to this factor, Pathé became quite popular and since the war has been increasing in demand.

Naturally, with widespread popularity, little difficulty has been encountered in obtaining dealers throughout the country, with the result that in this network of service stations, spare parts are readily available, which is an additional selling feature. The Pathé reinforced model also has a reputation of handling old films with greater ease than most makes on the market.

One American projector obtains the bulk of the high-class trade, while another is second in popularity. The sales of the latter make are much smaller than the first. Of 17 theatres in Bombay, seven are using the first mentioned; and nine out of 10 Calcutta theatres and practically all in Rangoon use that make. Karachi is evenly divided between the two. Taking India as a whole, it is estimated in trade circles that there are in use approximately 75 American projectors of the first make. Other less common makes in use include Gaumont, Imperator, A. E. G., Ernamann, Mechau, and Butchers.

In the early days of the industry and through the war period, the British Gaumont was very popular in India. The complete outfit ranged in price at that time from 1,500 to 2,000 rupees ($543 to $724). However, Gaumont lost its popularity directly after the war, and most of the units previously sold have been replaced by other makes.

The selling prices of projectors in India are as follows:

	Rupees
Pathé Reinforced Bioscope	1,174
American	2,300
American	2,400
Mechau	3,500
Mechau E. M. model	1,500
Ernemann	1,500
Gaumont	1,500
Imperator (Krupp-Ernemann)	2,500
A. E. G.	1,350

The import duty on projectors, electrical motors, generators, is 15 per cent ad valorem.

Most of the theatres in the port cities, such as Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Karachi, and Rangoon, are equipped with two projectors. However, of the total 309 theatres in India it is estimated that less than five per cent are equipped with more than one projector. In the larger cities the theatres are equipped with modern projectors, but in the interior 80 per cent of the total are more or less obsolete models purchased 5 or 10 years ago.

In trade circles it is generally agreed that American projectors are superior with regard to clear projection, mechanical precision, control of the arc, ability to get better results from mutilated films, and their ability to function properly with a minimum of adjustment and repair. The only obstacle to more widespread use is the consideration of price and service.

One of the chief complaints against American projectors, aside from the question of high price, is the almost complete lack of service and availability of spare parts. The chief foreign competitor, Pathé, has established excellent servicing facilities and makes it a practice to lend complete machines or heads while overhauling an exhibitor's equipment. Although the market is comparatively small, American manufacturers are strongly urged to obtain a qualified agent who is willing and able to render service.

Progress in the field of exhibition in India has been sadly lacking. At the present time considerable thought and attention is being given to the industry. The Government of India Film Cinematograph Inquiry Committee has completed and published its report, in which many constructive recommendations are made. It is generally expected that the next five years will see an important increase in the amount of capital invested.

Generators.—The possibilities for the sale of American motor-generator sets to convert alternating current to direct are not encouraging, since direct current is available in all of the larger cities except Rangoon. However, a number of converters are employed to cut down voltage to between 80 and 110.

The alternating current system is now the rule in most of the public electrical schemes,

Stresses Importance of Safeguarding Patent Rights and Tells the Method

"Evidence of Conception" One Way to Prove Priority of Invention; Selection of Attorney to Protect Client's Interests Requires Care

Editor's Note—In THE SHOWMAN for August, Ray Belmont Whitman, Patent Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, described how and by whom a patent may be secured and explained how to avoid difficulties in protecting inventor's rights.

Here he continues the discussion, delving further into the mechanics of the procedure.

HAVING now conceived an idea which the inventor feels is valuable enough to go further with, he should, as the next step, protect himself against any one else, either unscrupulously or accidentally, proving priority of invention and the right to a patent. One way to do this is to prepare what is known as an "evidence of conception." The inventor writes a detailed description of the complete invention in his own words, on a typewriter or with pen and ink; and makes also any necessary rough sketches to illustrate the invention (unless it be a chemical process or like invention where this is impossible).

On the last page he affixes his name and the date, either in the presence of two witnesses, preferably persons outside his family, or better, before a notary public, who will attest his signature as that date, and affix the notary seal. This original document should always thereafter be retained by the inventor with other valuable papers. If it has been prepared on the typewriter, which is preferable, a carbon copy should be made and used to submit the invention to his attorney later.

By this simple means, the inventor is always able to prove first conception of his invention at the date noted, and this is often of great importance, for many times others are inventing in the same field and without knowledge of their competitors' activities. Occasionally, too, where attempts are made to improperly appropriate the inventor's idea, he is able later on to substantiate his prior rights to the invention and a patent thereon. Such an instance as this last occurred to a client of the author, who won a suit on a phonograph motor patent that went up to the Supreme Court, largely upon an evidence of conception which he had written informally on the back of a dance program, but which he had been careful to properly sign, date and witness.

Written Records Vital

It is highly important also that the inventor maintain a similar record in writing, properly dated and witnessed, giving other information which also may be needed later, including: (1) the date that the invention was first disclosed to others, with their names and the circumstances of the disclosures; (2) the date when the first sketches and working drawings were made—the drawings themselves to be suitably signed, dated and witnessed; (3) the date when the first operating model was made, together with information as to who made it, and the original bills for material, where obtainable; and (4) all the models themselves, made during the development of the idea, should be carefully preserved. All this data enters into a proper prosecution of what is called an "interference," in which the application for patent sometimes becomes involved.

The inventor having now established his or her "evidence of conception," may take the next step, which is:

There are some 12,000 or more patent attorneys registered to practice in the United States Patent Office, and of these probably 2,000 get most of their income from the preparation and prosecution of patent applications, and their exploitation and litigation. These men are all professionally-trained men, and, with perhaps some rare exceptions, honest and ethical in all their dealings. However, they, like doctors, dentists, or other professional men, vary in their degree of ability or skill.

Some attorneys are too young and with too limited experience or education to understand fully how to properly protect a valuable invention. Others are too old to be at the height of their mental power, or not agressive enough in combating the examiner's objections, during prosecution of the case, to obtain all the protection that the inventor is entitled to.

Some attorneys get their clients through advertising methods, and instead of conducting a professional practice, work on the "once only" plan, getting the maximum possible fees from the inventor for the minimum allowable work. Needless to say, this latter class of attorneys do their work so poorly that their patents are usually of little or no practical value.

Other patent attorneys devote most of their time to court litigation, and very little to Patent Office practice, or the preparation and prosecution of patent applications into patents. So they have little real skill in such work, and especially in the drafting of the "claims" in patents, which is the important and really protective part of these legal documents, of which more hereafter.

Again, many patent attorneys are merely lawyers, with but little knowledge of the sciences or engineering, and so are seriously handicapped in patenting inventions, especially if they are very technical.

The ideal patent attorney is one who not only has a thorough working knowledge of patent law and procedure, and especially Patent Office practice, by virtue of a proper education and long experience in the work, but who is also a graduate engineer and with a successful experience in that profession. Such a man, whose mind is trained both logically and analytically, is best able to properly represent an inventor.

(The Patent Office, in fact, requires each of its examiners, who examine all inventions before deciding to grant the patents, to be technical graduates, trained in scientific subjects. And the time is not far off when this same requirement will be made to apply to patent attorneys, for they are required to do not only everything the examiner must do, but many things also which are far more technical. At present, however, any young law student who has completed a course of study in general law and been admitted to the bar, can present his certificate and become registered to practice as a full-fledged patent attorney!)

If the inventor does not know of a really able attorney with a record for taking out good patents, he should try to locate some inventor who has made a monetary success from his patents, and find out whom he employed. Where, however, this is impossible, then engage some well-known attorney who represents or has represented, some large corporation—which would ordinarily be real proof of his ability—and who can be located in one of the large cities.

Repose Complete Trust

Another test in determining a good patent attorney, and perhaps the best of all, since it is one that almost never fails, is to check up some past work of the attorney before you engage him. This may be done by asking the one whom you may be considering hiring to loan you, say, eight or ten copies of patents, chosen at random, which he has prepared, as evidenced by his signature on their drawings. Then put these patents through the method of analysis explained later under the heading "How to Analyze the Real Protection in Your Patents." If the results show that the particular attorney's work is not considerably above the average, based upon this analysis, consult someone else, and repeat the test until you finally locate one whose work does measure up to these requirements.

Since your attorney's skill and knowledge of patenting is going to have much to do with your success with your inventions in future, you should leave nothing undone to get a very good one in the beginning; for having once found such a man, you will probably want to retain him on all such matters in the future, and this association will, as the years go by, become increasingly valuable, and you will learn more and more how to co-operate with him and he with you. It is by such co-ordination of effort between attorney and client that the successes come. Having once chosen your attorney, you should put your complete trust in him, and follow his advice, although there is no harm done in checking up his work from time to time to see that it is kept up to par.

If you follow this careful and painstaking method of choosing and retaining your attorney, you will be saved many of the most serious pitfalls which beset the inventor, such, for instance, as serious loss of your rights due to the attorney's inability to properly understand or claim your invention, necessitating additional expense of re-issuing the patent to correct it, and even, in many instances, inability to do so, after the time has expired; or, loss of a profitable sale or license through not having an attorney who is well regarded by the prospective purchaser.

New Inventions

THE records of the Patent Office in Washington are combed by Mr. Whitman for new inventions having an application to motion pictures and are both illustrated and described in THE SHOWMAN as a regular feature.

Mr. Whitman also conducts a Questions and Answers column which imposes no obligation on the reader. All queries on the subjects of patents, trademarks, designs and copyrights fall within the scope of this service. If a personal answer is desired, a stamped envelope should be enclosed with the question. If not, the answer will appear in this department the first available issue after receipt.

With the continuation in this month's issue of Motion Picture News of the patent department, there is continued the "Question and Answer" service, which already has been taken advantage of by a number of readers.

Those who have not as yet availed themselves of this service, which is free, are urged to do so if they are contemplating the perfection of an invention, or the application for a patent.

The history of many inventors and their projects serves to bring out the fact that many a dollar of precious capital and many a month of wasted labor could have been saved, had the inventor only taken the pains to obtain more information in regard to the device he was working upon, or in regard to the efforts which others might already have put forth upon the same or a similar device, or in regard to the market for the device after it was perfected.

So, if this department of Motion Picture News can be of assistance to you, the reader is invited to call upon it. If a personal answer is desired a stamp should be enclosed with the inquiry, otherwise the question and its answer will appear in this section in the first available issue. Write on one side of the paper only, giving full name, address, and business connection. Only initials will be published if requested.

Questions and Answers

Q. (1) When should a design patent be taken out and when should a mechanical or ordinary patent be taken out? In other words, what is the difference between these two kinds of patents?

A. (1) A design patent is directed to an invention in which the form of appearance of the invention is important from an aesthetic or ornamental view point whereas a mechanical or ordinary type of patent is directed to the function of the invention. Whenever possible take out a mechanical patent for it is less easily avoided without infringement and therefore gives much better protection, and better prevents competition. A design patent may often be avoided by more or less simple changes in the appearance of the design without affecting the value of the new appearance.

Q. (2) Will the Patent Office issue a patent on the same thing to more than one inventor?

A. (2) No. The Patent Office can only issue a patent to the first inventor, although it sometimes happens that later inventors also get patents on somewhat similar things which may be modifications of or improvements over something previously patented. It is necessary for a patentee before utilizing his invention to determine by an infringement search whether there are any such other patents previously issued on part of his invention and which he would have to use in order to also use his own invention; for in that case he might infringe the claims of such prior patents and be estopped from the use of his own patent as a result.

Q. (3) Is it possible for a poor man to make money out of a patent?

A. (3) It certainly is. Some of the greatest fortunes have been built up by men who were originally poor and who made valuable inventions and obtained strong patents on them. Large corporations fear to be drawn into infringement suits over patents and will do all they can to avoid infringing. Where, however, there is an infringement and the owner of the patent has no funds to sue the infringer, he can make an arrangement with the Patent Attorney to conduct the litigation on a contingent fee basis.

Q. (4) What countries grant the strongest patents?

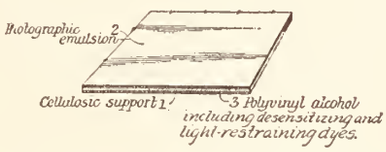
A. (4) The United States and Germany, since both these countries make rigid priority searches and the patents are therefore in a sense semi-adjudicated when issued. Canada, Great Britain, France and most of the other countries grant patents which are largely in the nature of registrations because the searches are not so thorough.



New Patents

1,760,156. MOTION-PICTURE PHOTOGRAPHY. Ned Herbert Mann, Los Angeles, Calif. Filed June 18, 1927. Serial No. 199,763. 3 Claims. (Cl. 88—16.)

1. The method of producing composite motion pictures which consists in reproducing a given scene upon a series of cards, then photographing a figure in real action upon a motion picture film, reproducing each frame of said motion picture film upon a card on a scale to match with said scene, cutting out said action figure, then placing said action figure in the correct position on said scene cards, and then protographing said cards consecutively upon individual frames of a motion picture film.

1,769,918. ELECTROOPTICAL TRANSMISSION SYSTEM. Frank Gray and John R. Hefele, New York, N. Y., assignors to Bell Telephone Laboratories, Incorporated, New York, N. Y., a corporation of New York. Filed Feb. 2, 1929. Serial No. 337,132. 19 Claims. (Cl. 178—6.)

1. The method of transmission which comprises generating and transmitting image current representing the tone values of elemental areas of a picture or object and extending over a wide band of frequencies and concurrently transmitting in part at least over the same medium, non-image current within said band.

1,769,940. MANUFACTURE OF LIGHT-SENSITIVE FILMS. Ulrich Diem-Bernet, Spiecher, Switzerland. Filed May 17, 1927, Serial No. 192,163, and in Switzerland and Germany May 21, 1926. 12 Claims. (Cl. 95—9.)

1. A process for producing light-sensitive negative and positive films having no coating, which consists in incorporating sensitizing agents in the film mass of viscose during the manufacture of the film material.

1,770,351. APPARATUS AND METHOD FOR USE IN THE TAKING OF MOTION PICTURES. Ciro Luigi Martino, New York, N. Y., assignor to himself, Joseph A. Walsh, Patrick Nardell and William L. Morris, New York, N. Y. Filed Apr. 18, 1927. Serial No. 184,565. 16 Claims. (Cl. 88—162.)

1. In a motion-picture camera, a lens for long-shot work, another lens for close-up work, both lenses being directed to the same scene, means for feeding a film in a path crossing the apertures of both lenses, means for taking pictures at a motionpicture rate through each of said lenses on to said film, and means for selectively and at will during the operation of the camera closing one lens aperture and opening the other.

1,770,659. CINEMATOGRAPHIC APPARATUS. Etienne Oehmichen, Valentigney, France. Filed June 20, 1927, Serial No. 200,253, and in France July 2, 1926. 3 Claims. (Cl. 88—18.)

1. In a cinematographic apparatus, the combination of a lens, means for guiding the film in front of the said lens and upon which is provided a flat surface along which the film moves, means for directing a stream of air upon the back face of the said film and for pressing the film against the said flat surface under the action of the stream of air, means for periodically interrupting the said stream of air and means for moving the said film separated in the interval between each stream of air.

Tells Independents How to Operate

I like to feel that the civic work on your part, this institutional advertising, is the one that pays you the finest dividends because if your personality is properly sold in the town the people will patronize not only your good but your mediocre programs, and will praise your contributing to your city each day in the year. When you get to that point you have made the progress that should be your aim and ambition.

Establishing goodwill is really establishing good relations with the masses, that is, the people who buy tickets at your box office. Politics is standing in well with the mayor, the politicians ,the legislators, and while the latter is valuable, the former is more valuable because it is the masses that form public opinion. In this respect permit me to emphasize the fact that every person who has a ticket to your theatre is entitled to the best service you can possibly render.

And the Independent?

In certain quarters there seems to be fear and trembling that the independent operator is doomed. Motion Picture News, July 6, states that Department of Commerce concludes after a thorough investigation that the little fellow in his own line of business is far from wrecked, and the official word is as follows: "In the last analysis the independent merchant will maintain his place in proportion to the efficiency with which he performs his function and renders real service to the community. The neighborhood grocer introduces those elements of attention and service which are much appreciated by the customer and which can not be so readily applied by a vast, impersonal corporation." This statement applies equally to the exhibitor, and the conclusion is sound, infallible and indisputable.

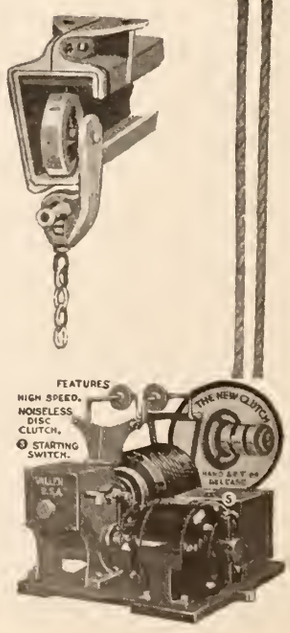
This must be, because there is no monopoly on showmanship ability, on civic value, on willingness to learn and genuine desire to work. And so I say to you: Go back to your home town, analyze yourself, take stock of your employes. Look at your theatre in a spirit of constructive criticism and find out why things are not just as they should be. The right sort of pep, enthusiasm, and study on your part will offset the obstacles such as poor location, strong opposition, bookings, etc. The problem is your problem, and you have got to solve it. Don't worry about what the other fellow does; worry a little bit about what you do. Some time ago, when Willie Hoppe was invincible as a billiard expert, someone asked what was the secret of his sensational success. The answer came back that while his opponents were playing Hoppe, Hoppe himself was playing billiards. I say to you, operate your theatre, render your service to your community, and don't try to play the other man's game.

In this fast growing business of ours we must be alert to realize the problems that confront us. Some time ago a Michigan banker gave a great talk, which he called "The New Competition." It applies so to every form of business with which I am familiar that I would like to pass the thoughts briefly to you. This man listed the new competition as:

First, The public's ever changing mind. This new form of competition may be hard for you to understand and harder still to master, but it's here to say, and we must be alert enough to meet these changing conditions. New ideas are our only salvation and are the only power that can prevent our yearly balance sheet from showing heavy losses.

Second: Scientific Research—This is merely developing efficient ways to do a good job, learning how to do the same thing better than it has ever been done, learning how to give more service for less money. It's another way of giving thought to your business. Get up some new ideas to bring more people to your theatre and you will increase the value of your location, and the volume of your business. The secret of your crowd drawing power is the secret of your success. Our business is no longer a competition with other theatres, but we are in competition with everything, with every business, as we strive to get our part of the consumer's dollar, so do a little thinking, do a little research on your own and you will be amply rewarded.

Third, Untruthful Advertising—This is merely tearing down all the good work you have done, by misrepresenting facts. The enthusiasm of a salesman is great, but remember there must be merit to the commodity you are selling. There may be added to these three forms of competition that of a man's own laziness, and mental inertia. So again I say, take stock of yourself.



Scientific Thought Requisite

The one big lesson to be learned from this banker's study is that scientific thinking has become the first essential of the successful business man. Money used to do all the talking, but now it whispers reverently in the presence of brains. Back of every successful business stands the romantic figure of some resourceful man who kept his hand on the present and his eye on the future. Never before in the history of the world have the prospects been so bright for men who think, for men who know.

The successful business man of today is living an adventurous life, grander and nobler than there's written in all the books of fiction and poetry and song. His daily work is proof to all the world that he, too, is toiling for his fellows—and in the same measure that he renders useful service, so the rewards of life come back to him. All of this touches the inspiring story that activity, brains and fighting courage coupled with an earnest desire to serve will round out a mere business man to a great benefactor of mankind, bringing comfort and peace and happiness to the people of the nation.

Curtain Carrying Equipment that Pays Dividends

Vallen, noiseless, all-steel, curtain carrying tracks are practically constructed to meet the exacting requirements of absolute safety and dependability for the theatre.

This all-steel safety track can be easily installed on any stage by inexperienced workmen and once installed requires absolutely no maintenance. Can be readily operated manually or with unusual ease and simplicity by an electric motor driven, push button operated Vallen Curtain Control Unit.

Vallen time-proved theatrical equipment provides a simple, practical method of adding distinction to the presentation of any entertainment and is a definite step toward ultimate economy and utmost value.

Write Vallen for practical information on the proper equipment for your theatre.

An Old Showman Dips Into Theatre History

By ULY S. HILL

ONLY the few remaining veterans of those early and colorful days of originality can appreciate the present day machinery era in press agentry and showmanship.

Going back 40 years, in the early part of 1890 to be exact, I began what later developed into a thrilling career in the show business. I ran away from home to join a troupe touring small Pennsylvania towns. Upon arriving at the current playing spot, I met the manager, who was also owner, star and featured player. It did not take long for him to decide that I would be a better advance man than an actor. Of course, my small bank roll probably influenced the deal, because the manager was in sore need of what little I had to get to the next town.

Out of this grew a world of experience that I would not lose for much larger sums. Those early days, too, were instrumental in a decision made later to stick by the show business—which I have done religiously for forty odd years.

In those days good fellowship was a necessary essential in the show business. Today, sorry to relate, that good fellowship is missing, and, as a result much of the color is taken out of a business that stood on its own and alone whether in success or failure. Today, in retrospection, we have only the happy memories.

Where Is the Old Showman?

Things, naturally, have changed materially. The old time showman has passed. Gone is that colorful character who every minute had his audience in mind and heart—always thinking, planning, originating, trying to steal a march on the other fellow in an effort to give the greatest show on earth; trying to discover the style of entertainment which the public looked for.

It was the fellow with originality in those days that made the money, for plagiarism was not tolerated. The manager who stole another man's gags or stuff was not very well thought of, and usually did not get very far in the theatrical world. This saved the public from looking at certain off-color plays from the pens of alleged "geniuses," and avoided a run of crook plays, or musical comedies with all the same theme, as is evident today in the making of pictures and plays. Smut was unnecessary in those days.

Some, in a critical analysis, will say times have changed. Very true, but that does not give one the license to run salacious plays or pictures even in this era. With so many more prolific writers it would seem that there would be sufficient originality to give us more changes in entertainment style without a superabundance of any one theme.

There is more talent in this world than ever before, but the trouble is that whoever is responsible does not give the fellow with an idea a chance, relying entirely upon the present make-up of his staff in so far as writing is concerned. This especially applies to scenarists in the picture business. In theatricals, you will find a more widely divergent type of authors. If a man has an idea to present, the powers on high, not because of courtesy alone, but because of possibilities, should give that man a hearing.

In the early part of this century, originality was the keynote of the show business. The usual cut and dried material was taboo. Advance agents, well stocked with ideas, left a few to be developed at each town visited.

At the Chicago World's Fair, one of the large concessions plugged one of the most sensational of dances ever introduced to this country. It received more newspaper space than anything that was put over at that show. It was not exploited as a vulgar dance which by crude copying it was turned into later on, but rather the dance of a nation which was typically native. This fact travelled far and wide by word-of-mouth advertising and was the making of that great fair.

This is just a brief illustration of what truthful advertising, without resorting to the sensational, will do. You may ask why the Sunday school type of advertising. Simple. The owner of that Chicago concession catered to men, women and children of all types and all ages. He could not afford jeopardizing their patronage, and therefore did not permit any copy of the dance to get out that might give the impression of the sensational. He protected his property, keeping it in a high class rather than tawdry and cheap.

What a lesson could be learned from this man in advertising pictures and theatrical entertainment. Now, every attraction is advertised as the "biggest," the "best" or the "dirtiest." They forget that the American people are slowly, but surely, becoming educated, particularly in the higher things of life, and some day there will be a terriffic reaction to all of this untruthfulness and smut. There is much room for the revision of press sheets. And producers should scrutinize, very carefully, the type of material they release.

The present-day unit is not built to withstand terriffic losses. When we organized a show company it was with the idea of "how little can I lose." And that eliminated the necessity of cutting when times were bad. Why not build organizations on that basis? It costs no more to operate when you are making money than it does when you lose, but when the profits come they come plenty stronger.

Microscope Economy

I was with an organization not so long ago that went through a reorganization process. Along came the contact man—wise, cold, cynical not by nature but by close home office training. I gave him the weekly payroll sheet, as that is the first trimming factor. Carefully scanning it, he discovered we had three or four cleaning women on the list at $12 per week. He chopped this $8 a week, thereby saving $400 per year. Next was the ushers' columns, and off comes another few dollars. They, by the way, had just received a $5 gold piece for Christmas and were getting less than the cleaners. With the ushers and cleaning women the slashing stopped. The contact man departed, thinking he did a great job. But, throughout the entire circuit, there is more money being wasted every week than was saved by the picayune slash made by that contact man. We will always get some good laughs by actions of these wiseacres who, in the final analysis, do not know the first thing about the show business.

AN OLD showman reminisces. Uly S. Hill dates his experience back forty years and his sphere activity in practically every known phase of show business from expositions to circuses, minstrel shows, amusement parks and theatre operation.

He was general manager of the Reis circuit for 14 years; managed houses for the Shuberts, F. F. Proctor and was divisional manager of the Mark Strand circuit in Albany and Troy. He is now in the real estate business in Albany, but retains his interest in the industry in which he has spent so many years.

Corporations often lose sight of that very truthful slogan borrowed from a national advertiser: "Contented managers give good service," meaning that a man who is sure of his job and knows he is a strong part of a great organization will work his head off. A lot of corporations do not operate that way. They believe that by making a manager believe he is nothing, and that unless he delivers to the home office the certain foolish quota given his town each week, he is through. It is all right to shoot at a given mark, but you must have something to shoot with. Meaning that the manager should have a voice as to the selection of pictures booked into his theatre. So long as he is selling the goods, he should at least be consulted as to the type of goods that sell best in his locality. It is just as foolish to attempt to sell ice to the Esquimaux as it is to ask a manager to make an impossible quota with an inferior picture handed to him by the home office booker.

Organization is the trick that does the work correctly. A little belief in your fellow man (whom you might be working for some day) likewise means a lot.

The management of a theatre is more than opening and closing theatre doors and seeing to it that patrons are comfortably seated. It is the duty of every manager to become a part of his community, to mingle, get acquainted. He represents a large real estate investment in his particular city and should be as influential as other property owners and business men. Put money in managers' salaries that are used on contact men who know nothing of show business and you'll see a change, pronto.

An Old Showman Goes Historical

Build your organization with an idea to hold your employees, for ushers, cashiers, porters and doormen play no small part in your business scheme. Ushers, if properly trained, will become acquainted with patrons and lend a cheerful word upon meeting. They all work long hours and everything possible should be done to keep them contented. Fair salary and kind words spread freely among the staff will see an improvement in business. It cannot fail.

I read with interest the cutting of prices by many theatres and chains and the addition of double features to their programs. All this is unnecessary. If the proper program is presented people will come to see your show at regular prices. There is no need of reducing prices. That only admits defeat. The public knows that you are not in the habit of giving anything away, so pay more attention to your programs. When you get your local manager in, instead of being seated high on the rostrum at meetings, come down, meet him, listen to what he has to say, and what he would like in his program, and you will be money ahead, far more than by taking up several hours bringing down dire calamity on his head (which, under his breath, he calls "bologney").

The business has come to a pretty pass when we have to give away "live babies" and weddings on the stage, all foolish exploitation done many years ago and long since outlived its usefulness. It is foolish to the extreme, yet men are paid big money to do this. Try to make the present generation of managers believe it is original.

Improving Houses

IMPROVING of a number of theatres of the Fox circuit is planned, with the work to be under direction of Larry Caballero, purchasing agent. Ventilating plants are to be installed in a number of houses and other improvements made.

Sees Show Styles Changing

The style of entertainment in some theatres is due for a drastic change or it will require a lot of new re-financing. I do not refer to the theatre with large orchestras and their own peculiar style of entertainment, for they will endure. The talking picture is no more a novelty, having passed that stage long ago, so there must be something to fill its place. Fewer but better pictures is one solution.

Large theatres cannot be conducted without orchestra music, for without them no entertainment can be presented properly.

I still maintain that with proper organization theatre chains, or sub-divisions of them can be brought out of the "red," but the organization must begin in the home office with serious-minded men at the head and men with vision who can see far enough to give the fellow out on the firing line a chance. Believe in him, forget personalities, give him good entertainment, truthful advertising and something new for the public —which they are ever seeking. If you cannot deliver the other fellow will. It cannot be done with the division manager and his representatives standing out in the hall with their hats in their hands waiting for the big fellow to see them.

HUB

Merely "Good Enough" Is Not Good Enough for Hub Products

The Hub Electric Company has always been in the forefront to advance the cause of quality. We have never believed that it was sufficient to make our products "good enough." We have always endeavored to make them better; to put in that extra measure of value; to maintain our standards always, and to raise them whenever possible. This policy has been a tremendous factor in making us leaders in our line.

The above paragraph is quoted from the foreword of the latest edition of the catalogue of Hub products and installations, and handbook of advanced motion picture theatre lighting. It tells in a few well chosen words the policies which have been instrumental in placing this organization in the forefront of the electrical lighting industry.

By the way, have you received a copy of this wonderful file-catalogue? It will be a pleasure to send you one for the asking.

able frequency currents while the television current is transmitted to the receiving station together with an actuating carrier wave that reproduces the variable frequency currents at the receiver where the image is reproduced.

Can Receive Any Broadcast

By a slight change in the construction of the receiving tube this tube can be made to receive any television image sent out by any television broadcasting station, even though the latter does not employ any variable frequency at all.

The telephonovision is applicable to any television transmission. It transmits the voice together with the image by using a part of each image line as a voice carrier. At the transmitting station the voice current is converted into light and applied, at the end of each image line, to the same photo-electric cell that transmits the image. At the receiver that image part at the end of each line that carries the voice current is again reverted to a voice current and the image and voice are reproduced through the same carrier channel.

floor is furnished with unstinted luxury, in comfortable chairs—many of them imported—lounges, reading lamps, artistic mirrors, draperies and tapestries with the frequent show of the statuary and busts and vases.

The women's cosmetic rooms adjoin the south wing of the central lounge room and the men's smoking and card rooms adjoin on the north wing of the central lounge. From the central lounge one is given a view of the lobby below by means of a little balcony. The women's rooms are done in gold and blue, adhering to the layer plaster effect of old Spanish stucco dwellings.

The men's rooms are equipped with the latest in comfortable divans and comfortable serviceable chairs, all upholstered in hand-woven Spanish blanket effect. The beams overhead are of the hand hewn walnut.

The entrance to the balcony can be made from the center of the lounge room to the first tier and the loges, or on either side to the first level or to the upper level from stairways on either side of the lounge. The stairs have the hand-wrought iron rails.

Spanish Auditorium

The auditorium is striking in its appearance. The first floor, done in two main sections with its seating capacity of 1,500, is equipped with the latest in theatre seats, upholstered in plush and leather with a comfortable, slightly reclining back. The seats are spaced and placed on enough of a slanting keel to afford a clear view of the stage and screen.

The auditorium represents a dazzling Spanish scene. The walls rise sheer to the dome-shaped ceiling, which is finished in a dark blue. Hundreds of little stars have been cut in the ceiling and equipped with lights which show a realistic sky effect. The designers have ornamented the walls in bright and bizarre tones representing a garden wall. Here and there are trellises of roses and vines with artificial flowers.

Inset niches have been equipped with balconies on either side. Pigeons and parrots are suspended in mid-air flight from the trellis. Niches are set with statues and busts in the wall representing the festival spirit of a fifteenth century Spanish celebration.

The sound equipment is of the latest Western Electric design and construction. An extra large projection room takes the whole width of the house and is located at the top of the third tier balcony which is equivalent to the sixth floor of the building. The building is equipped as a modern office building and all space has been let for months.

Every inch of the theatre is cooled by a refrigeration plant, with a gigantic cooling tower on the roof. Two boilers form the nucleus of a heating unit for operation during the winter months.

John M. Schoeppel, former assistant manager of the Missouri Theatre in St. Louis for three years, is the new manager of the Mid-West. N. H. Niemeyer comes to Oklahoma City as the divisional publicity man. He was formerly in charge of the Missouri Theatre exploitation in St. Louis. L. J. Hill, who becomes the district manager, was manager of the Ambassador in St. Louis for three years.

Spokane—Just 12 days after receipt of the order, the outdoor Claude Neon lighting system of the RKO Orpheum was completed by Electrical Products Corp., which claims this a record. The photo shows the effect obtained by the flashing arrangement, tubing and interchangeable letters. Four days were required to transport the seven-ton display from Seattle, with three freight cars used. Thus, the hanging of the sign and display was completed in six working days.

and furnishings, intended not to impress the patron with their gorgeousness, but to rest the tired eye and prepare it for the show. The lighting effects enhance the quiet beauty of the whole architectural and decorative scheme.

The lighting in the main auditorium is flooded from a gigantic chandelier set in the center of the ceiling, and by various subsidiary lights on the walls, allowing for control and the amount of light at will.

Rich red carpeting, covering the entire auditorium floor, and blue-green hangings, blend with the blue and gold of the color scheme. The panels on the walls are painted to represent silk damask.

The stage is 68 feet wide by 25 feet deep with the latest type switchboard, the latest type chromium reflector border lights and is large enough to accommodate stage presentations.

The latest type Wurlitzer organ with grilles in a Colonial balcony effect has been installed. Sound reproducing equipment has been installed by "Erpi."

Three New Types of PAM Speakers Are Offered

Canton, Mass.—Three new PAM amplifiers have been developed by the Samson Electric Co. These are PAM 39, PAM 29, and PAM 59.

PAM 39 is a two stage amplifier utilizing two 224-type screen grid tubes in the first stage and two 250-type tubes in the output stage. Two 281-type half-wave rectifier tubes are required. This amplifier has an average gain of over 60 DB over a range extending from 50 cycles to 10,000 cycles. The "gain" curve is a horizontal line between these limits, showing uniform characteristics. PAM 39 has a rated maximum undistorted output of 9.3 watts.

PAM 29 is also a two stage amplifier. However, it requires two 224-type tubes and four 250 tubes. This amplifier has a gain of 65.6 DB at 1,000 cycles, of 65.4 DB at 50 cycles and 61.6 DB at 10,000 cycles. It has a rated maximum undistorted output of 18.6 watts.

Both PAM 39 and PAM 29 are furnished without tubes, but with a six foot rubber-covered cable, attachment plug, switch, the exclusive Samson line voltage compensating plug, fuse, fuse cover, and instructions.

PAM 59 is the smallest amplifier of the new trio. It is a two-stage amplifier, using a 224-type tube in the first stage and a 250-type tube in the output stage. This amplifier has a gain of 53.5 DB at 1,000 cycles, of 44.1 DB at 50 cycles and of 44.7 DB at 10,000 cycles. It has a rated maximum undistorted output of 4.65 watts. PAM 59 is supplied without tubes, but with a six foot cable, attachment plug, fuse, fuse cover, and instructions.

floor to strictly commercial usage, and in combination with other amusements propose the building of a miniature golf club on the second floor, the balcony and the stage.

Anticipating that indoor golf might lose its popularity, these golf courses can easily be transformed into an "atmospheric" ballroom or restaurant. It is the multiplicity of usages which I propose for these buildings which in my estimation will give the owner who is willing to remodel, a better opportunity to succeed than the single occupancy with a single interest such as indoor golf.

We speak lightly of camouflaging rooms and creating "atmospheric" effects, but we should not—unless the illusion is perfect the effort becomes ridiculous and childish.

The vision of the architect, the skill of the scenic artist, and a knowledge of lighting effects are necessary to create perfect illusions through their combined efforts.

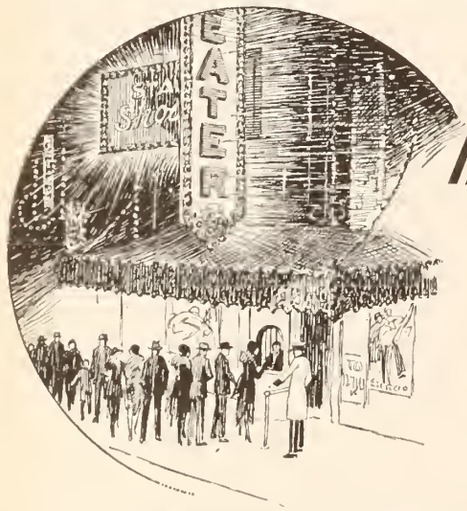
Sound business judgment and a thorough knowledge of engineering is required to opportune owners to arrange for this remodeling at economic and reasonable costs.

I believe that the real estate or commercial end of the building can be taken care of and leased before any expenditure occurs, and most of the amusement portions of this enterprise could be handled on a concession basis.

Attractive changes of the exterior of the old theatre, together with proper execution of an interesting interior will prompt attendance and give this group of merchants and amusement manager an opportunity to show their wares to best advantage.

Salvaging the old and adding the new. The new steel work at the RKO on Broadway, New York, is here shown being grafted to the old. This house is one of the major theatre reconstruction jobs of the nation.

The theatre owner, under this plan, would earn deserved praise from the community for having given thought, money and space to the small worthy merchant and by tendering his property for a miniature mart, he will serve the convenience and needs of the shopper. I believe that in larger cities and in dense shopping districts a playroom for children built in conjunction with the golf course would be a paying investment. Parents could leave their children in charge of dependable nurses, surrounded by tasteful and unusual playgrounds while they are shopping or attending the theatre.



A central miniature mart and arcade—the artistic treatment of such an arcade has unlimited possibilities—fountains, water, lights, rest rooms, period decorations, radio and recorded music.

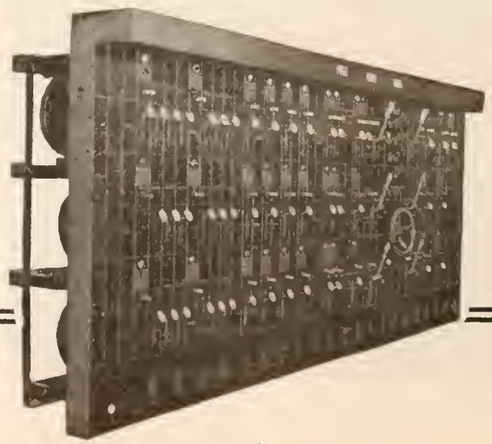
The entire scheme, well planned and thought out in detail, can be produced and created for a good deal less money than one would anticipate, but it takes a centralized thought and individual effort of the person dreaming such a dream and capable of judging local conditions, local requirements and local possibilities.

I believe that there are at least 20 medium sized cities scattered throughout the United States which are ready to absorb a scheme of this sort.

$100,000 New Equipment At Santa Barbara, Cal.

Santa Barbara, Cal.—Warners plan to spend at least $100,000 to improve the four local theatres the company recently took over. This program was outlined by M. A. Silver, general manager of the firm's California circuit. The Granada and California are to be redecorated, refurnished and recarpeted, while improvements are to be made at the Rose and Mission. The magnascope screen will be installed at the Granada. Improvements will be in keeping with Santa Barbara's Spanish architecture, according to Silver.

Light is an Attraction Inside the Theater also—



People can be thrilled with light as well as attracted by light. Hundreds of successful showmen realize this and are using the FA Major System for stage and auditorium lighting control because it pays profits at the box office.

You will do well to know about this flexible, practical, up-to-the-minute system; the pioneer; the leader. Send for details.

partly on account of the ease of distribution over the scattered areas frequently met with in Indian towns and partly because in many cases, such as the Punjab, there is a likelihood of alternating current supply in bulk becoming available later on from a large hydroelectric plant now under construction on the frontier. In several of the older public installations both alternating and direct current are available in the original supply areas at 450 and 225 volts direct current, and in the areas more recently developed at 400 and 230 volts on a 3-phase, 4-wire, 50-cycle alternating-current system.

When the alternating-current systems are completed it should lend a stimulus to the market for converters, but, as stated, there are, at the outside, only about 309 theatres in India. What share of this business American firms may obtain depends in large part upon their ability to compete with British and German equipment.

Arc Lamps and Screens.—High-intensity and mirror-reflector arc lamps are used in practically all of the theatres in the large cities, and their use is now becoming general throughout the country. They have been well received and are very popular, owing to the fact that they effect a saving of approximately 10 per cent in current.

Most screens are of the canvas type, which may be easily lifted and dropped. That type is employed because most of the theatres from time to time book traveling vaudeville shows. Pathé supplies the greater portion of the requirements.

Visual Education.—Visual education is not widespread in India, but there is a tendency to develop it. Its promotion lies within the scope of the Department of Education, Health and Lands of the Government of India. The department possesses an educational adviser styled "educational commissioner." Each province also has a department of education, which is directly under the supervision of a director of public instruction and an inspector of European schools.

Pathé has sold four or five projectors to the district board of the Hassan district in Mysore State to be used for educational purposes. It is understood that the question of visual education for the whole state is being given consideration by the Government of Mysore. Generally speaking, a good market exists for cameras and projectors, and it is thought advisable for American manufacturers who are interested to send catalogues and prices to the directors of public instruction in the several provinces.

Portable Projectors.—At the present time the introduction of amateur motion picture cameras and projectors into India is in its infancy, and so far interest therein has been very small. A canvass of dealers stocking this commodity, discloses a very enthusiastic attitude toward the development of a fair demand, and they are decidedly optimistic over the prospects of the product receiving a favorable reception within the near future when it has been given an opportunity to prove its merits. One dealer feels that the market is beginning to show signs of expansion. Undoubtedly, the future will bring a fair demand for products of this nature, but it is not believed that the extent of this demand will be as great and as important as dealers claim.

Sources of Present Supply.—American cameras and projectors predominate on the Indian market. They are considered to be of superior quality and to possess the most up-to-date adjustments, and they are preferred to any of the other makes having representation in India. French and German equipment is offered at very attractive prices, however, and this undoubtedly will affect the future market to a certain extent, but dealers stocking American products appear to be aware of the situation and are prepared to counteract any effect which these low prices have by strenuous salesmanship and advertising propaganda.

Prices.—There are several American projectors on the market which vary in price from 1,500 to 3,000 rupees ($550 to $1,100). The prices of other equipment are as follows:

Projector Exports Jump 75 Per Cent

By N. D. GOLDEN

Assistant Chief, Motion Picture Division, Department of Commerce

WASHINGTON — Preliminary export figures for the first six months of 1930 show that 1,218 standard size 35 mm. projectors valued at $313,116 were sold abroad as against 702 projectors with a value of $178,591 during the first six months of 1929. However, a decrease is noted in our projector exports of the 16 mm. type. During the first six months of this year 715 projectors of the portable or amateur type valued at $69,610 were exported as against 946 projectors of 16 millimeter type valued at $92,589 in 1929.

Exports of cameras for the first six months of 1930 also show a slight increase. During this period 430 cameras valued at $194,608 were exported as against 419 cameras valued at $142,847 for the first six months of 1929. Exports of the 16 mm. cameras have decreased almost 50 per cent for the first half of 1930. During this period 761 cameras of 16 mm. type, valued at $91,519 were exported as compared with 1,383 cameras valued at $136,176 during the same period of 1929.

Hydro Magnetic Pick-up Is Ready

Rochester, N. Y.—Declared to boast new features of suspension and design, to be freeze-proof, easy to adjust and not so delicate as to small chips of iron and steel, a new hydro magnetic pick-up for sound pictures is being marketed by Unit Reproducer Co. In addition, a phonograph and radio pick-up is being offered by the company. The three are the same save for the type of steel used in the pole pieces and the armature.

"This unit," the company says, "differs from other pick-ups only in pole piece and armature design, and suspension of armature in magnetic circuit. The new type of armature used has only one resonance period, where other armatures of leading pick-ups have several due to piece construction of armature, curves, and so-called press fits or silver, soldered together. This type of design creates about four resonance points, compared to our one. This is the main reason for our wonderful reproduction of canned music.

"We use two very small rubber bearings that do not amount to more than a piece of rubber ½ by ½ by 1/32 thick. This accounts for our brilliance in highs and over tones that make reproduction really colorful. We can take three of the most prominent pick-ups made today, completely dissemble them and mix up the parts, then assemble the parts not caring to use the original parts and all three will fit each other so that they will perform perfectly."

Scratching Eliminated In New Head, Is Claim

Smoothness in reproduction and elimination of scratching are features claimed for the Photo Lyte sound reproducer recently placed on the market by Photo Lyte Sound, Inc., of which W. D. Anderson is president. The smoothness of operation and elimination of scratching is due to absence of pressure plates, springs and gates, Anderson says. The equipment is easily attached, using no gears or shafts.

The unit uses the photolytic cell, a product of the Arcturus Radio Tube Co. The cell is declared to be shock-proof and non-microphonic, and to eliminate background noises, have low coupling impedance, uniform frequency response and resistance to overloads. No B battery excitation or adjustments are required, it is said.

Reynolds in the Field With New Flasher Line

Chicago—The Reynolds Electric Company has completed a new line of flashers equipped with mercury switches.

The "Reco" flashers include the "on and off" as well as the "speed" and "speller" types for spectacular effects and are designed for A.C. 110 or 220 volts, 25-30-40-50 and 60 cycles. The drive consists of a disc type motor, which has a speed range of 25 per cent slow or fast. The mercury tubes used on these flashers are made specially for Reynolds and, according to the company, are equipped for heavy duty work.

New Reproducer Features, Claim

A sound-on-film reproducer is being added to the Tone-O-Graph disc reproducer, under a license from the Full Tone Reproduction Co. The new equipment is said to embody revolutionary features of construction and design.

"This new development is an optical unit which conveys the image of the exciter lamp filament to the sound track in an optical trial" states Tone-O-Graph. "The general set up is no different than the present method in the form of the mechanical contrivance, but becomes purely an optical trail from the exciter lamp filament to the sound track.

"The natural position of this new optical unit is the exciter lamp filament, a pair of condensers, a microscopic cylindrical lens, and 14 MM projector. The total distance from exciting lamp filament to the sound track is approximately 4½-in. The overall dimensions of the optical tube is 3-in., leaving a space of about 11/16 of an inch between the projector lens and the sound track. This distance allows the projection lens to be cleaned of the oil film as often as the operator may desire.

"The technical specifications of this new optical unit gives a slit of light at the sound track of .0005, has no chromatic or spherical aberration. These dimensions above given compare with the standard unit of today of .0005 against .001."

This difference is said to give higher frequency, greater volume and more brilliant and truer tone of reproduction.

Uni-Directional Air Column Speaker Ready

St. Charles, Ill.—Employing the air column principle of reproduction, the unidirectional speaker has been developed by the Operadio Manufacturing Co., maker of theatre loud speakers. The new speaker, it is declared, has a frequency range of 50 to 6,000 cycles per second. The device is declared to be both a dynamic and air column speaker.

The new speaker is made in bowl type and electrodynamic air column speaker. The bowl type is designed for theatres which are approximately square in floor plan, the electrodynamic for long, narrow theatres.

In the former, it is stated, there is very little variation in the intensity of volume through an arc of approximately 160 degrees in front of the speaker. Accordingly, it is said, there are no dead spots along the outside aisle of the theatre nor in the wings of the balcony. The size of the speaker makes it possible to reach the back of the house without the volume in the front seats being objectionable.

In long, narrow theatres, the electrodynamic air column type is declared best suited inasmuch as the construction of the bell of the theatre does cause bad reflection from the side walls, according to the Operadio company.

The new Tone-O-Graph head is here mounted on a Powers machine. The motor is chain-driven and a bracket is furnished to attach to the holes already drilled in the front of the Powers projector. This is claimed to assure a quiet drive. Tone-O-Graph says the head can be installed in an hour or two on any standard Powers machine.

Combination Analyzer Tube Checker Offered

Franklin, Ohio—Combining an analyzer and tube checker in a single portable case, the Flewelling has been developed by the Van Horne Tube Co., local firm. It is for use on 60 cycle 110-115 volt AC circuits and also is furnished for use of 25 cycle 110-115 volt AC circuits and 60 cycle 220 volt AC circuits.

The device, it is said, will analyze all circuit conditions existing in any radio receiver or electrical apparatus within the limits of 800 volts AC or DC, and current up to 100 milliamperes. Special shunts for higher current scales are furnished to order.

The instrument contains a panel chart of tube ratings, permitting analysis of any receiver as well as an independent check on tubes.

New Dynamic Unit Line From Miles Reproducer

The Miles Reproducer Company of New York is ready to market a new line of dynamic units, horns and microphones for theatres and public address systems.

The products include the "Milesphone," described as a new sound system which will permit organists to sing while they play. This unit is composed of a special microphone, amplifier and two Miles speakers.

Reynolds Bakelite Line Goes to Cutler-Hammer

Milwaukee—The Reynolite line of bakelite electric products of the Reynolds Spring Co., Jackson, Mich., has been taken over by the Cutler-Hammer Co., of this city. At present the Cutler-Hammer Co. is using the Jackson plant for the Reynolite line, but may bring it to Milwaukee. It is still undecided whether the Reynolite trade name will be continued.

New Panelboard Made by Adam

St. Louis—Frank Adam Electric Co. has placed on the market the new FA Leader Type LNTP panelboard made up of one piece unit type molded sections of natural brown bakelite with stippled finish face mounted on one piece galvanized steel mounting backs.

All parts are either molded into the section or secured by rivets molded into the section, no screws being used. This is said to prevent any parts from working loose.

Each section contains four FA 30 ampere single pole heavy duty quick make and quick break tumbler switches with Edison plug fuse connections for four single fuse branch circuits. The tumbler switches are made with a minimum number of ruggedly designed parts. The mechanism is such that the operation from one position to the other cannot be retarded, the company says. A mechanical "kick-off" feature permits the operation of the switch from the "on" position to the "off" position independent of the operating spring.

Switch blades are of the laminated type, made of phosphor spring bronze, and are provided with canvas bakelite arc snuffers. Each switch has a molded bakelite handle and small number plate with embossed numerals.

Branch circuit copper parts are of 30 ampere capacity, made of 98 per cent pure hard drawn copper. Main bus bars are mounted on edge on bakelite supports and contact from the main bus to the branch circuit contacts is made with a clamp type contact member.

Each branch circuit plug fuse connection is provided with the FA clamp type wire terminal connector, which is designed so that the wire can be attached with a minimum amount of labor.

The panelboards are available with main cable lugs only, FA Switchfus main and FA Fuslok main switch.

Boxes are of code thickness galvanized steel, 19 in. wide by 4½ in. deep inside measurement. Four inch wiring gutters are provided all around panelboard.

Steel fronts are made from a single piece of code thickness sheet steel with black lacquer finish. They are either of one-door type or door-in-door type as required.

New type of switchboard manufactured by Frank Adam Electric Co.

capacity of one condenser divided by the number in the system or

$$C_t = \frac{C}{n}$$

Voltage Across Condensers in Series—To determine the value of voltage across each of the condensers in the series we must first determine the final capacity and solve for the total charge. As a matter of fact, the relation between the charge and the capacity previously stated shows that the voltage varies inversely with the capacity, that the voltage is alike only when the condensers in the series system have like values of capacity. Suppose we solve for the voltage across the two condensers C1 and C2 in Figure 52. The applied voltage E is 100 volts. Since the final capacity is .00833 mfd, the charge Q being equal to CE is

$$= .000000833 \text{ coulomb}$$

The voltage across a condenser is Q/C, hence

$$e_1 = \frac{.000000833}{.00000001}$$
$$= 83.3 \text{ volts}$$

and

$$e_2 = \frac{.000000833}{.00000005}$$
$$= 16.66 \text{ volts}$$

The uneven distribution of voltage is apparent in the above mentioned calculation, but it presents the condition that if either condenser is designed to operate at 50 volts, series arrangement makes possible the use of such condensers at higher than the rated values of operating voltage. Naturally the aforementioned example is not of this character, but an even distribution of capacity, that is .01 mfd or .05 mfd for both condensers, would result in the application of 50 volts across each capacity. As a matter of fact series connection of condensers serves just that purpose, that is, when the reduction of capacity due to the form of connection is allowed by the circuit requirements.

At this time it is necessary to mention a very significant fact in connection with capacities. The foregoing calculations show distribution of voltage according to capacity. Another factor to be considered in actual practice is the leakage resistance or the dielectric resistance of the condenser. While it is true that the leakage resistance of the average condenser runs very high from 100 million ohms to several 1000 million ohms, the use of a series system of capacities does not change the voltage drop and current flow relations in normal series circuits. Since these capacities possess definite values of D.C. resistance as quoted, they are the equivalent of resistances when the voltage drop is to be computed. Since the current is the same in all parts of a series circuit, any variation in the D.C. leakage resistance of two condensers in a series system will cause a marked difference in the voltage drop across that resistance.

Suppose that we consider the two condensers mentioned in the previous illustration and say that one has a D.C. resistance of 400 million ohms and the other C2, has a resistance of 100 million ohms. The normal circuit is shown in Figure 53A and the equivalent resistances are shown in Figure 53B. As is evident the two resistances R1 and R2 are in series across the source of potential. The total resistance is

$$R_t = 100{,}000{,}000 + 400{,}000{,}000$$
$$= 500{,}000{,}000 \text{ ohms}$$

and according to Ohm's Law

$$I = \frac{100}{500{,}000{,}000}$$
$$= .0000002 \text{ ampere or } .2 \text{ microampere}$$

Then IR1 which is the voltage across R1 or the capacity C1 will be

$$IR_1 = .0000002 \times 400{,}000{,}000$$
$$= 80 \text{ volts}$$

and

$$IR_2 = .0000002 \times 100{,}000{,}000$$
$$= 20 \text{ volts}$$

Thus, the variation in leakage resistance, or the resistance (D.C.) of the dielectric, likewise governs the voltage applied across each condenser, and the advantage of using condensers of similar resistance becomes self evident. Thus the requirement for best operation with series combinations of capacities calls for like values of capacity and like values of internal D.C. resistance.

Such, however, is not always available. In many instances the required capacity is not that available from two like condensers at hand or two condensers with like values of internal D.C. resistance are not available. Satisfactory results may be secured by arranging for uniform voltage distribution by an external means. This is the use of a resistance in shunt with each capacity as shown in Figure 54. The values of these resistance should be such as to govern the value of current flow and voltage drop across C1 and C2 yet not interfere with the charging action of the capacities. That is, the leakage current through the external resistances R and R1 should be very small in comparison with the current in the remainder of the circuit. Such an arrangement is possible without the slightest trouble, because of the high internal D.C. resistance of the condensers. Shunt resistances of say 100,000 ohms each are very low in comparison with the internal resistance of the condensers yet sufficiently high not to interfere with the operation of the series condensers.

Equivalent Circuits—Recognizing that a parallel combination of capacities has a resultant value it is easy to understand that a parallel combination may be replaced with a single condenser or equivalent capacity capable of withstanding the potential applied. The same is true of series combinations, except that in this case, it is necessary to select a condenser which will withstand the voltage present in the system and is rated higher than the individual condensers in the series combination. We make this statement on the assumption that the series combination is used in order to provide the required capacity and to enable operation upon some value of potential in excess of the voltage rating of the condenser.

The need for parallel or series combinations does not occur in every day practice, but the knowledge is valuable when the occasion does arise or when such a combination is found in some system. As a point of information certain condensers used in B eliminators, although bearing a unit value for capacity designation, consist of a number of smaller condensers connected in parallel.

Classifications of Condensers—Condensers used in sound systems are usually designated according to their utility. This seems peculiar considering the similarity between all condensers irrespective of construction. For example, a condenser used in the B eliminator may be referred to as a filter condenser and when used in some other part of a system may be known as a bypass condenser. The significance of the various classifications will become evident later in the text. At the present time a condenser is a condenser.

water cooling unit. From both sides, stairways lead to the balcony.

The auditorium carries out the Spanish treatment of the exterior and lobby. The entire ceiling and sidewalls are covered with acoustical plaster, which is said to have a high absorption value. The lighting is concealed at the sides in and about the proscenium arch, in manner which does not reveal the rough exterior of the plaster.

Lights to represent stars have been placed in the ceiling, which gives a sky effect. A moon projector is concealed on one side of the house and on the other side a cloud projector is installed to throw the effects of moving clouds across the ceiling sky.

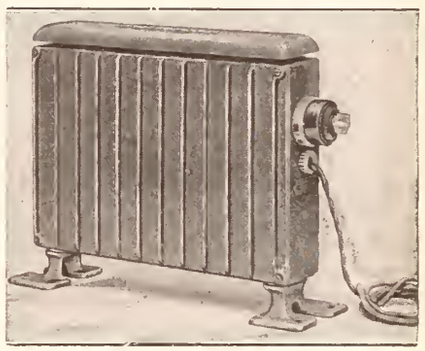
The organ is placed on both sides of the house, the wells being placed in the rear of the window openings of the false buildings on either side of the proscenium arch. The idea has been to build up the ornamentation from the lower floor toward the proscenium arch, focusing the attention of the audience on that part of the auditorium.

Balcony Seats Made Desirable

A small mezzanine lounge is provided with rest rooms, opening in from a central lounge directly over the lobby and manager's office. The main crossover aisle from the balcony leads directly to this mezzanine lounge and is on the same level, which makes the balcony seats desirable.

The lobby is simply treated, carrying out the special feeling of the Spanish Colonial exterior, color scheme of which is primarily white with the cast stone work stained a brown shade. There are poster frames on both sides of the lobby. Walls and ceiling are of texture plaster. The lobby floor is of cement and is marked off in a design with impressions made from a tile pattern in the intersection of the joining lines. This gives a better effect than if plain markings were used. The floor is acid stained in colors to harmonize with the lobby decorations.

Add Modernistic Stage For Presentation Units



Toronto—The Imperial closed Wednesday to install a modernistic stage and lighting effects as a setting for the first stage unit under Jack Arthur, director of presentation of Famous Players Canadian Corp. New admission prices scale up to 65 cents with a top price of 75 cents for Saturdays and holidays. The new policy got under way Friday with Tom Daley, formerly of the Toronto Tivoli, as the new house manager.

With this change, the Uptown, former key theatre of the Famous Players chain in Canada, went into a policy of two shows weekly and admission prices were reduced from 65 to 50 cents. Robert Knevels, formerly of Hamilton, is now manager.

$75.00 SAVES $1000.00

IF not protected against the cold, it costs around $1,000.00 more to keep the average organ in tune for five years than when the temperature of the organ loft is maintained at about 68° F. Why waste that money when a $75.00 Prometheus Electric Heater would save it.

Another disadvantage of permitting the organ pipes to become cold is that it affects the tune—makes it impossible to bring out the exquisite tone quality and reflects on the skill of the organist.

PROMETHEUS

Organ Loft Heater

keeps your organ loft at the desired temperature by means of a thermostat which automatically shuts off when the desired temperature is reached. That saves current and prevents overheating.

The Auditorium of the Publix Marbro Theater, Chicago, Illinois, where C-H Simplicity Dimmers are installed.

28 Spent behind That your Public

FOR twenty-eight years Cutler-Hammer has been working behind theater switchboards—building better theater dimmers that better shows may be produced.

Smooth, even changes of light play an important part in keeping every show well knit together. And no theater can have smooth lighting control unless the heart of the switchboard—the dimmer plate—is properly constructed. So for a quarter of a century, Cutler-Hammer has been building dimmer plates with this idea uppermost in mind—"flickerless" light control.

Better dimmer plate construction to lessen the danger of burnouts—direct rack and pinion drive to prevent play or backlash—110 steps to insure velvet smooth changes of light from full brilliance to blackout. These are a few of the features of C-H "Simplicity" Dimmer construction which make them the choice of leading showmen. These showmen look beyond the panel board for the C-H trade-mark on the dimmer plates.

C-H Simplicity Dimmer Plates are supplied by leading switchboard manufacturers with the board they install. Fig. 1 shows the front of a typical board, Fig. 2 the rear view showing C-H plates and Fig. 3 the complete plate. Dimmer plates are the heart of any lighting control board. Make sure the C-H trade-mark is on your plates for long life, smooth lighting control and low maintenance.

Years a Switchboard May be Pleased

Your theater—whatever its seating capacity or decorative scheme—can have smooth, even light control by installing C-H Dimmers. They are easily adapted to your future needs. Your architect or electrician knows about C-H Dimmers. Ask him and then write for the Cutler-Hammer booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

D. W. GRIFFITH in an interview paid a high tribute to Una Merkel and Walter Huston, the leads in "Abraham Lincoln." Said he: "I did not direct them. Where, oh where, is that ad code we heard so much about? The plaintive query is induced by a glance at the amusement ad pages in New York newspapers this week. The "Monte Carlo" ad read, "As thrilling as French lingerie; as intimate as a boudoir," and "What a grand old sinner he was" heralded George Arliss in "Old English." And we're told that "New York goes nuts" about "Animal Crackers." A subtle touch of modesty is revealed in the "Abraham Lincoln" copy, which stated that the film "stirs Broadway to thunderous cheers" and that "critics acclaim masterpiece of screen entertainment." Blame us for dropping the exclamation marks!!!

"Leathernecking"

The old formula, but with some new gags makes "Leathernecking" (RKO) a pretty good picture in the musical comedy formula, according to Edwin Schallert, special editorial correspondent for Motion Picture News, who reviews this December release on page 94, this issue.

L'Enigmatique Monsieur Parkes

(The Mysterious Mr. Parkes)
(Paramount)

Misses, in the Main

A French version of "Slightly Scarlet" produced in Hollywood by Paramount, "L'Enigmatique Monsieur Parkes," is reviewed by Jose Schorr for Motion Picture News. His comment, in French, appears in the news section of this edition, on page 23.

THE French talk too much. This forcign language picture is a crook melodrama packed with about as much action as an afternoon tea. The dialogue tells a story of cruel jewel thieves, deep love and intrigue.

Adolphe Menjou is still the incomparable actor, of course, and any picture he is in is worth seeing. The story opens with him as an Englishman in Paris, flirting with Claudette Colbert, who is no mean lady herself in the house across the way. Before he can make any headway, however, Claudette is summoned by Malatroff, the master mind of the jewel thieves, and ordered to steal a necklace from a newly-rich Chicago family at Nice.

Claudette does not want to do it, but Malatroff cows her with a dirty look and there follows the usual scene of the helpless girl in the clutches of the master mind with talk of the laws of the gang and the dreadful penalties for disobedience which, although not at all convincing, make the girl change her mind.

Claudette poses as a countess who had had motor trouble and the Chicago family which has been aching to meet aristocracy naturally opens its home and heart to her. It is shocking to see the kind of men who are making millions in hard-boiled Chicago these days. Sylvester Corbett looks more like a French innkeeper than an American, especially when he gets around to waving his arms like a loose windmill, which happens every time he opens his mouth.

Menjou, who, it turns out, rented the villa next door, comes in to complete the happy group by the nice trick of returning Mrs. Corbett's lost Pekinese which he stole for the purpose. They both agree to come for dinner, the next night.

At the dinner Claudette is asked to try on the necklace and while she goes into the hall to view herself in the mirror, guns begin to pop in the garden by a prearranged signal. The Chicagoans, instead of becoming sentimentally homesick, are scared out of the room and Claudette gets her chance to substitute an imitation for the real necklace. The catch on the necklace is stuck, however, and before she can open it it is too late.

The next evening Claudette, deciding against pretty tricks, goes straight to the safe and steals the necklace. Menjou, whom she suspects of being a detective, but who really is a crook himself, enters the room at this point, not knowing that she is there. In this promising situation the two act with a technique bungling enough to make the kindergarten class of the reform school sick with disgust. They finally meet, of course, and after a long talk love wins out and they decide to go straight and return the necklace.

Waking up before it is too late, however, the story is livened by the entrance of Malatroff and his gun. Menjou overturns a chair on his legs and there follows a short scuffle during which the actors shut up and act, Malatroff, of course, being shot at the end.

There is one other scene where genuine emotion is really acted. That is where the American girl's fiance (the Chicago family has a daughter) jealously waits for her to return from a walk in the garden with Menjou, but they go and spoil it by making the boy walk over and question Menjou as to the honor of his intentions. How much more American it would have been for him to say instead, "Keep away from my girl you, or I'll sock you one."

The recording and the photography are very good and if only the cast had tempered its French animation with some real acting the whole picture might have been more amusing, convincing and thrilling. The story was weak.

Leathernecking

(RKO)

Pretty Good, But Musical

(Reviewed by Edwin Schallert)

SOLDIER comedy No. 99,999 here comes to the front. But even if the number is already legion the latest one always manages to garner a new outbreak of laughs. "Leathernecking" is proof of it. The audience that saw the picture at the preview which this reviewer attended, ha-ha-ed as if a buck private peeling onions, and crying his eyes out the while, was the funniest sight in the world.

There are new gags and all the good old ones, too, in "Leathernecking." It is the kind of picture that might be described as sure-fire for an audience that wants its hilarity in the broad and rough and if it will go for musicals.

Anyway, the locale is different. The plot is laid in Hawaii and on a desert island that is more or less imaginery. It is imaginary enough to give cause to bring on the chorus, much plumed, in a color sequence, and enable members thereof to "Ohio" the men in uniforms—in other words, "Oo-hooh" them for a date. Benny Rubin and Ned Sparks return the greetings, so nothing could be better.

"Leathernecking" has to do mostly with the fortunes of one Chick, played by Eddie Foy, Jr., hero of Nicaragua and way places, but not yet rewarded with a commission. His symbol of trouble is an antagonistic captain, and his main mistake is when he masquerades as an officer at a week-end party given by the heroine. His own buddies expose him, to the consternation of the guests, and he is immediately headed for the hoosgow, but not before the whole party goes on a jaunt through the South Seas.

One doesn't look for any heavy stressing of the probabilities in this sort of story. The plot is fashioned according to the musical comedy idea, and there are a few musical numbers scattered through, which are rather well done. The picture is unquestionably entertaining in its comedy, and while Rubin and Sparks are the stars of the buffoonery, the show isn't all one-sided. Foy, Jr., and Irene Dunne contribute to the humor, as well as the love interest. Also Louise Fazenda and Lilyan Tashman—the film's strongest names.

Scenic or cartoon shorts best with this.

College Lovers

(First National)

Pleasing Programmer

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

THIS picture is perhaps one of the most inexpensive First National has turned out in some time, but regardless of that fact it is fine little program attraction.

With a good cast, it shows college life in a manner that is not too absurd. A simple story and a football game that has a clever ending, plus lots of comedy, make this talker okay for small town houses and neighborhood theatres. Will prove sufficient for average seven-day stands and the split week spots.

The story deals with Quinn Williams and Russell Hopton who are the mainstays of the college football team. Williams is in love with Phyllis Crane. As he is about to propose to her, she runs off with another fellow.

Williams plans to leave school and give up football, when Jack Whiting, manager of the team, arranges a meeting between Williams and Marian Nixon, who is a freshman. Will falls head over heels in love with Marian and decides to remain in school. Hopton also meets Marian and falls for her and when he and Marian are found by Williams in a cafe the two boys wreck the joint in a free-for-all fight.

Peace between the two is restored when Whiting persuades Marian to write the boys a note, telling each one she cares for him alone and that she wants him to play his best in the big game the next day. The boys fall for the trick and play excellent football, the first half ending with their team 20 points in the lead.

However, between halves Hopton finds that Williams also received a note from Marian and the feud is again started, with the result that the coach bars both men from the remainder of the game.

The team without the services of its star players is overwhelmed and the score is tied. Whiting, seeing the turn of events, proposes to Marian; is accepted; and then the couple go and tell the boys. The gridmen seeing what fools they have been make up and are put back into the game. Here they carry the ball to the goal line with only a few moments left to play. Williams wants Hopton to carry the ball over and win the game, while Hopton says the honor of winning should go to Williams. While they are debating as to who should carry the ball over, the gun goes off and the game ends in a tie. After the game Whiting again proposes to Marian, this time seriously and all ends well.

Frank McHugh and Charles Judels supply fine bits of comedy in addition to Williams and Hopton who are very good in their roles. Whiting and Miss Nixon are well cast and most acceptable. The cast also includes Wade Boteler, Richard Tucker and Phyllis Crane who are capable.

The picture is well handled from a directorial standpoint by John Adolfi. A great portion of the talker is taken up with stock shots of big time football games, but these have been carefully selected and fit in.

Melodie des Herzens

(Melody of the Heart)

(Ufa)

Beautifully Done

"Melodie des Herzens" is Ufa's first talker to reach American theatres. The German version, commented upon in German on page 21 of this edition, is reviewed here by R. C. Uebel. The English version of this German talker, reviewed by a staff member of Motion Picture News, appears following the German version.

THIS German-dialogue film might well be classed as a semi-travelogue, so dependent is it upon its beautiful settings. As such, it is beautifully done. The scenes depicting the life of the Hungarian peasantry and soldiery are true to life, and the beautiful blue Danube, of which we hear so much in song and story, leaves nothing to be desired in realistic charm and beauty.

The dialogue is fine and will delight the heart of any German, although a knowledge of German is not essential to an understanding of the story. The acting throughout is very good. Willy Fritsch deserves credit for his portrayal of the lovelorn Austrian soldier and for his singing. Dita Parlo is very sweet and charming as the heroine. The photography is superb. It perhaps is not too much to say that Fritsch compares favorably with John Gilbert.

The music throughout is somewhat jarring from the American standpoint, although that does not detract from its appeal, as it is authentic. It must be remembered that Hungarian wine and the Priszta, inspired by passionate gypsy music, produces hilarity of the noisiest sort.

The story is of a peasant girl and her soldier sweetheart. When she loses her job, her landlady sends her to a notorious cafe. Ignorant of the place's reputation, the girl keeps a weekly tryst with her sweetheart. When, against his will, the soldier is induced to go to the place with some comrades, he believes the worst, and returns to the Hungarian plains, where he agrees to marry a girl his ambitious parents have selected for him, but finally he is reunited with the girl he loves and the happy clinch follows.

Melody of the Heart

(Melodie des Herzens)

(Ufa—All Talker)

Has B. O. Value

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

HOLLYWOOD boasts of but few directorial giants who are capable of reaching the emotional extremes touched by that master producer-director, Erich Pommer, in pictorially sketching the love of a pretty peasant girl and her soldier sweetheart along such beautiful and touching lines. He frequently reaches heart-stirring depths, while in other instances sends the emotions soaring to delightful heights.

Several climatic sequences needed treatment of the most delicate nature. A slight slip would have broken to bits the beautiful trend and meant offense. Pommer's subtle twists, however, brought to these parts a sincere appeal so strong and natural as to make them most human and unoffensive.

"Melody of the Heart" is the first English version of a German-made Ufa talker. By far, it surpasses anything emanating from Ufa's studios in many months from the standpoint of entertainment. No doubt, the inclusion of English dialogue has much to do with the high rating it deserves as compared with other German talkers.

The story, that of sincere and simple living peasants near Budapest, has that trait of authenticity as to characters and locale which can only be found in a foreign-made vehicle. The dialogue, while in English, has slight German or Hungarian accents which delightfully enhance values and completely round out the colorful scheme and background of this impressive story.

Despite the monotony developed during one or two long and noisy sequences, particularly those of the carnival grounds, the story moves with charm and at a pace in keeping with those certain unique traits which are a peculiarity of German cinematography. While these elaborations are not always vital to the yarn, they are instrumental in raising many German-made pictures to a high plane of production standards.

Photography is excellent, especially long shots overlooking the Danube. Sound is above average and the cast, led by Dita Parlo and Willy Fritsch, highly commendable. Miss Parlo and Fritsch give splendid performances, ably supported by a half dozen other foreign players who are unknown in this country.

The box office value of this one is unquestionable where higher type audiences are concerned. The "arty" groups are not referred to, but they, too, will find delight in the intelligent and sincere handling of a convincing story. Naturally, Hungarian and German localities will give stronger support than others. However, by ballyhooing the fact that this picture was made by the same producers of "Last Laugh," "Caligari," "Passion," "Variety" and "Metropolis," considerable interest should be aroused. Once they're inside, you have nothing for which to apologize.

If your house is of the second string neighborhood variety, we suggest that you give this one a look so as to judge for yourself whether or not your audience will appreciate it.

Light comedy relief needed with this drama.

Alma De Gaucho

(Soul of the Gaucho)

Good Program Offering

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

A Spanish talker, reviewed and commented upon on page 24 in this edition in the language in which it was recorded, by a staff member of Motion Picture News.

A PICTURESQUE story of the Argentine, presenting some of the gaucho songs, the gauchos in their bizarre costumes furnishing a colorful background for the story. It is comparatively light material, but it is told with directness and charm, to an extent that a knowledge of Spanish is not essential to follow the picture's story.

The director restrains the use of dialogue, content to let the action tell the story, and this speeds it up considerably. It is a tale of a gaucho's love for a rich flirt. He presses his suit ardently, but is checked with a thud when he overhears the girl telling her family that she is only trifling with him. Later he abducts her in order that he may tell her how hurt he really is and it doesn't take any knowledge of Spanish to catch the heat of his angry words. Then he sends her home and the girl becomes ill from the experience. He is about to leave the country, when he passes her house and hears her calling his name. He rushes to her arms.

No attempt is here made to pass upon the authenticity of the Spanish dialogue, or whether it contains accent foreign to the Argentine. The principals are all Latin-Americans. Manuel Granada is a fine hero. He is known in M-G-M roles as Paul Ellis. The girl, Mona Rica, is pretty and capable. She appeared in "Eternal Love." Christina Montt is the other member of the cast whose work stands out. The music is good. The director, Henry Otto, formerly was with Fox.

Spurs

(Universal)

Okay

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

HOOT GIBSON'S offerings have been improving steadily and "Spurs" got a big hand from a New York audience that included few children. It demonstrates that westerns can be made with logic and humor and without resorting to continuous gunplay and convulsive "action." There is considerable hard riding in it, but for the most part it is human and natural and displays intelligence in all departments.

Philo McCullough is the only jarring note in it. He is cast as one of the villains, but he portrays his role with such obvious attempts to act furtively that the audience spots him at once, even though the ranch owner and his daughter considered him to be on the level. Hoot clicks, as usual, and garners a number of laughs without having to strive for them. Helen Wright enacts the leading feminine role with adequate zest and has more looks than the ordinary western heroine.

The story centers about the efforts of Hoot to find Indian Joe, suspected of the murder of the father of 12-year-old Buddy Hazlet. Indian Joe is a member of the notorious Pecos gang. After the customary clashes and frustrations, Hoot gets his man and wipes out most of the band with a machine gun which he turns on them from their own hangout. Which is something new in westerns.

The scenic backgrounds are worthy of special commendation. They are exceptionally beautiful and add to the picture's appeal. Hoot Gibson fans will go strong for "Spurs."

Add musical shorts of the jazzy type for balance.

Eternal Fools

(Judea Films)

Not Too Good

This is the first all-Yiddish talker produced by Judea Films and is reviewed by Herman Ehrenreich, dramatic critic of the "Jewish Daily Forward" for Motion Picture News. His comment in Yiddish appears on page 19 in this edition.

"ETERNAL FOOLS" ("Ewige Naranim") is a film version of the play by H. Kalmonowitz which was produced a few years ago in one of the Yiddish theatres in New York.

It would be unfair to compare this first talker produced by Judea Films with the same standard of the production of Hollywood. Even a child can see that the means at the disposal of Judea were limited, so limited, that you will wonder how the company was able to achieve as much as was accomplished.

However, this is a poor consolation for the spectator who goes to picture theatres. It is indeed true that, from the technical point of view, the talker could not have been made better in view of the lack of available means. But it would not have been too difficult a task for Sidney Golden, the director, to have prepared a better scenario from the play.

The "Naranim," as produced on the stage, was an interesting and powerful picture of life. The play described an actual problem which exists in many of the homes of immigrant Jews. In the talker, however, the story has been so distorted and such violence has been done to it that it is very difficult for one who has not seen it on the stage to understand it.

Because of the fact that many important scenes were cut out, many sequences in the talker appear almost ludicrous and ridiculous. For example, the occasion when the father is almost on the point of dying from a disease of the foot and his oldest daughter practically ignores him because she has a date with her boy friend.

It would be a tragic jest if one who is not acquainted with the life of Jewish immigrants were to become familiar with Yiddish life by way of the talkers made by Judea. Jews would probably appear as half-civilized, half wild creatures with uncivilized morals.

In general, it would have been much sounder and more healthful, both for Judea and for the future of Yiddish talkers had they shaken off altogether the old customs and mannerisms of the old Yiddish theatre. Talkers are not the theatre, but a separate art. And if one must have regard for the Yiddish theatre and must direct his attention thereto, it is much better to take as an example the better theatre of Moritz Schwartz, Molly Picon and the other young artists of the present day theatre.

The producer is marketing this feature as a road show unit in conjunction with these shorts: "Jewish Melody," "Oy Doctor," "Natascha" and "An Evening in a Jewish Camp." The combination looks interesting for a Jewish audience, of course.

Produced and distributed by Judea Films. Directed by Sidney M. Golden. Story by H. Kalmonowitz. Adaptation and dialogue the same. Edited by Louis Schwartz. Photographed by Charles Levine and Sam Rosen. Length, 6120 feet. Running time, 68 mins. Release date, Sept. 23 (Jewish holidays).

What Men Want

(Universal)

Okay for Neighborhoods

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

"WHAT Men Want" might be readily classified in that type of picture which borders neither on the spectacular or mediocre in entertainment. It reaches a happy go-between, a fact which lends itself nicely to the box-office needs of those neighborhood theatre owners who cry aloud for hokum-filled yarns of life-and-love in the raw.

While this talker has to do with the supposed class of idle rich and their wild-and-woolly whoopee parties, kept women and fast stepping, a delightfully light and refreshing touch of direction on the part of Ernst Laemmle makes it immune to squawks even from the most straight-laced custodian of public morals. Laemmle's production twists prevent you from facing the facts too seriously, and, therefore, the possibility of offense is eliminated. Picturegoers who frequent downtown first-runs, however, will accept it as entertainment of little or no importance.

The story is not over-impressive and its unraveling is slowed down to a tempo conveniently allowing for the display of those elaborate functions which Hollywood's producers would have us believe are usually associated with the majority group of wealthy, playful, gin-drinking, philandering, time-and-money wasters.

There is a nice sprinkling of comedy-drama, but entirely lacking is that element of sexiness which the title and Universal's press sheet would have you believe exists.

Play it up as a story of love in a modern sophisticated setting, but forget about that "mistress" business. The "hot" love angle is the bunk, too, because nowhere does that slant get anywhere.

The cast is well picked and turns in a creditable performance. Give heavy billing to Ben Lyon and the fact that he tops the cast in "Hell's Angles." Pauline Starke, Barbara Kent and Robert Ellis in important parts are splendid. Hallam Cooley and Carmelita Geraghty are okay in support.

Pauline, a fast living, high-stepping blonde, is pitted against her young and pretty sister, Barbara, in a battle for the affections of Ben, a good looking chap with heaps o' dough. Barbara comes out victorious, which sends Pauline back to Robert Ellis, a very prosperous business man.

There's jazz music in this one, so eliminate that element in your short-subject support. Use a cartoon, newsreel and a good dramatic playlet.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Author, Warner Fabian. Directed by Ernst Laemmle. Adapted by Dorothy Yost and Jack Clymer. Dialogue by Dorothy Yost and Jack Clymer. Photography by Roy Overbaugh. Length, 6,041 feet. Running time, 67 minutes. Release date, July 13.

Railroad Drama; So-So

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

FOR some unaccountable reason, this talker seems to miss fire. Instead of being a thrilling drama with plenty of punch, it falls short and stacks up as about average entertainment.

One thing especially stands out and that is the sound effects. The puffing locomotives, the churning wheels, the screaming whistles and the spouting steam are all brought out with startling realism.

Louis Wolheim as Dan Thorn, boss of the mountain division, is well fitted for the role. He plays it with conviction. The story shows him picking up an ex-railroader, Robert Armstrong, who has quit working and is on the downward road, and making a man of him. Wolheim is in love with Jean Arthur, whom he has supported along with her father, an old and crippled railroader. Miss Arthur feels that for the kindness Wolheim has shown her and her father she must marry him, although she does not love him.

Then she meets Armstrong and they fall in love with each other. Feeling it would be best to run away rather than face Wolheim and Frank Sheridan, the father, the pair start out. Armstrong gets his foot caught in a switch and is rescued from being run down by the Limited when Wolheim comes to his aid. Wolheim is seriously injured in the rescue and in need of a brain specialist. The nearest one being in Chicago, seven hours away by the fastest train. Hope for Wolheim's recovery is about given up when Armstrong prevails upon Alan Roscoe, general manager of the road, to let him try to make the run into Chicago in five hours. Roscoe agrees and Armstrong takes the throttle. With only one coach, carrying Miss Arthur, a doctor and Wolheim, Armstrong makes the run in record time. Wolheim is saved from death, later forgives Miss Arthur and tells her that the railroad is his true love and Armstrong is the man for her.

The story is rather sketchy in spots and does not ring true at all times. However, it does provide opportunity for some punch scenes that are badly needed. The talker is O. K.

Opinions on Pictures

for average week run houses and fine for split-week spots.

From a photographic standpoint the picture is splendid. Marvelous shots of the speeding trains, a landslide and beautiful scenic backgrounds add materially to the production.

Hugh Herbert, in a comedy role, steals all of the scenes he is in and his work is particularly outstanding. As the educated hobo he provides many laughs. Jean Arthur and Robert Armstrong also are most adequate for their roles, while Robert Edeson, Frank Sheridan and Alan Roscoe do well.

The direction of George B. Seitz is technically perfect, but the dramatic scenes could perhaps have been worked up in a more forceful manner.

Use comedy shorts and cartoons here.

Produced and distributed by RKO-Radio. Directed by George B. Seitz. Story, adaptation and dialogue by James Ashmore Creelman. Photographed by Karl Struss and John Boyle. Edited by Archie Marshek. Length, 6,953 feet. Running time, 70 minutes. Release date not set by distributor.

Sweethearts on Parade

(Columbia)

One of Those Things

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THOSE backbones of the nation's defense, the marines and the navy, were drafted for this new Columbia release, but the reinforcements combined somehow don't seem to put up much of a defense against the tiresome banalities of the awful story around which "Sweethearts on Parade" has been built.

Here you have Alice White, blonde and wide-eyed, making friends with Lloyd Hughes, the devil-dog. Into the picture comes the sleek villain, Kenneth Thomson, who offers Alice jewels in order to make her. When that doesn't work, he offers marriage. But it seems Thomson is already married, a slight inconvenience which the authors eliminate by having his wife secure a divorce right at the psychological moment.

At any rate, Alice discovers it is Hughes she's that way about, tells the rounder where he gets off and everything proves to be jake in the good, old Hollywood, routine fashion. In this year of 1930, it's hard to believe they still make them the way they've made this one, but the sad truth must prevail.

The acting is uniformly stereotyped, except for Ray Cooke, whose antics as the gob in love with Marie Prevost are the only gestures that strike anything approaching the genuine and laughable. But the set-up proved too much even for Cooke to hurdle.

Needs shorts—the strong kind.

Produced by Christie Film Co. Distributed by Columbia. Story by Al Cohn and James Starr. Directed by Marshall Neilan. Continuity and dialogue by Colin Clements. Edited by Sidney Walsh. Photographed by Gus Peterson. Length, 6247 feet. Running time, 67 mins. Release date Aug. 16.

$2 Run for "Liliom"

Los Angeles—"Liliom" is to play the Carthay Circle starting Sept. 15 at $2 top.

Short Subjects

Stein Song

(Paramount Cartoon)

Plenty of Laughs in This

DESPITE Rudy Vallee and "The Stein Song" this "Bouncing Ball" cartoon of the Max Fleischer series is a laugh riot. The audience watching Fleischer's clever pen-and-ink characters burlesque Rudy's favorite just howled during the entire reel. Rudy invites the audience to join in singing the chorus. The song, no doubt, has been over-plugged by every jazz band in the country, but the clever gags will send it through with flying colors. Running time, 10 minutes.

Light stuff; use with a dramatic feature.

Gypsy Code

(Adolph Pollak)

G-r-r-r!

THEY sure went about making this 2-reeler seriously. It's crammed with a lot of blood-curdling drama and it was produced with so much tenseness that it either makes you laugh or swear. Roy D'Arcy is the Gypsy king who returns from a trip to find his wife flirting with his best friend and flogs him blind in a duel with whips. Then friend wife kills herself with poison, but within three minutes Roy connects with another hot mama. The story is by Edgar Allen Woolf. They may like this in the sticks. Running time, 20 minutes.

Use your best judgment in spotting in this one.

Many Moons

(Robert Bruce Scenic)

Colorful

HENRY HALL and Jack Richardson are used to unravel the slight thread of a story which is interwoven through this picturesque camera study of tropical moonlight. The scenic effects are unusually splendid and are effectively shown while the soft strains of Hawaiian string instruments render tuneful melodies in the background. A photographic gem, and of sufficient interest for any type of theatre. Running time, 9 minutes.

For effectiveness, spot this one right after a light feature comedy.

The Island Empire

(Fitzpatrick Traveltalk)

Fair

NOTHING especially original or novel about this short, but the shots of Fujiyama are strikingly beautiful and all of the backgrounds shown are attractive, especially the vistas of cherry trees in bloom. Its appeal could have been enhanced considerably by more close-ups of Japanese. Accompanied by a synchronized lecture. Okay for any type of house. Running time, 8 minutes.

Use it with a musical feature.

Temple of Love

(FitzPatrick Traveltalk)

Interesting Travels

ANOTHER in James A. FitzPatrick's "Travel Talk" series, "Temples of Love" is replete with interesting camera snatches of India and its colorful mosques, child mothers and fakirs, the latter, particularly, offering a thrilling bit of celluloid entertainment with their gigantic cobras. A fight to death between a cobra and its bitter enemy, the mongoos, while not as breath-taking as the fight seen in Ufa's remarkable short some time ago, provides a real climax.

The voice description dubbed with the film does little to enhance the entertainment value of the subject, and this because of lack of variation in pitch which results in flat and uncolorful monologue. Running time, 18 minutes.

Suitable for feature comedy or drama.

A Sure Cure

(Paramount)

Fair Comedy

THE highlight in this one is the sudden twist which turns the tale from serious dramatics to light comedy, a pleasing switch as evidenced by the laughs which the gag brought in the audience of the house where it was seen. Lynn Overman is being questioned by police who suspect him of murdering his wife. The cross questioning is a semi-serious affair, until Lynn breaks down, confesses guilt and tells the coppers, after much deliberation, that he murdered the "Mrs." because she refused to cook beans for dinner. Sounds foolish—and is, which brings the laughter. Running time, 9 minutes.

Okay on a program featuring a heavy drama.

Dollar Dizzy

(M-G-M)

Silly; Has Laughs

THIS is as dizzy as its title, but, in spite of a goofy plot, there are some laughs in the low comedy slapstick. The kids will go for it and the grownups will get a few laughs, even though they do regard it as the bunk. Charley inherits heavy dough and goes to a resort to evade gold diggers and runs into plenty of them. In a mixup he and an heiress are placed in the same suite. Each suspects the other of a frame and they both take a lot of punishment before the mess is straightened out. Thelma Todd plays opposite Charley Chase. Running time, 22 minutes.

Where slapstick relief wanted.

Zampa

(United Artists)

Pleasing

HUGO RIESENFELD and William Cameron produced this synchronized featurette based on the opera by Herold. It is a pleasing novelty. The story is of a bride who is abducted by a brigand. Her prayers to the statue of the crusader lead the bandit to desecrate the statue. Her husband rescues her, killing the brigand and his band. Fairly well acted. Running time, 10 minutes.

You need comedy with this.

Tough Guy

(Vitaphone—Variety)

Very Entertaining

SPENCER TRACY, a capable performer, featured in a short dramatic playlet which packs dramatic punch. Entertainment value of this one rates high, due principally to convincing performances of the limited cast, snappy dialogue and a clever climatic twist. The theme, centering around the hardships brought to a young married couple and their sick youngster, through the unemployment situation, has a convincing trait of naturalness. Running time, 6 minutes.

Should fit well on any bill.

Rolling Stones

(Tiffany)

Interesting

TWO prospectors carry this along, exchanging wise cracks as the camera travels from mountain peak to valley, catching some marvelous scenic views. Multicolor was used throughout, with considerable success, the colors being subdued and natural. As a novelty it will go over. Running time, 8 minutes.

Fine to diversify your bill.

More Headaches, But Big Grosses Are Responsible

Chicago—The holiday week-end business at Loop theatres with but few exceptions was in sensational volume. Bookkeepers, unaccustomed to daily grosses in five figures, went home early Tuesday morning with headaches, groggy from overtime labor.

The Chicago theatre, with "Anybody's Woman" (Paramount), was the exclamation mark. Opening on Friday, the four-day gross approximated $40,000 by Tuesday morning. This is a tremendous pace for the house, indicating near capacity attendance at every performance. The present record of $63,500 was established about one year ago by the "Canary Murder Case" and Guy Lombardo's orchestra on the stage.

So impressed are Balaban & Katz with the draw of "Anybody's Woman," that they have scheduled it for a second Loop week at the Oriental. Pictures usually go to the neighborhoods after their week at the Chicago.

McVickers, with "Animal Crackers" (Para.), was second host. This house, too, played to holdout trade for the four-day week-end, grossing a magnificent $27,000 for the spell. "Common Clay" (Fox), finishing a six weeks' run at the Roosevelt, took a last minute spurt over the week-end and turned in a neat $12,800 for the four days. "Anybody's War" (Para.) replaces this one in mid-week.

The Palace with "Little Accident" (Univ.), playing to adults only, was in the big money group over the week-end; as was the Woods with "Dixiana" (Radio). "Bride of the Regiment" (F. N.), also playing to adults only, gave the Castle capacity business for the period.

Too Much Love

Chicago—He was merely the scion of a Chicago railroad family on the make for a visiting Hollywoodette—one of those it-ful girls inevitably cast as the lure.

"But we love each other," he urged for the 'steenth time.

"Say," she replied, a little impatiently, "I'm on my vacation. Will you quit talking shop."

Exhibitor-Musician

Chicago—If motion pictures had been perfected earlier Charlie Fedeles would have entered the exhibition field sooner. As it is, he has only twenty-five years of theatre history behind him. That quarter of a century, too, was spent in that turbulent section of the downtown district which lies just south of Van Buren on State street.

Charles Fedeles

In order to get people into a theatre there, one has to be a showman. There is no alternative. This was particularly true of the pre-prohibition era, for at that time the regular population of South State street was not normally interested in such mild entertainment fare as was offered by pictures. And as for the visitor on the thoroughfare, he might have felt that there was more entertainment on the street in that particular section than any theatre could offer him. The theatre man, in order to stay in business there, had to be a master salesman. Charlie stayed, and is still at it.

In addition to his theatre interests, Fedeles is also a licensed musician. His first employment on coming to this country as a youth was with orchestras. He was a member of the first band which played at White City Amusement Park.

Little Houses Get Ads in Chain Fold

Chicago—Circuit and chain acquisitions here are bringing increased advertising to the local dailies in a big way. Neighborhood houses that never had the price of an ad in their old days as independents find their names in the papers regularly once they have been acquired by a circuit with a big advertising appropriation. The same goes for the houses picked up by the larger Chicago chains, with the result that there are, today, almost fifty more theatres advertised daily than there were one year ago.

Another innovation in local theatre advertising is the practice of grouping together, regardless of location in the city, all of the houses of a chain or circuit. Houses were formerly given individual neighborhood classifications.

Injunction Delays "Ingagi" Bookings As Showmen Fret

Chicago—Fifty or more "Ingagi" bookings are held up in this vicinity as a result of the injunction issued in the case against the picture, the Chicago office of Congo Pictures, Ltd., admitted. The original release date was set for September 7, but the play dates in "Ingagi" contracts made here were left open and no deposits accepted at the time the sales were closed. This results in simplifying matters for the exchange, but the exhibitors around the town are moaning loudly that their advance advertising on the picture has gone to waste with no definite play date in sight.

"Pink" Gamble on "Little Accident"

Chicago—Local kids were barred from a vaudeville house this week when RKO sent "Little Accident" (Univ.) into the Palace for extra Loop time. "Accident" is playing here on a pink permit (adults only). Its draw at the Woods was so good at the time it was forced out by a "Dixiana" (Radio) booking that RKO couldn't bear the thought of letting it go. In consequence, it gambled the picture against loss of the kids' trade at the Palace, vaude-film house, and moved it there for a final week, getting good money. First time a Chicago vaudeville spot has played to "adults only."

Lewis Joins Paper

Chicago—Lloyd Lewis, for many years advertising copy writer for Balaban & Katz Loop theatres and magazine writer and author of several books, will leave his theatre post Sept. 1 to become associated with the Chicago Daily News in an editorial capacity.

C. A. Leonard, formerly in charge of advertising for B. & K. outlying theatres, will replace Lewis, while Lou Pollack, publicity man for B. & K., takes over Leonard's office.

"In Conference"

Chicago—What chain executive here was found asleep in his office when a man he had kept benched (according to the office custom) got impatient and brushed by the stenog?

Chi Ad Boys Shy Of Mathematics

Chicago—What their authors describe as "slight exaggerations" are becoming common in local theatre advertising in Chicago dailies.

The Publix-B. & K. copywriters started it by advertising the number of people who had seen pictures playing their Loop run houses. In each instance the number advertised was twice the seating capacity of the houses. Now RKO, announcing the transfer of "Little Accident" from the Woods to the Palace, advertises: "After four big laugh weeks at the Woods, this picture moves to the Palace by popular demand."

"Little Accident" played four days less than three weeks at the Woods.

Schoenstadt Withdraws From Coston Circuit

Chicago—The Schoenstadt chain of ten theatres has withdrawn from the Coston Booking Circuit and is opening its own theatre offices in the Standard Oil Building. The Schoenstadt withdrawal reduces Coston booking subscribers to 30 houses, less than half the number enrolled in it six months ago.

The seven Lasker houses came into the Midwest Theatres group, new buying combine, this week, boosting Midwest's membership to 70.

Publix Drops Six Theatre Publicists

Chicago—Six theatre publicity managers have been dropped by the local Publix office in compliance with the circuit's orders to economize. The move to dispose of house publicity managers is reported to have been taken up nationally by Publix, with the space chiseling duties now descending upon the house managers.

Para. Exchange Completed

Chicago—The new Paramount exchange building at Michigan and 13th was completed this week and interior furnishing is now in progress. J. O. Kent, branch manager, believes the exchange will start its move to the new building by Sept. 10.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, holding the lease on the old Paramount exchange, expects to be in the new location by Oct. 1.

Tom North Resigns

Chicago—Tom North, special representative in the Mid-West for the Van Beuren Corp. for the past four and one-half years, has resigned that post. His future plans are as yet indefinite, he said. No successor to North has been named.

B. & K. Get Two More

Chicago—Publix-B. & K. completed the deal for the Alamo and Manor, T. V. Lynch houses, this week. Negotiations had been under way for some time past. Lynch's Tiffin Theatre was not included in the deal.

The Chicago criminal element, observers believe, must be reading the film trade papers. So familiar are they with the financial state of things in local theatres that fewer and fewer errors are being made by thugs in staging a theatre stick-up. The gunmen now ignore the box-offices in Chicago. They go directly to the projection room and take it away from the operators. "Cap's" Secret

Chicago—Running projection rooms is and has been for a long time nothing less than duck soup for "Cap" Eigle. When Film Row moves up the street beyond Roosevelt Road don't waste your sympathy on this gentleman, because, come what may, here is one gentleman who isn't going to starve. He's far too clever for that, Ripley it or not.

"Cap" Eigle

Here is how he happened to be dubbed "Cap":

In the old days of pictures in Chicago Eigle ran the town's only projection room, and in consequence all of the pictures were screened there for the city's censor board. At that time the membership of the board consisted of some good-natured but low salaried policemen. It was amazing how well Eigle got along with them. In fact, such surprising consequences resulted from this combination that Chicago exhibitors came to believe that Eigle was a captain of police, so implicity were his instructions to the uniform carried out. Hence, we have "Cap" Eigle.

Punch and Judy Roadshow House

Chicago—The Cinema Art Guild's Punch & Judy Theatre (formerly Minturn's Central) opens Sept. 25 with "Abraham Lincoln" (U.A.). Road show policy will rule at the house with a $2 top for all performances.

The Punch & Judy is a 350-seat house that has been elaborately and colorfully rebuilt for its new era as a picture house. Roomy, over-stuffed seats, unlike anything to be found in Chicago theatres now, have been installed. Smoking will be permitted in the balcony.

New York Gets New All-Spanish Talker Theatre

New York will have its first all-Spanish musical revue and talking picture theatre Sept. 12 when the San Jose, 110th St. and Fifth Ave., opens its doors.

The theatre is of Spanish architecture and the entire staff and cast will be natives of Spain. Manhattan Playhouses completely renovated this playhouse in modern Spanish style, spending more than $80,000 in atmospheric trimmings alone.

The policy of this house will be a talking feature, several short subjects and an hour of revue, with a change of complete program weekly.

Benjamin Sherman, president of the Manhattan Playhouses, a circuit of greater New York talking picture theatres, sponsored the San Jose.

A number of Spanish stars have been signed to make their first appearance in this country on the stage of the San Jose.

Operation of the new San Jose is in the hands of Benjamin Sherman, J. H. Steinman, David J. Lustig, C. Miranda and B. Wilson.

The Club Index

THERE have been very few innovations to the Club pages to equal in popularity the recent addition of the Club indexes each and every month.

This great Showmen's Assistant is a regular monthly feature of the Club pages and generally makes its appearance in the first issue each month, carrying the complete classification of all the valuable stunts, tie-ups, etc., which were published in the previous month's Club sections.

Whenever the Managers' Round Table Club hits on a new idea, it is only a matter of a few weeks before that idea is lifted or revamped and offered in some form or other in circuit house organs and other trade papers. We are flattered. Because the more they lift, that many more showmen will benefit.

But we can't concern ourselves over what others do with our suggestions. We are primarily interested in what YOU are doing with them.

Several hundred members and readers have told us in several hundred ways how they find the monthly Club index of value. We did not ask them for an opinion. They offered it unsolicited and we immediately grasped the great importance of this little service and renewed our resolution to improve it so that it would eventually become as valuable in its own little way as the Club pages have become in the two years of their existence.

Imagine; all you need do if you want to promote a merchant tie-up, but don't know how to go about it, is to look through the indexes, find the listing in its alphabetical order and see how other showmen faced the selfsame problem and how they saw it through successfully.

No need to worry as to whether the idea is practical or not. You know at once that it has been tried and has proven successful. Not an experiment or a fly-brain idea.

True, you may have to revamp the idea a little to meet your local and individual situation, but that's the very least you can be expected to do. We only pass along the ideas, we can't successfully execute them for you. If we could we would bill you for part of your salary.

Listen, boys, when a guy like Frank Whitbeck will up and tell an organization such as the West Coast circuit to get aboard the Club and the Club pages, there must be plenty to the idea. He wasn't born yesterday or the day before. He reached his present post through the hard school of experience and when he can say what he did say about the Managers' Round Table Club, it should behoove every showman in the racket to get wise to himself.

The index is but one of the hundred valuable showman aids offered by this organization. Are YOU taking full advantage of them? If you're not, it's your loss.

"Chick."

ANOTHER BIG MONTH OF
TRIED AND PROVEN SHOWMANSHIP

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Here's Bob Clark Who Does Displays For Coast Houses

Step up and meet Bob Clark! Clark is the head of the art department for the R.K.O. Theatres in Los Angeles. He handles all newspaper advertising, lobbies, window displays material and other miscellaneous art work of every description.

He has been with the circuit for six years, located in Los Angeles. He has handled the art work, at some time or other, for the various theatres in the coast city. He has been termed by George Landy, well known p.a. for R.K.O.—whose official title is "General Pacific Coast Press Representative"—a one hundred percent guy.

You have seen some of Clark's work on our pages, notably his special front for "Ingagi." There are many others too, that have meant a lot but just at present we cannot recall them. We are very glad to introduce this artist on our pages, one of the reasons being that an artist, providing he is a good one, is a most essential factor in the merchandising campaign laid out by a manager or press agent.

To sum up what constitutes a good house artist, here's the way one of our members, who certainly knows what he talks about, puts it: "The right kind of a theatre artist must be willing to work like a dog, understand co-operation, and, at the same time, have initiative enough to suggest things to the press agent; as well as to take care of as many minor details as possible. At the same time, the artist must also have the faculty of keeping the men under him happy—producing and developing them. If, in addition to all these things, he is a regular guy, the theatre hiring him, together with the press agent working with him, are both lucky."

So that's what they think of Bob Clark, out on the West Coast. Well, Bob, we certainly must compliment you. And listen, just so that you can hang onto your record, we'd like you to know that we hope to hear lots more about you. And we want to see lots of your work too.

Furni & Kueppers Turned Out Great Campaign On Film

Manager Ed. Furni and Publicity Director Eddie Kueppers received an avalanche of publicity for "With Byrd at the South Pole" playing at the Publix-Paramount Theatre, St. Paul, Minn., when a member of the Byrd expedition helped to exploit it.

The member of the Byrd expedition who helped to exploit the picture in St. Paul was Walter Leuthner, a cook on the City of New York. This man was with the expedition fourteen months and consequently was regarded as one of the 82 when the National Geographical medals were given out. Mr. Leuthner is a resident of Alexandria, Minn., which added considerable value to the picture in St. Paul. From the standpoint of publicity, the Byrd expedition member was a great bet. On his way through from his home town to New York for the Byrd reception, he made front page copy in both St. Paul papers. On his return, ten days later, he again made the front pages.

Mr. Leuthner arrived in St. Paul the day before opening of picture where he made visits and lectured to Luncheon Clubs each noon—such as the Rotary, Exchange, Kiwanis, Civitan, Junior Association of Commerce, St. Paul Association and the Lions Club. On each and every one of these visits to the various clubs, he would relate his experiences and at the conclusion of his talk, would permit club members to ask questions. The theatre not only obtained much publicity for the picture from this but also a great deal of good-will. As a result of Mr. Leuthner's appearance at the various club meetings, practically every day the theatre received publicity in both papers.

"The District Manager Comes Home!!!"

During the run of the picture, he appeared in the lobby each afternoon and evening answering any questions that the patrons cared to ask him about the expedition. A constant crowd surrounded him with but few people leaving the theatre without speaking to him. He had with him several pictures of members of the expedition which made a most attractive display as a background—while he also displayed souvenirs of the trip.

Immediately following the National Broadcast of the Byrd reception in New York City, an announcement was made from the local station relative to the coming of the picture to the Paramount. This was obtained at absolutely no cost to the theatre. Following the Veedol National Broadcast on Sunday evening, announcements were made one week in advance and currently with the run as well as on Monday evening preceding the run—on the local Veedol broadcast.

On the night before the picture's opening, the theatre arranged a special broadcast over KSTP utilizing the lobby entertainers, the new organist and Mr. Leuthner. The song "Back Home" was featured and also a short talk by Mr. Leuthner. This program lasted for approximately thirty minutes and gave the theatre a great publicity break. Banners were also displayed at the 15 Veedol stations scattered throughout the city. The banners carried copy relative to the picture, theatre and playdates.

All of this tended to increase word-of-mouth comment and did a lot to boost up business. We would like to hear more of this showman's work and we hope he will favor us with some accounts of his recent show-selling. And when you send in your next contribution, Ed., drop us your photo and a little dope on yourself so that we can give you an introduction to the rest of the Club and let them meet the men who are keeping the Paramount in the running as one of the leaders of the Publix houses in the Mid-West territory.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

How Much to Join?

The Club has been accepted as such a valuable aid to showmen that many of them take it for granted that a joining or membership fee is required.

May we take this means of correcting any such a mistaken idea?

It costs you NOTHING to join the Managers' Round Table Club, and there are no dues, charges or fees of any kind in connection with your membership.

WE HAVE NOTHING TO SELL BUT SERVICE AND YOU GET PLENTY OF THAT FREE.

"South Pole Day" Was Feature Of Smart's Selling

Again proving how solid he is with his town, Roy L. Smart, manager of the Broadhurst Theatre in High Point, N. C., went right out and tied up the local aviation field for one of the most effective stunts that had ever been pulled there. The stunt was worked in conjunction with his campaign for "With Byrd at the South Pole."

It was arranged to hold a "Byrd South Pole Day" at the local aviation field on Sunday prior to the Thursday opening of picture. The aviation field people secured the services of a parachute jumper for this occasion and advertised the event by dropping 5,000 heralds over the city. The aviation people also announced the event by megaphone to the crowds on the field—giving particular stress to the playdates of the picture.

The aviation field is located about three miles out of the city on a main highway. At the entrance they have a billboard (14 ft. by 6 ft.) which was completely covered with a cloth banner painted in oil—advertising the picture and the "Byrd Day."

The "Byrd Day" at the aviation field attracted the largest crowd the airport has had with approximately 5,000 people on hand. During the afternoon, announcements were megaphoned to the crowd advertising the show. These announcements were made at different intervals as well as dropping 2,000 heralds on the crowd.

Forty of the 2,000 heralds dropped were good for admission to see the Byrd pictures. Of these 40, more than half were found and turned in at the box office. Another batch of the heralds were signed by the pilot of the plane—the finders of these being entitled to a free ride in the plane. The newspaper ran four stories covering this stunt.

Smart also contacted the Boy Scout Commissioner, who in turn co-operated by reading announcements to the Scouts about the picture as well as having the Scouts parade—carrying banners advertising the picture, etc.

These very effective publicity mediums could mean only one th ng—additional busines—and oh, yes, there's the good-will—p enty of it, all added to the vast store which Smart already has. As he is one of our most active members, we are sure that Roy is going to pass along some more of these live-wire accounts and we hope that when he sends us in his next contribution he will also include his photo; for, when we looked in our files, we found that we had none of him. How about it, Roy? Will you send one in so that we can give you an "intro" to your fellow members, along with some sidelights on your show career?

Window Displays Continue To Be In Pete Egan's Line

Pete Egan is busy. And when we make that significant statement it means that the live-wire manager of the Capitol Theatre in Regina, Sas., Canada (the Queen City of Western Canada—no ad, Pete's declaration), is either grabbing off newspaper space or out tying up every window in town to plug his attractions.

In the cut we are showing a couple of samples of his window endeavors while he was selling "Splinters," a production made in Great Britain. The display was mounted on a portable frame, and its simplicity in layout did much to attract attention. The title was cut out of beaverboard and sprinkled with flitter. Stills from the picture were grouped around it and these were laid out in a very effective manner. Pete also had good display on "The King of Jazz," but unfortunately the photo developed a crack in transportation and we were unable to use it.

He had a wow of a head cut-out of Paul Whiteman, wearing a miniature crown. The head was set against a background of flittered letters with a musical note standing out in bold relief. From the photo we can tell that it must have been a beaut as the colors seem to blend very well. On either side of the display piece special stills, elaborately colored and enlarged were shown. As you all know how capable Pete is when it comes to creating window displays we feel sure that if you will follow this showman's activities on the Club pages you will find a number of suggestions which you may be able to put to your own use. Thanks, Pete, for passing these along to us. And remember we want to see plenty more of them from your district, too.

Bolivar Hyde Made Lots Of Noise With "All Quiet" Front

What Bolivar Hyde, Jr., city manager for Publix in Montgomery, Ala., terms his "sales campaign" for "All Quiet On The Western Front," certainly was sold.

In order that you may see how this showman covers every angle, we are taking this opportunity to present his complete campaign, the plan of which is followed with each new change, allowing of course, for special novelties which Bolivar injects into it.

The film was billed as the "greatest event in silent or talking pictures." A special built lobby front was used, with appropriate copy on all the posters. An attractive display with illuminated cut-out letters was arranged in the foyer for one week prior to showing, and then, as the photo shows, moved out front where it did much to dress up the attractive display. Special blue and green lighting effects were used in the lobby. The woman angle was also played up effectively.

On his exploitation ballyhoos, Bolivar had a banner made in the style such as the cover of the book represents. The monster banner headed a parade which marched through the main streets of the town. In the interior of the theatre, two large panels were placed in the organ grill. The panels were covered with tinsel, spread on the raised letters. A dim blue light was shown on the panels during every show, making it easily readable. During intermission the blue lighting effect was brought up to full illumination.

In addition to these angles, all of the local book stores devoted space in their windows to plugging the book and the playdates of the picture. A number of popular restaurants carried a special card on their menus. Novelty cut-outs were placed in a number of the larger downtown stores. Many other angles were also covered by Bolivar, but since they are too numerous to mention, and you have probably used them yourself, and are using them now, we will have to pass over them.

We would like to point out, that in all of these ideas, you will note, that you can use them, not only on this picture but on almost any film. Thanks, Bolivar, for shooting this along to us and we hope to hear from you again real soon.

Willis Used Old Stunt To Good Box Office Building

Knowing his local public as well as he does enabled C. R. Willis, manager of the Strand Theatre in Meridian, Miss., to cash in on the old "Pay Night Gag" to bigger and better box office receipts in conjunction with his showing of "The Lost Zeppelin."

"Pay Night," as you know, is sort of an affair whereby the theatre pays certain dividends to its many patrons. Every one attending the show received a pay envelope with a piece of money ranging in value from 1 cent to $5.00. Naturally everyone was eager to get the $5 and that's one reason why the theatre was jammed on this particular night.

100 balloons were released from the top of a new 16-story building; the balloons being numbered as well as carrying title of picture on them and notices on "Pay Night." Among the 100 balloons released, there were ten that had lucky numbers. The winning numbers were posted in the lobby.

Seven small zeppelins were mounted across the lobby front; a miniature zeppelin display was in the lobby and a large zeppelin (4 ft. by 12 ft) was hung on the marquee.

We are glad to see that "C. R." is as active as ever and we hope he will continue to be a very active contributor.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

TICKLING THE IVORIES!

Endurance contests are in full swing everywhere. When will it all end? Here's another. Jack Gross, manager of the Palace Theatre in South Bend, Indiana, is featuring a piano playing endurance contest in his lobby to attract business during the summer months.

Through a tie-up with a local piano company he procured a baby grand, which was placed in the spacious lobby in full view of passersby on the sidewalk. The pianist started his grind on August 13th. At last reports he is still enticing music—though somewhat inharmonious strains—out of the piano. It was not until he had reached the 200 hour mark that the fickle public evinced signs of interest. Today his success is assured: the public is anxiously waiting for him to "crack" but he hangs doggedly on, pounding the ivories with untiring zeal.

The only thing that puzzles us is: What is the record? And when it's been broken, who cares?

But Jack Gross certainly deserves a compliment for cashing in on the endurance craze.

Thompson Steps To The Front Again With Novel Trailer

Give T. W. Thompson, manager of the Avalon Theatre, in Grand Junction, Colo., a hand for his latest trailer presentation. A short time ago we told you how he sells all of his trailers and gave you an idea of his methods of operation. Here's another one; and we think you'll agree that it is right there with the goods. This one was used in conjunction with the trailer on "Manslaughter."

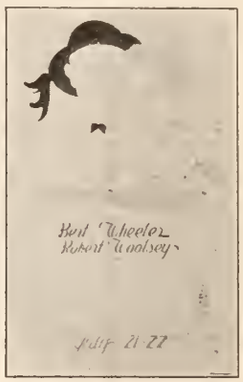
The horns were moved back away from screen during the screening of the news—leaving the entire stage open with street drop against back wall. When news finished, traveler opened and stage was visible through screen lighted by floods at bottom.

As the traveler opens, a cop is seen directing traffic, blowing his whistle at intervals. In the meantime, the roar of a powerful motor is heard constantly growing louder. The cop blows his whistle and turns to change the flow of traffic. At this instant, above the roar of the motor, a horn shieks and a sports roadster appears within the range of the screen, seemingly traveling at a high rate of speed. The cop turns, but too late; the car strikes him, knocking him down. The brakes are jammed on and the car stops. At the same time a scream is heard and some one yells, "It's Manslaughter." Instantly the lights go out and the trailer fades in with a pair of handcuffs being fastened to Claudette Colbert's wrists.

One of the floor staff plays the cop, the manager of the theatre plays the part of Colbert as the driver of the car. The stage is quite large and with the horns back a start of about 20 feet is allowed. By the time the car comes in to view it is doing about 15 miles per hour. The car goes directly behind the cop, but through the screen it appears to hit him with a front fender.

A plank is placed on the floor where the cop stands and as the wheel goes over it, the car bounces as if from the impact. The car stops almost instantly, the cop does a great fall and the scream caps the climax.

The whole stunt takes exactly 22 seconds and the boys in the booth have spliced in blank leader to make up the time so that they merely cut their light and sound during the interval.



That's some gag, isn't it? You couldn't ask for a more effective way of presenting a trailer. And the best part of it is, that you, too, can do it—if not the same way, then along similar lines. Figure this one out for yourself, and to fit your special case; and we have an idea that it will help you show selling a lot.

Thanks, "T. W.," for passing this along to us; and while we are at it, how about your photo? Why not send it to us with your next contribution so that your fellow members and managers can get a look at you. Oke?

We are sure that if Fred Glass continues the same brand of live-wire showmanship at Alliance, Neb., as he displayed during his six years in McCook, Neb., he will more than build up theatre patronage. Glass has been transferred to Alliance to take charge of the Fox houses that are undergoing a refurbishing and rebuilding program. Upon completion of the project he will assume active managership, and we can look forward to seeing some "ace" work from around his section.

In conjunction with this article we are showing a few samples of the street ballyhoos and poster work he turned out recently at McCook. The poster on "The Cuckoos" was drawn by his staff artist Kenneth Peter and its novelty of design made it the object of considerable attention and comment from the crowds of persons who flocked about it. The poster was simply made up and this, too, may have accounted for its effectiveness.

The other photos show a racing car that was picked out of an ash heap and used to ballyhoo "Burning Up." The relic was towed about the main streets of the town; and when a busy section was reached the motor would be turned over. What noise! It had a roar like a couple of angry bulls and, in view of this fact, it became necessary to dispense with the stunt for the duration of the picture. As a result, the "racing car" was taken to the front of the theatre and there placed on display until the conclusion of the booking. The float on "Byrd at the South Pole" was an especially clever one. Glass promoted a Chevrolet truck from a local dealer and his house staff designed and erected the special "icy" display on the chassis. Snow covered mountains, a globe of the world, and the tri-motored plane model gave an effect that would sell in any part of the country.

Bucking stiff opposition in the Sells Floto Circus, an aggregation making yearly visits to McCook, and a special favorite with the residents—it had to be good to get them into the theatre. Glass had the truck cruise about the circus grounds as often as possible; and this, in no small measure enabled him to turn in a rousing good week.

As we are sure that Fred is going to continue being an active member of the Club, we look forward to hearing more of his work very soon. Good luck, Fred, and keep us posted.

Entire Town Was Aid To J. A. Jones In Show Selling

To turn out a campaign that would combat the heat and be in keeping with the nature of his picture was the aim of J. A. Jones, manager of the Saenger Theatre, in Pensacola, Fla., when he executed his recent campaign for "With Byrd at the South Pole."

The Boy Scouts co-operated by staging a parade on opening day of picture; their Fife and Drum Corps leading the parade and several of them carrying banners advertising the picture, theatre and playdates.

As the Boy Scout parade reached the theatre, they were met by the Mayor of the city, who presented them with a picture of Admiral Byrd.

The lobby presented a special display of a Wright Whirlwind Motor such as was used by Byrd on his trip to the South Pole. The Naval Air Station supplied the motor as well as furnishing an elaborate display of flags and code pennants. The Naval Station also furnished sailors' uniforms, which were used by the ushers throughout run of picture.

A contest in keeping with the atmosphere of the picture was also used to stimulate interest in the picture. This contest was in the form of a guessing contest—a large card was frozen in a cake of ice and placed in a prominent Main Street store with prizes of theatre tickets being given to the persons nearest estimating the correct time it would take the ice to melt. The card in the ice carried copy relative to the picture and was so placed that it was easily read by people peering in tne window.

These few angles tended to create plenty of comment on the film, with the result that the residents decided to forget the heat and go into the theatre and see the picture. We notice, in going through our files, that we have no picture of Mr. Jones, and since we feel that he'd like to be introduced via his photo, we hope that he will send one along with his next contribution. What do you say, "J. A."? You know we'd like to have it.

Lawrence Treated Lima To More Of His Noted Stunts

If it's a comic gag that you are looking for, apply to Sid Lawrence, manager of Schine's Ohio Theatre in Lima, Ohio, and he'll be more than glad to oblige you. Or if you want any kind of a showman gag, call on Sid. In the many years he has been in the show game he has managed to amass a collection that would do credit to any collector. He is one of those showmen who can take an old gag and use it on a million pictures, just because he knows how to dress it up in new trimmings.

When he played "Swing High," he decided that as an advance plug he would give Lima a treat in the form of a comic herald and to that end he made up a card, a copy of which we are reprinting below. The card measured 5½ by 2¾ inches and was printed in black on yellow stock. The back of it read: "This license is issued so you can attend the showing of Lima's Second Circus, 'Swing High.'" (Theatre and playdate.)

The cards were distributed about the town by a man dressed in clown costume and they aroused a great deal of curiosity in the picture. And know Sid as we do, we feel that it is not necessary to wait until the final returns roll in to announce that he did capacity business during the run for his showmanship has more than once proven itself to be equal to putting any sort of an attraction over and we can recall many houses that Sid took out of the red and put them back where they belonged.

"ANIMAL CRACKER HUNTS"!

Remember our treasure hunt box not so long ago? Here's a stunt on the same lines—an animal cracker hunt. The idea was pulled by the team of Weiss-Perlberg of the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., when they played "Animal Crackers."

2,000 of the crackers were hidden amongst the trees and shrubbery in the local park. Notices in the ads and publicity in the papers informed children up to 13 years of age that they were eligible to enter. Local dealers co-operated and agreed to donate gifts to the children securing the crackers, on which was imprinted their firm trade-mark. A gift was also given to the child "capturing" the greatest number of "animals."

The hunt was very successful and we are passing it along to you in the event that you would like to pull it at any time. It is not necessary for you to play the picture in order to use it. You know what we've always said "If a stunt is good enough for one picture it's good enough for another." If you wish, you can use this as a plug for your kiddie club. There's many different angles to it. Dope them out—if you think you can use this.

They Visited Chehalis And Connors Kept Them In Town

One thing you may rest assured of is that Bill Connor, manager of the St. Helens Theatre in Chehalis, Wash., is going to be right on hand with some novel showmanship whenever the occasion demands that it be called into play.

Chehalis was chosen recently as one of the seven Northwest cities where the "North-west Air Circus" was booked to stop. The circus is a yearly visitant at the Washington town; and is the signal for the whole country side to rush to the city. Accordingly, over 15,000 people were on hand when the fifty planes comprising the show flew into town.

After the air circus had finished at 2:30 in the afternoon it was up to the local Chamber of Commerce to keep the crowds in town as long as possible. Connors came through with a solution. He arranged to stage a ladies' walking race, with the chamber offering to donate awards. The race was three miles in length and it ended in front of the St. Helens theatre. It was a big success, both from a monetary, as well as a good-will, standpoint. Five state highway patrolmen and three local police were necessary to hold back the crowds who pushed and shoved at the finish line.

Though Connor was not in the habit of running matinees on this special day, he found that one would certainly be necessary. So the house was opened at the finish of the air circus and continued on a grind until late in the evening. The walking race saved the day. All of the merchants reported good business, and more good-will was added to the theatre's store.

We are glad to note that Bill is displaying that same brand of work which he has shown in the past and we hope he will continue to keep us in touch with it. What do you say, Bill?

"IN OPPOSITION MORE DARING"

Somewhere along the route of our recent trip we recall an inscription over an arched doorway which read: "In Opposition More Daring."

No doubt any one of your boys could take that line and twist it about to mean a whole lot of things, but for our purpose we prefer to convey this definition: In spots where the average showman has real opposition he is far more daring than without it.

And why not? The old expression that competition is the spice of life, is just as true now as ever before. We've been in both spots. And can well recall how simple it is to fall into a rut and sit back while the house makes the dough.

But, better still, we like to recall the days when we not only had real opposition, but the kind that had us on the run from the word go. They had the majority of the best pictures, their vaudeville was far superior, their theatre newer and better; in fact they had most everything their own sweet way. About all they left for yours truly was a gorgeous headache.

But in all our years of theatre management we can recall no space of time and battle to equal the front we put on to try and keep our heads above water and the house from closing.

As we look back on it now, we get the greatest thrill recalling the months of fighting the opposition and not the months when we sat back, serenely secure in the knowledge that the house would consistently show its usual profit.

And the memory of those fighting months carried us through other battles still to come when we invaded newer territory and found other conditions and situations to meet. Had we only the background and experience of those "easy-happy-go-lucky" days behind us, we would, in all probabilities have met with failure upon failure. But those "get-out-and-get-'em" days served us to such good advantage that we found ourselves always eager to battle for business regardless of where the show game took us.

So, without any thought of preaching a sermon, we would say to you happy-go-lucky boys, with theatres in spots where opposition is still unknown or maybe temporarily out of the picture, DON'T wait for the opposition to come along to make you go out and battle. Start right in now. Just pretend that there is another house right across the street. You are both neck and neck on shows, etc. But YOU want the business.

Advertise, exploit, ballyhoo, anything, everything; make your theatre so much of a community proposition that the egg who would come along and build a house across the street will soon realize that he's pouring a lot of good hard cash into the sewer, because you and your house are so firmly entrenched that it would take a charge of dynamite to budge you an inch.

"In Opposition More Daring." Great, but why make opposition bring your ability and showmanship to the surface. You should be practising it now. Maybe later your bosses will decide that in opposition they need someone else more capable of battling.

Crane Looks Like Strong Competition For L. Charninsky

Louis Charninsky has a competitor! We thought that the popular Kansas City showman had a monopoly on all of the trick costume ballyhoos but news has seeped out that Ed. Crane, manager of the Florida Theatre in Daytona Beach, Fla., is after Louie's crown.

A costume parade was held recently in Daytona. Crane decided that his picture "Let's Go Native" could stand some publicizing. He entered the contest, in which the five most beautiful men were to win some sort of a prize. Crane didn't care particularly about copping one of the awards; but he did want to let the natives get an eyeful of showmanship.

He scouted about until he found a hula costume which he donned. The knees and legs were bulged at different points. A pair of tortoise shell glasses and a high hat completed the effect. A more grotesque costume had never yet been seen. Across his chest, he strung a silk ribbon, imprinted with "Let's Go Native."

His triumphant entry was greeted with roars of laughter. He was by far the funniest entry in the parade. But he didn't rate first place. The judges, for some reason or other, decided that his costume was fine; but they weren't so sure about his profile. So the award went somewhere else. However, Crane accomplished his purpose. The picture received plenty of publicity, and we'd like you to know that it went across to big receipts.

And now that competition against Charninsky's crown has appeared upon the horizon, we look forward to seeing some renewed activity on Louie's part, who, though we know he has been very busy with his house, will doubtlessly come to the fore to guard his title of "The Sid Grauman of Kansas City." Thanks Ed., for letting us see that you are in the race. And let's see what else you are going to do.

Ford Chased Ford In Gag Pulled By Mitchell Conery

Since he has been located in Mobile, Alabama, Mitchell Conery, manager of the Lyric Theatre, has been turning out some novel ballyhoos that seem to us to rate the expression of "being able to click in any part of the country" due to the "comedy touch."

His latest one, as the photo clearly shows, was used in conjunction with "The Runaway Bride," in which he had a man and woman, in separate cars, chasing each other through the town.

Two Ford runabouts were promoted from the local dealer. One of these was bannered on both sides, "Runaway Bride." And the other one was bannered "Lyric—Friday, Saturday."

A man dressed as a bride occupied the first car; the one being bannered, "Runaway Bride." And the car chasing the other one was occupied by a man attired in full dress. At different intervals, the man doing the chasing would practically stand up and apparently lean forward to convey the impression that he was trying to catch his "bride."

The stunt evoked plenty of comment and was a very effective means for publicizing the picture, as the word-of-mouth comment that spread an hour after the stunt first made its appearance spread like wildfire and by the next time the ballyhoo came out on the streets people were actually watching for it. Thanks, Mitchell, for passing this one along to us. And while we think of it, we haven't a photo of you in our files. How about sending one in to us so that we can present you with your next contribution?

Fred Cruise Gave Chinese Parasols To Lady Patrons

With service, kindliness, and courtesy as parts of the watchword of the Fox Wesco Theatres, it was up to Fred Cruise, manager of the Criterion Theatre, to do something when crowds began to storm the doors, in sultry weather, to witness "Our Blushing Brides."

The house opens ordinarily at 10 o'clock, but due to the press of people it was found necessary to open at a quarter to the hour. The place was jammed in less than 20 minutes, as the house seats only 1,500—and so all through the day crowds of women, four abreast, stood waiting patiently for admittance to the theatre.

Sweltering in the heat, their heads unprotected from the glaring rays of the sun, it soon began to become irksome for the women and murmurings and grumblings of protestation were heard. Then Cruise hit upon an idea—he supplied the ladies with Chinese parasols. It was a knockout and the photo will show you what an effect this move created. Plenty of good-will was garnered by Cruise on this one; and the women who were presented with the parasols were talking about it for some time after.

When a showman turns out work like this, we want to hear more of it. So, listen, Fred! How about keeping us posted? And when you send in your next contribution, include your photo along with it.

Atlanta Gasped At Wadkins' Campaign On "Dawn Patrol"

With "The Dawn Patrol" as his film offering, and an aircraft corporation right alongside of him, it was only natural that V. L. Wadkins, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Atlanta, Ga., would tie it up and grab off a flock of publicity for his house.

The aircraft corporation furnished their latest invention to instruct people in flying—the Wind Tunnel. This wind tunnel was mounted on a truck in which the aeroplane company furnished both driver and truck. The wind tunnel was taken to six selected spots in suburban territory selected by the theatre management.

They also arranged for the use of power to operate the wind tunnel. These seelcted six spots were covered by a schedule mapped out by the theatre and ran over a period of three days in advance of picture. The aeroplane company also furnished 5,000 pamphlets for distribution by the operator of the Wind Tunnel, and the theatre furnished gum stickers to go on front cover of pamphlet, with illustration and copy on "Dawn Patrol."

The operator of the Wind Tunnel was a girl dressed in an aviator's outfit. This Wind Tunnel was used in front of the theatre during the peek hours for both matinee and night during the week's run of picture; again working the suburban territory in between times. This novelty proved a distinct attraction to kids in both the city and suburban towns.

Parachutes, propellers and a big Liberty motor were also on display in the lobby throughout run of picture.

Saturday night (opening day of picture), Manager Wadkins arranged all the details that took place at 8 o'clock and what actually appeared to be a "night" airplane battle. Curtiss-Wright furnished, without cost, two planes equipped for night flying for this stunt as well as furnishing two licensed pilots to fly the planes.

The warden of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary loaned two brand new search lights for the air battle and these were mounted on trucks. All three newspapers gave publicity in advance assuring a huge crowd to witness the battle. And each newspaper also furnished a reporter to fly in the planes for the purpose of writing a feature story on the thrills they got out of the "air battle" and how Atlanta looked at night.

At 8 o'clock Saturday night, the two planes appeared 1,000 feet in the air directly above the Publix-Paramount theatre. Two huge searchlights, mounted on trucks and parked at the curb in front of the theatre threw beams of light in the air—spotting the planes. A machine gun firing blank cartridges started firing from the roof of the theatre and at the same time a siren started full blast on top of the theatre. The entire battle lasted fourteen minutes. The stunt was very spectacular and was the first of its kind ever staged in Atlanta.

Wadkins chose the time of 8 o'clock for the battle due to so many people being on the streets at this particular hour. And after the battle, three of the ushers were placed on the sidewalk announcing the starting time of the last performance which helped to bring in many. Traffic was practically at a standstill as 10,000 people gathered together near the Paramount theatre.

And almost all of that ten thousand, and a good many more who had witnessed the stunt or read about it in the papers were present during the run of the picture. Thanks, "V. L.," for letting us in on your activities and for passing them along so that your fellow members can see what you are doing to bring them up to the box-office. And by the way, we notice, in looking over our files, that we haven't a picture of you. How about sending one along to us; and at the same time give us a little dope on your show career?

HERE'S YOUR HELP, YOUNG MAN!

An eleven year old boy asks us for help.

"Please write a series of editorials telling motion picture houses that they are not giving us a square deal when they leave the comedy off the program."

We can't promise a "series" but we are willing to do something, for somehow what this boy says appeals to us. Maybe we miss the comedy too.

In the days of the silent picture, the comedy—slap-stick though it might be—was the high spot of the program for the children. They looked at the feature presentation, to be sure, but though it might be the mightiest spectacle ever conceived or the most tremendous drama written, it did not compare in effect with the reel in which the hero found himself soused in a barrel or was knocked "cuckoo" by the jar of flowers that fell from the second story window. The roars of laughter proved that, and some pretty tired men and women found relief in the comedy also. But with the rise of the talkies, the comedy went the way of changing entertainment. A few are still given, talkie style. But for the most part the youngster who pays his dime or his twenty cents finds a song or dance skit in place of that comedy he came to see. And he thinks it isn't a "square deal." We don't know whether we have any influence with Hollywood and the movie magnates or not. But if we have we would say, "Give the youngster their comedy, talkie or otherwise. It will benefit both you and the children. For a young America that knows how to laugh is better off than one that doesn't."

When the above editorial appeared in the Milwaukee Journal, Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Alhambra Theatre in the Wisconsin city, taking advantage of an unusually fine comedy he was playing, immediately made up a three sheet panel and displayed it on an easel in front of the box-office. The panel lay-out showed an arrow pointing to the editorial reproduction. Underneath, Meyer used copy: Here's Your Help, Young Man! Come in and see—(Star and Title).

Meyer's move was well timed. Business jumped a few more dollars, he secured good-will and plenty of publicity. We wonder—

ARE YOU THINKING OF THE KIDS TOO?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

IT'S A BIG COUNTRY!

. . . and there are lots of theatres in it and thousands of Club members and other showmen . . . but how could we ever expect to get around to see all of them on one trip . . . is more than we can figure out . . . yet we already hear rumblings of dissatisfaction from some of the cities we have visited because we could not get to see everyone of the managers—so we decided to take out typewriter (that's flattering a l—y Corona) and try to express our heartfelt regrets because we have had to pass up so many of the boys when we should have loved to stay a couple of days in each house . . . get well acquainted with each and every man . . . and when a trip like that would be over . . . somewhere about four years from now . . . we could then sleep with a clear conscience that we had "done our duty" by all the boys and none would have had a single kick to register . . .

. . . be it therfore resolved that all theatres and showmen not visited on the present trip (so far as said trip has progressed) be, and are hereby notified, that we humbly apologize and promise faithfully that we will most assuredly see them on the next trip . . . whenever that will be . . . but in the meantime we do not want them to harbor any hard feelings or grudges . . . as a matter of fact they ought to be thankful that we passed them by this time . . . just think of all the crabbing we might have done . . . and criticizing . . . and other things that self-respecting visitors should never do . . . so I don't know but that the apologies ought to be reversed . . .

Is Miss Nibler On The Go? Read This And You'll Know

Considering the way she turns out stunt after stunt it begins to appear as though all that Theresa Nibler does is work. This lady manager of the Electric Theatre in Springfield, Mo., has been displaying some fine stuff in the past and her recent work is right on a line with it, as witness what she did when she entered proxies of "The Two Black Crows" in a tree sitting contest to plug "Anybody's War."

With the various endurance contests being staged throughout the country, she turned to one of the latest endurance fads, that of the tree sitting contest, which is especially popular among the young folk of Springfield, Mo.

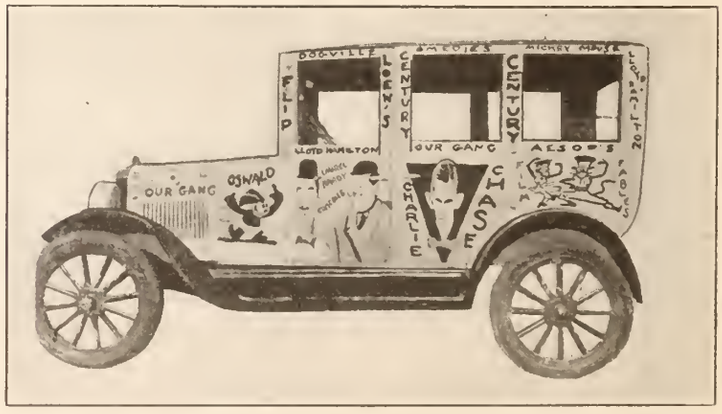
A tree was put at the edge of the sidewalk directly in front of the theatre. Cut-outs of two black crows were put in the tree with a large sign—the sign carrying copy about stars, title of picture, theatre and playdates. The stunt was made more effective at night by having blinkers in the eyes of the crows.

It attracted plenty of attention and made mighty fine publicity for the picture. Even the newspapers in their write-ups about it claimed the theatre had the original tree sitters.

And here's another that went over to big box-office receipts and one which you too might be able to use—a shooting contest among the members of the local police department—which she used as part of her campaign on "Anybody's War." The contest was held in a lot adjacent to the theatre just prior to the Saturday midnight show—the opening of the picture.

An unusually large crowd turned out to see the members of the Police Department in the first tournament they had ever held. Among the immense crowd present were probably included a few representatives of the underworld but after witnessing the excellent shots turned in by the cops, they undoubtedly will pass this town up for their malicious assaults. The police themselves got a big kick out of the tournament and are anxious to have another one in the near future.

The papers gave the stunt a good break, and this, coupled with the word-of-mouth advertising that had resulted, enabled Miss Nibler to turn in a better week than would have been had she not been on the job as usual and taken advantage of every opportunity. We are glad to note that she is continuing her "ace" work and we are sure that she will keep us informed of her doings so that we can pass them to the rest of the Club.



Miss Chelle Janis Gives Shorts Break And Always Clicks

Determined that her platform "A comedy a day keeps that doctor away," was going to be adopted by the residents in the vicinity of the Century Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Chelle Janis, live-wire show-woman manager of the house set out on a campaign, that closely rivaled her recent "Dog Beauty Contest" idea.

Her assistant, Milton Leiber, a new member of the Club incidentally, was despatched about the neighborhood to secure an old Ford of the earliest possible vintage. Milton met with many defeats while trying to procure the ancient Henry; but finally, desperation driving him to the point of prevarication, he adopted the guise of a Hollywood movie cameraman, and pleaded that he could, in the interest of art, pay but ten dollars for a car, instead of the twenty-five which the mercenary dealers demanded as sufficient compensation for harboring and sheltering the relic of "less than six."

He finally obtained one. A decrepit old Overland, that had seen better days and better times. Being something of an artist, he possesses talent at caricaturing; and the result may be seen in the cut we are reproducing. All over the car he painted the various comedy attractions. "Our Gang," "Mickey Mouse," "Dogville Comedies," every type of comic short was represented.

As the car was able to wheeze along under its own motive power, it chugged along the streets of the neighborhood, attracting plenty of attention and being the subject of a great deal of comment, especially from the kids, who recognized, more readily than did the adults, their favorites of the "laughing pictures." The ten dollars expended in the purchase of the automobile was more than paid back in the subsequent business that Miss Janis enjoyed and the renewed interest in the Miss Janis is indeed to be commended for the way in which she plugs her shorts. As we have stated often, that there is nothing like plugging these one and two reelers when they deserve it, we are more than pleased to receive this contribution. We hope that she and Leiber will keep us posted on the future work turned out at the Century because we are sure that it will prove interesting and helpful to the rest of the Club. And Miss Janis, when you give us your next contribution, how about a picture of yourself? We also want to welcome Mr. Leiber and we are sure that he is going to pick up some corking tips on show selling from this active show woman.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

LOOKING OVER THE FIELD WITH "CHICK"

"We Aim To Please"

If we may be permitted to lift the butcher's and grocer's pet line for impressing people. But our little (?) jaunt (only about 10,000 miles) naturally was productive of several valuable suggestions from the many members and showmen visited. And among the leading request was that for more newspaper advertising reproductions.

And that's a good sign, because it proves that the boys in the field are anxious to improve their newspaper ads and are keen enough to grasp the fine points in the ads turned out by other showmen and reproduced on our club pages. Hi Ho; seems as though the theatre industry owes us a vote of thanks, because among the many innovations introduced on our own Club pages was that of reproducing newspaper ads from large and small towns all over the country, yes, and also a few from foreign countries.

If you want to pick up new and original ideas for improving newspaper advertising, just follow your Club pages religiously and see how your brother managers are doing the trick. We show, from time to time, ads from little, so-called one-horse towns, medium-sized cities, big cities and then we show you the brain-children of leading ad artists from all over the country. If you don't believe the boys in the tanks are not on their toes for this kind of stuff you should look over the requests that have come into my office for copies of the Whitbeck stuff. There's a guy who knows advertising and ad writing. My gosh, if I could only develop the knack to a fraction of the way Frank does it, I would be tickled pink.

Club Index Very Popular

Another Club feature which has met with instantaneous success is the monthly Index which is now in its fourth month. We got the greatest thrill of the trip (next to seeing all those membership certificates hanging in the members' offices) when we saw how carefully the boys were filing those indexes.

And following their own suggestions, we will compile a complete and better classified index at the end of each six month period. In this way you will be able to destroy the previous six single indexes and substitute the complete one in its place. You will also find it easier to locate the various classifications as they will all be grouped together on the six month index, whereas now, you must go through each of the monthly lists to locate the particular stunt of campaign you need.

I mention these things as I go along because it is well to know that suggestions are the most welcome things to come into Club headquarters. As a matter of fact, some of the most important things accomplished on our pages have been the direct result of a suggestion from one of our many members and readers. Which accounts, in no small way, for the popularity of the Managers' Round Table Club throughout the entire world.

A Marvelous Experience

These notes are being written during a layoff of the trip when we spent a few days at Banff Springs in Alberta, Canada. It sort of gave us an opportunity of resting up from the grind of constant traveling, and if you doubt that statement, just try it yourself and see if its all peaches and cream. Running for trains, eating in punk dining cars and sleeping in punker berths, while engineers conspire to jolt the train at every possible moment, either to annoy you while eating or disturb you while sleeping.

But the lay-off provided the chance to review some of the thoughts which have been crowding our mind for several weeks since we left Hollywood far behind, and lest some of the boys who so willingly made suggestions think we had forgotten all about them, we just want them to know that we not only appreciated their suggestions, but we have made careful notes of what they had to say, and in most cases those suggestions will either be carried out to the letter or else we will give them a fair trial. Oak? Oak!

And just because we may have passed up, or lacked the time, to visit any of the boys who might be reading this, if YOU have some pet idea for making the Club more interesting or profitable to our members, just shoot those ideas along. I'll be back at my desk the day after Labor Day and will be ready to dig right in.

Now For Regina

After over two years of correspondence with the city of Regina, in the person of our well known regional chairman, we at last have set foot in it and now we're all set to find out what "makes the wheels go round." Let's see now, we have, besides Pete Egan, Dave Borland over at the Met., Graham at the Grand, and several others whose names escape us for the moment. We took special note of the Capitol when the hotel bus passed that way, some thing sort of Pete Eganish about it, thought we, but then again, we might be just a little bit prejudiced on account of Pete.

It's ancient history by this time, but we must repeat that through the fine efforts of Pete Egan in the western division and Jack Allan in the Eastern division, the Round Table Club has been able to line up, what we should judge to be, about seventy-five per cent of the Canadian showmen. And how those boys can sell their wares, is also ancient history; no, I should correct that statement, it's not ancient, it is as modern as each week's issue of our Club pages. Most every issue will reveal some stunt, gag or idea, successfully executed or originated by our membership north of the border.

And surrounding this prairie town are many other live-wire Club members, all demonstrating their ability and claim for high powered showmanship, week in and week out.

It's a Cold Country

And talking about this neck of the woods makes me wonder whether chain management, as practiced by the circuits back east, would get them very far. Especially that peculiar notion about switching managers every other month or so. Picture, if you can, one of those "live-wires" from around New York way, or any other place for that matter, hiking up to Regina and trying to get acclimated to some of those 50 below zero days that occur so frequently during the winter months.

Switching, hiring and firing managers may be a peach of a pastime to some district managers we have met in our travels, but they'll have more than their share of headaches if they start to work it up in those freezing cities of Canada. And what would be the use of it all anyway? The boys running the houses up there now are good, competent men and they know their theatres and towns. They can now go home and get a good night of solid sleep without worrying as to whether they will be fired the next day or the next week.

That's the way any man should be able to work. Make him worry and you take away his greatest need for efficient functioning, namely, peace of mind and the ability to concentrate on his activities and campaigns. How in hell some of the district managers can expect a manager to put his heart and soul into his work when he is constantly worrying about his job, is beyond me, but they seem to like to keep a man worried. "Keeps him on his toes" is what one of them told me. Baloney. Keeps him from concentrating would be a better way to put it.

But, wait a minute. I didn't intend to go off into anything like this. I was merely trying to lead right up to some of the interesting details of my visit to Regina and it will always remain as one of the most pleasant memories of our trip. Thanks, of course, to Dave Borland and Pete Egan. Was Dave right on the job when I parked myself at the hotel? Well, well, we'll tell the world he was. Buzz, went the phone, and ditto all thoughts of rest and relaxation. Dave showed us plenty and in less than an hour after we hit the town we were sorry we had to move on so soon. All too soon, too. But we are optimists and expect to see Regina once more before we die.

We'll be telling you more about this place in next week's installment, as you can see, we are running short of space now. Whether you know anything about Canada, or not, you'll want to read more about Regina and its live-wire managers.

Canadian Showmen Happy

Are the Canadian showmen happy in their jobs? We'll say. Every place we went, no matter whether it was a city or a town, the manager always had a good word to say about the executives. And why not? They are all well treated, given vacations, no Sunday shows, and they are all so sure that they are going to be with the company the next week that they lay out campaigns a month in advance. And when they want to pay out a little extra dough for exploitation they can generally get it, providing, of course, that the request is a reasonable

Their ushers and usherettes trained to the minute, and you can always find a house representative around. It may be the manager standing in the foyer greeting his patrons—and they seem to know them all—or if he is not there the assistant performs the same function. Ask the house staff any question concerning the theatre and you'll get the correct reply immediately.

David Silverman Cashed In On Re-Quest Review Week

"Request Review Week" meant two things to David Silverman, manager of the Belmont Theatre in New York City. One, that he would be able to inject a couple of new angles to stunts that he pulled when the picture first played the house, and, two, that he could hit a higher box-office mark than the former one, and at the same time grab off some more publicity and good-will for his house.

One of the best days of the special week was turned in on "Thunderbolt," and no wonder. Just look at what he did to sell it. We would like you to know that he is located in a neighborhood house and has to be very sure that any stunts he cares to work will click—for this reason he has to know his public. And the photos will show you that he knows them alright, especially the kids. When you can jam youngsters into a house on a hot summer day you are certainly displaying showmanship and we can say that Silverman displayed it on this particular picture.

He constructed a special prison, made out of beaver board, for his box-office. The "prison" was complete in every detail. In order to keep the jail tone in all of his work, he arrayed the cashier and doorman in prison outfits. In the lobby he placed an electric chair and from the photo you will be able to get an idea of what the kids thought of it. They liked it so much that they were talking about it when they left the house, and this so excited the curiosity of the other kids in the neighborhood that they hastened to the house to see the film and look at the "lectric chair."

All during the special "Request Review Week" he flew banners and pennants from his marquee, and this move, coupled with the various stunts he pulled, did a lot to bring them up to the box-office and help turn in one of the best summer weeks in a long time. We want to thank him for letting us see what he is doing and as we know he is always active we expect to hear from him again in the very near future.

Levey's Personal Endorsement Meant Something In Town

With William Powell turning out vehicle after vehicle with amazing rapidity, it was almost a certainty that some theatre managers, whose houses are booked by a "chief booker," would find themselves with two of the popular Paramount star's pictures, following in close order. It happened to Bill Levey, club regional chairman for Long Island and manager of the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington.

Bill was faced with a Powell film one week; and another one seven days later. But he sold them both by his showmanship. As he thought the second and latest picture the best of the erstwhile Philo Vance's endeavors, he utilized the drawing power that his personal endorsement carries and despatched special message through his mailing list.

To give you an idea of how he went about it, we are quoting the first two paragraphs and the last—since the body of the letter contained the regular sales talk. The letter read:

"Dear Madam:

"If I were to say to you—'William Powell is coming to my theatre next Monday in a new picture' you would probably make up your mind, on the instant, to go and see the production.

"But my message is more interesting than that, and when you have read it you will probably make up, not only your own mind but the minds of all your family and friends, to go and see this production.

"I am sure that you will like 'For the Defense' and I take pleasure in recommending it to you—and your family and friends."

William A. Levey.

As Bill's endorsement of a film means something in the town, the theatre was jammed to capacity. This angle, though a valuable one, is seldom used by Levey as he well knows the consequences if it is overdone. And we are sure that you, too, know best when and how to use it.

Morris Rosenthal Promotes Articles Almost Every Week

Promotions of merchandise from their local dealers have long been an important factor in the show selling of any theatre showman-manager. They have promoted free candy, food, drinks and almost every other thing imaginable which was distributed free to the patrons. Of course, there have been times when small articles were not promoted; but that was the time when something big, like an auto, a radio or things of like nature were secured. Such a tie-up was the one engineered by Morris Rosenthal, manager of the Lyceum Theatre in Duluth, Minn.

Morris hustled out one day and promoted himself a nice new electric refrigerator from a local dealer, all free of charge, with no strings attached. The dealer, in addition to supplying the refrigerator also paid for large ads in the daily newspapers. When the first announcement broke regarding the free gift that the theatre was offering, a good deal of talk was created, which gradually circulated about until almost every patron of the Lyceum knew of it—and many other residents of Duluth, also.

As the stunt was pulled in the summer time it meant a lot. The display itself was very attractive and consisted of a glass enclosed top with running water pumped into the glass, continuously, running over the motor which was in action at all times. This display in the lobby was enhanced by the special colors and blended effects which Morris designed as a background.

With showmen all over the country pulling stunts of this kind, we feel that if, by any chance, you haven't tried it yet, it might, providing local conditions permit, be an excellent move for you, too. Think it over. You know how to handle a stunt of this sort, and how to get the most out of it; so that's all we need say. Right, Morris?

Brides' Names In Local Paper Gave Rice Free Space

Through a tie-up with his local newspaper, Harry Rice, manager of the Temple Theatre in Meridian, Miss., secured plenty of free newspaper space as part of his campaign for "Our Blushing Brides." The newspaper published a 2 column by 20 inch ad in which was given detailed information about the contest, title of picture, star, theatre and playdates.

The contest primarily concerned brides of the current year In order for a bride to win one of the cherished guest tickets, the newspaper issued the following instructions: "Each day for four days, commencing today, the Star will publish among its classified ads, the names of ten Meridian brides of the current year. Each bride whose name is published, upon application to the Star classified department, will be presented one guest ticket to see the talking picture which inspired this 'Find Your Name' contest. This picture is 'Our Blushing Brides,' Metro's sensational sequel to 'Our Dancing Daughters,' which will be presented at the Temple Theatre for two days starting Friday, Aug. 8th. So brides, read carefully the Star classified ads during the next four days!"

And did the brides read? And how! Every name that the paper published was redeemed. This made a big hit with the paper too, as it proved that they had readers who thought something of the classified ads. This work is typical of the showmanship Rice displays, and we know that he is going to continue it. What do you say, Harry?

Julius Lamm Gets Good-Will By His Free Kiddie Shows

"Good will created in any theatre is the root for success," says Julius Lamm, manager of the Fox Theatre in Shebogan, Wis. He then goes on and adds "at least, that's what it means to me."

Well, Julius, you should know. And in order that the Club members may see what you are doing along the lines of good-will you will notice that we are reproducing a couple of pictures showing the crowd of kids you entertained recently, and giving a description of the party.

Lamm contacted a kiddie camp on the outskirts of the city and invited the kids, some of them who had never seen one before, to the movies. The youngsters were delighted with the special show he gave and they received another surprise at the conclusion of the performance when they were presented with a balloon each and a photo of a well known movie actress.

CONGRATS TO WEISS, INC.!

Congratulations are now in order for Al. Weiss, Jr. Al was married just a short time ago in Jacksonville, Fla. As a good many of our members know, he formed half of that stellar combination, Weiss-Perlberg, Inc., whose show selling exploits have been featured on our pages ever since the corporation commenced operations at the Florida Theatre some eighteen months ago.

Al will continue as manager of the Florida; but we learn (not without surprise) that Jonas Perlberg is headed for a new berth on the Public Circuit. Well, we extend our best wishes to both of the fine showmen and we are sure that their future activities will be as meritorious as in the past.

HERE'S EARLE HOLDEN!

Meet Earle Holden "face to face." Earle is the showman whom we told you about a couple of weeks ago when we published an account of the "ace" tie-up he made with the Cuban government on "The Dawn Patrol," crashing the front page of all the papers in Miami Fla., by it.

Holden has been in the show game for a number of years, and if you have followed the Club pages, week after week, you know what he can do. We don't intend this little box to be a column devoted entirely to the Holden personalities—we are just trying to introduce you to a man who is up among the leaders in the South.

The best test of a showman's ability is the success of his house; and when we tell you that the Fairfax Theatre is holding its head well above water—and continues to do so all year around—you will know that Earle is there with the goods. He has long been an active member of the Round Table and we are sure that he is going to continue the same brand of showmanship he has displayed in the past, and continue to pass it along.

The local newspaper, a hard nut to crack when it came to free publicity, devoted two columns daily for a week on the story, and also stressed the fact that moves of the sort Lamm attempted were right in line with the editorial policy. The good-will garnered from his angle more than repaid Lamm for the work he put in; but then, he doesn't mind work, as it is just what he has always done to keep his house up among the leaders in the state of Wisconsin.

Girl In Newspaper Dress Sold El Paso On Hempill's Show

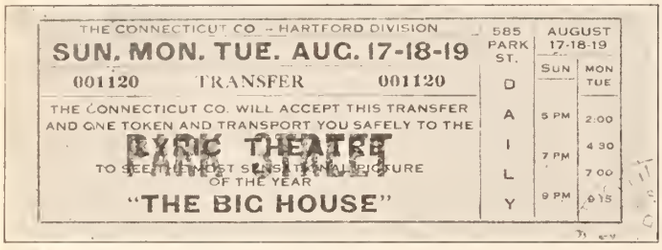
If we had our way, we'd hand the "Lone Star" in Texas, "The Lone Star State," to W. H. Hempill, manager of the Wigwam Theatre in El Paso, Texas, for his novel ballyhoo used in conjunction with "The Lady of Scandal," starring Ruth Chatterton.

He secured the services of a girl and attired her in a dress made out of newspapers with the scandal headlines showing up very prominently. The girl also carried a sign on her back giving title of picture, star, theatre and playdates.

She paraded the crowded streets and shops on Saturday in advance of picture's opening. This caused so much comment that the newspaper came out with a story about the ballyhoo—giving picture, theatre and playdates.

The girl, in her newspaper dress, also attended a dance at the City Park Saturday evening. With some two or three hundred persons in attendance, she created more attention—all of which helped to publicize the picture.

What a treat it proved to be for El Paso. The residents had never seen a stunt like it before and consequently plenty of interest was occasioned with word-of-mouth publicity spreading like wildfire. As a result of this, Hemphill was able to report that his business had jumped considerably. We would like to point out that this stunt does not necessarily have to be used on this one picture alone; it may be worked on all films of similar nature. So if you think it will go in your town, file the stunt away until you get ready to use it. We hope that "W. E." is going to follow up this story with another ace angle, because we feel that he wants to help his fellow members by letting them know how he sells his shows in order that they may be able to take advantage of his work to boost their own business. How about it, "W. H."?



MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

THE "TEE-HEE TRANSFERS"!

One of the heartiest laughs that he ever enjoyed was perpetrated recently by Johnny "Jack" Callahan, at his stronghold the Lyric Theatre in Hartford, Conn.

It seems that Jack wanted to tell the town about his show feature; but he wanted to tell them in a manner that would mean something. The cut will show you what he did.

Special heralds were made up in the form of transfers. As you will notice in the cut, the center line is devoted to copy stating: "The Connecticut company will accept this transfer and one token and transport you safely to the Lyric Theatre to see (picture).

Very few people got wise to the idea. The street car conductors accepted the dummy transfers, accompanied by the full fare, and for hours tried to figure out the meaning.

Showmanship? Say, give Jack a big hand! He deserves it for this one.

Bead Heralds Were Unique Plugs Used By James McKoy

For his campaign on "Let's Go Native," James H. McKoy, manager of the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla., turned out some excellent angles and since we feel that perhaps you, too, would care to use them, we are passing them along to you.

One of the outstanding stunts used in advance was the distribution of beaded heralds. A bead attached to a string which in turn was attached to a card was the novel beaded herald. Copy on the card read in part, "Here's your costume! Now you can go native, too! LET'S GO NATIVE with Jack Oakie—Jeanette MacDonald, etc.—LET'S GO NATIVE—The funniest show in captivity—OLYMPIA—Aug. 5-6-7."

The beaded heralds were a bit different than anything heretofore distributed and proved quite a prized possession by those getting them, in that they had a great time showing them to their friends. And incidentally, this also helped to advertise the picture.

In a department store window was a three sheet style A cut-out of Jeanette MacDonald with real grass skirt on cut-out. Attached to this cut-out was a motor on eccentric that kept the grass skirt moving. Back of this display were palm trees and one of them had a life size cut-out of Jack Oakie as if watching Jeanette MacDonald dancing. All around the edge of the window were dancing Hula girl cut-outs.

The outer lobby front was entirely covered with bamboo poles and palm leaves to give a very tropical atmosphere. The marquee had a fringe of palm leaves suspended from it with Spanish moss mixed in. All fixtures in the lobby had Spanish moss draped over them and all lighting was done in green.

Suitable music and the theme numbers were also featured with loud speaker being placed right in the palm leaves over the music booth. On the opening night of picture, the value of the lobby was enhanced by a group of South Sea Girls playing ukeleles.

And when the "first nighters" got a look at this, talk spread around, and as a result business went along fine.

Many Celebrities Were In Attendance Along With Binstock

Paul Binstock, manager of the Astoria Grand Theatre in Astoria, L. I., proved recently that his Mickey Mouse Club plays an important part in the affairs of his community when he, together with his hundreds of members, were invited to participate in the opening ceremonies of a new wading pool for children that the city had donated.

The pool was constructed to prevent the kids from swimming in the East River, the waters of which were said to be polluted, thus endangering the welfare of the children. The opening day of the pool found five thousand people on hand to witness the occasion. Binstock had promoted a few thousand samples of butterscotch candies and these were distributed to the kids, aiding materially in keeping them quiet while the borough president, George U. Harvey and many other notables spoke. Binstock was invited to take part also; and he gave a short speech, acting as representing the Fox organization, in which he stressed the circuit's policy of "co-operation with the city and state at all times."

Binstock was on the job and wide-awake to the extent of grabbing space for two twelve foot banners plugging the Mickey Mouse Club and the Astoria-Grand. And that's showmanship! Right before 5,000 people! As no sound cameramen were on hand, he had to have movies of the affair somehow; so he prevailed upon the city cameramen to shoot them. The pictures were run for an entire week at the theatre, to the accompaniment of non-sync music, and received with great enthusiasm from the patrons, many of whom saw themselves on the screen, the angle thus leading to the ringing in of relatives, at full price tickets, and perhaps—a special visit to see themselves again.

The opening of the pool rated space in all of the city dailies and the Mickey Mouse Club came in for mention in all of them. Though the photo from which the cut was made, that we are showing was rather blurred, we believe that you can get some idea of the crowds and also notice the banners in the background.

Binstock is to complimented on his work, and we must also say a word for Leon Sternberger, Paul's assistant, who helped him on the affair. It is interesting to note that Binstock claims that the Mickey Mouse Club is the biggest good-will builder his neighborhood has ever seen; and the kids flock to the weekly meetings. And, oh yes, before closing this little article we'd like you to know that he has made us a member. So your chairman is now member number 2996 of the Mickey Mouse Club at the Fox Astoria Grand Theatre. Oke Paul, but we may find it pretty hard to get to the meetings; but we feel that in view of the fact that we have just finished our tour, and must get to work and present the many new features that the Club members are offering for the new season, which they claim will be "bigger than the biggest," you'll excuse our non-attendance. Oke?

Morris Kaufman Is Clicking With His Mickey Mouse Club

Another Brooklyn, N. Y. showman clicked on his Mickey Mouse club opening. Morris Kaufman, manager of the Stratford Theatre, turned out an excellent campaign recently, that was of such merit that the neighborhood is still talking about it.

By selling the neighborhood merchants on the advertising value of the stunt, sufficient funds were raised for the printing of programs, membership cards, buttons, etc. A week before the opening ceremonies of the Mickey Mouse Club, a cut-out, constructed to represent a miniature boxing ring, complete with all its fistic paraphenalia even down to the water buckets, was placed in the lobby. Mickey Mouse himself, arrayed in pugilistis togs, commandeered the situation from his post in the center of the ring. A three-sheet frame announced the event, and that gay tone of the marquee served to attract attention also.

A tie-up with a local dancing and singing school enabled Kaufman to secure talent to insure a stage show of unsurpassable entertainment; one that would delight any child. An invitation was then dispatched to the Borough President, who promptly replied that he would be on hand. A local band was recruited by Kaufman and the musicians were pressed into service as a welcoming party.

The morning of the inauguration, and at two hours before the scheduled time, 5,000 children milled about the doors of the theatre, jamming the sidewalks and obstructing traffic. Reserve policemen were on hand to keep order and they managed to do it—though not without some difficulty. The arrival of the Borough President was greeted with a tumultous ovation; and as soon as he had recovered from his surprise at the spontaneous outburst, he was inducted into membership. He then proceeded to take charge of things, viewed the stage presentation, which had been produced by Kaufman, and after its conclusion expressed his keen appreciation and left.

Nearly all of the city papers, and a number of the dailies broke next day with stories about the show at the Stratford; and it is interesting to note that over 2,000 kids had to be turned away. The membership in the Club, which has been running but two weeks, has already reached 3,000 and the arrival of applications daily portend a still larger enrollment. This is Mr. Kauman's first contribution to our pages, and we are sure that now he has been represented, and in view of the fact that he turns out work like this, we will hear lots more about his showmanship. We want to thank his assistant, Maury L. Ashmann, for passing this along to us and we hope to hear more about him, too, because working with a showman like Mr. Kaufman ought to mean plenty of experience for him.

Paul Short Turned Out Complete Campaign On This One

One of the most complete and effective exploitation campaigns to take place in Tampa, Florida, was made by Manager Paul Short of the Tampa Theatre, on "Paramount on Parade."

Aside from the usual means of advertising and exploiting, Short arranged for the Tampa Motor Car Co. of DeSoto Automobiles, to parade a line of DeSoto cars up the main street two days before the opening. The autos flew banners with the wording on it "DeSoto On Parade" & "Paramount On Parade," with the theatre and playdates on it.

A tie-up with the Red Mill Ice Cream Company resulted in their purchasing and distributing 3,000 heralds and 500 autographed photographs of Nancy Carroll, and on opening night they erected an ice cream stand in the lobby, from which they served ice cream cones to anyone who wanted one.

Each package that left the Piggly Wiggly stores in Tampa contained a herald with the name of one star on it appearing in "Paramount On Parade." A pair of tickets was given, as guests of the Piggly Wiggly stores, to each person getting twelve heralds with the names of the stars in the picture. It is estimated that more than ten thousand heralds were distributed in that manner.

Mother's Day cards distributed by the local florist contained the copy, "Send Her Flowers—Then Take Her To See 'Paramount On Parade'."

For three days before the opening and during the run of the picture, waitresses and soda dispensers in the town drug stores wore "Paramount On Parade" ribbons on their shoulders, and a prize of five dollars was awarded to the one who served most sundaes during the three days the picture ran. The five dollar awards were made by the owners of the drug store.

The entire campaign was arranged with little or no expense

WINNING AND HOLDING NEW FRIENDS EVERY DAY!

And Here's Some of Them!

MAUREY L. ASHMAN is the Assistant Manager of the Stratford Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and as he comes well recommended by Mr. Kaufman, the manager of the house, we feel that it is a sufficient introduction. We would like to hear more of this young showman's work in the near future; especially since he is just breaking into the game. So keep us posted Maury so we can be kept posted on how well you are learning the showmanship that Mr. Kaufman is well qualified to teach you.

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

V. L. WADKINS manages the Paramount Theatre in Atlanta, Ga. In order to know this showman's capabilities you need only to learn about the corking campaign he turned out for "The Dawn Patrol," when he tied up every available medium that Atlanta offered and turned in one of the biggest stunts and biggest weeks in the history of the theatre. We hope to present this account in a future issue, and though we haven't Wadkins photo now, we feel that he will send us one with his next contribution. Are we right "V. L."?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

RALPH E. MORRIS manages the Strand Theatre in Malden, Mass. In view of the fact that he has furnished us with some dope on his recent "Swing High" campaign we are going to let this showman's work speak for itself in a future issue. Welcome into the Club, Ralph; and remember we expect you to continue your activity, because when you turn out such good showmanship, we want to pass it along.

A. J. LAWTER is the manager of the Jefferson Theatre in Huntington, Ind. Mr. Lawter is very active around his territory; and in view of this fact we hope that he is going to transfer some of that activity to the Club so that we can let his brother showmen in on what he is doing to keep the box office receipts way above par. Give us some "info" on it "A. J.," will you?

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

JOE M. ESTES is the Publicity Director of the Saenger Theatre in New Orleans, La. Mr. Estes has supplied us with some information as to the various angles he uses to plug his attractions at the theatre; and we know that when they make their appearance they will prove helpful to the rest of the Club also. Listen, Joe, the only thing we lack is a photo and some dope on yourself. How about furnishing us with it?

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

WALTER GUTH manages the Lyric Theatre in Blue Island, Ill. While we have never been around Mr. Guth's section, we must admit that the name certainly sounds intriguing. How about giving us some dope on conditions out your way Walter, and at the same time include your photo and a little dope about yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin ! ! !———

DAVID G. SHADE manages the Empire Theatre in Kansas City, Mo. Located in a city that has quite a reputation for showmanship, Mr. Shade has to do some tall stepping to keep up with the leaders. In order that we may see what you are doing to bring them up to the box-office David, how about dropping us a note or two setting forth your methods. And you might also include your photo.

H. C. FISHER is the Assistant Manager of the Paradise Theatre in Milwaukee. The Paradise being under the able management of "Smiling" Bob Lewis, you may be sure that Mr. Fisher is going to learn some showmanship while he is there. And we know that he wants to, because Bob tells us that he is one of the best assistants he has ever worked with. Keep up the good work "H. C." and let's hear from you so that we can keep tabs on you.

MORRIS KAUFMAN is the manager of the Stratford Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. As we have already become acquainted with Mr. Kaufman's work, we know that he is going to prove a very active member. His Mickey Mouse Club has made his theatre's name familiar with everyone around the neighborhood. Welcome into the Club Morris.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

MILTON LEIBER is the Assistant Manager of the Century Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. Milton is working under the tutelage of the only woman manager on the Loew circuit—Miss Chelle Janis. As Miss Janis' work has appeared before on our pages, we are sure that you will agree that Milton is going to pick up a lot of valuable tips. Keep us posted Milton on what you are doing so that we can see how you are getting along.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WILLIAM SLATER manages the Strand Theatre in Plainfield, N. J. Having had rather a colorful background in show business, as publicity man, etc., Slater is well qualified to handle a house. We hope to hear more of him in the near future so that we can pass his work along to his fellow Club members.

S. E. SHIPLEY is the manager of the Paramount Theatre in Youngstown, Ohio. There has been, in the past, a good deal of showmanship displayed in this city and we have an idea that the record is going to be kept up. All of which means that we expect Mr. Shipley to be a very active member and furnish us with accounts of the various stunts that he pulls.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

R. E. NORMAN manages the Paramount Theatre in Clarksdale, Miss. Mr. Norman enjoys the distinction of being one of those showmen whose untiring work is the subject o feditorial comment. And when a showman can get that kind of publicity we'd like to hear more about him. Let's have some dope on yourself and your work "R. E.," and also your photo so that we can give you an introduction on the regular pages.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DAVID PERKINS manages the Strand Theatre in Lowell, Mass. He has been in the show game for a number of years, and his experience has fitted him for the show work he finds it necessary to turn out in order to keep his house up among the leaders of the division. We would like some more dope on his work and we hope that David will favor us with it in the near future.

COMPLETE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut toward such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributor. Where they vary in different cities or towns, the change is probably due to state or local censorship deletions.

In answer to the requests of hundreds of exhibitors the popular monthly feature in Associated Publications Kine-Quipment Section has been reprinted in book form, making available a handy aid to exhibitors encountering various sound equipment problems. "101 Answers to Sound Questions" has been especially prepared by George E. Chamberlain, recognized authority on sound equipment. This is not a treatise; not a book of theories; the questions asked are actual inquiries made by exhibitors on problems they have encountered and Mr. Chamberlain has answered them in brief practical form.

GAYETY COMEDIES

IDEAL COMEDIES

Watch 'em step! How those boys and girls can make whoopee! A Freshman-Sophomore battle isn't in it for action by comparison with these comedies of youth. With Ray Cooke and Marian Shockley supported by a big cast you'll find plenty to bring the laughs in the first one—

"THE FRESHMAN'S GOAT"

Johnny Hines' return to the Educational banner finds him in a story ideally suited to the talents that have made him famous. Smooth in story and action, well dressed, full of laughs, this first Gayety is a featurette that would make a week-end party look like a prayer meeting—

"JOHNNY'S WEEK END"

Hot tamale! What a send-off for this new talking comedy group. Mexican senoritas, and don juans, and serenades, and pursuing sheriffs, and cactus, and Tom Patricola, and Joe Phillips, and laughs. The director, William Goodrich, rates a whole "yes" chorus for this one—

BY THE BEST

"The THIRD ALARM"

Directed by EMORY JOHNSON, and featuring JAMES HALL, ANITA LOUISE, JEAN HERSHOLT, PAUL HURST, YOLA D'AVRIL, HOBART BOSWORTH and BLANCHE FREDERICI. Roaring engines, leaping flames—deeds of heroism, smashing climaxes—the most thrilling fire story ever written.

"CIRCUS PARADE"

A JAMES CRUZE SUPER-PRODUCTION from the story by JIM TULLY. A book read by millions — a story of two-fisted circus life. Poignant drama—a mad battle of circus men and towns people — aerial thrills—sawdust tragedy — screened by the master hand of Cruze—realist of the talking screen.

"ALOHA OE"

Directed by AL ROGELL. The passionate love of a fiery exotic beauty — tempestuous drama—the tragic death of the Hawaiian Bird of Paradise who flings herself into the lava vortex of a blazing volcano.

A JAMES WHALE PRODUCTION

To be a great picture by a great director—selected as one of the ten best directors of the world in the FILM DAILY poll—a master in the art of the spoken screen drama as exemplified in the greatest picture ever made—"JOURNEY'S END" conceded by all a picture achievement. The story and cast of MR. WHALE'S super-production to be announced shortly.

"MORAN of the LADY LETTY"

A thrilling, gripping, glamorous tale of the sea by FRANK NORRIS. A girl who sailed the seas like a man—who taught a pampered son of fortune to fight for love and life—who faced a slant-eyed pirate crew and conquered! Savage smugglers raving the Pacific—a dare-devil man-girl who knew no fear—a flabby society sheik shanghaied and made a man—a murderous mutiny—a burning schooner and its race with death!

PRODUCTIONS

DIRECTORS-WITH THE FOREMOST STARS

"A GIRL of the LIMBERLOST"

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER, a great book brought to life—a girl's battle to find her rightful place in society—murder in a swamp—the sombre woods brooding over the mystery of a man's death—a girl's heroic struggle against terrific odds.

"LEFTOVER LADIES"

Adapted from the original by URSULA PARROTT, author of "EX-WIFE" and "STRANGERS MAY KISS." A woman—beautiful, desired freedom no matter what the cost—she laughed at the bonds of matrimony—she defied convention—she loved—she paid. A drama of a woman who loved not wisely but too well.

"The BARBARIAN"

Story by A. P. YOUNGER. Screen play by HARVEY H. GATES. Directed by BERT GLENNON. North China and its savage bandits—an American Robin Hood who leads them—a crafty Mandarin who steals silver shipments and is "hi-jacked" by the white man. Strange, picturesque characters drawn with bold strokes across a background of Oriental mystery and intrigue. Battles in the mountain fastnesses—raids by savage hordes. Thrills. Action!

A JAMES CRUZE PRODUCTION

Some of the greatest successes of this master director have been history-making epic productions of a spectacular nature. His handling of big themes, huge crowds of people, his deft touch in the transition from "mob" scenes to close-ups of individuals, never once losing the massive sweep of his theme, will be exemplified at its best in this production.

"The UNPARDONABLE SIN"

By RUPERT HUGHES. Outraged by soldiers, two women heroically fight for life and honor—a man's mad marriage to save his mother and sister from a fate worse than death—a hair-raising dash across the border—thrills and suspense that are gripping.

Tiffany's

16 SPECIAL

"The KEEPER of the BEES"

By GENE STRATTON-PORTER. A novel read by millions. The classic of the war-torn veteran, doomed to death from wounds, he sets forth on a journey to regain his health. His first adventure is to marry a woman he does not even see. A love story that grips the heart.

"CAUGHT CHEATING"

CHARLIE MURRAY and GEORGE SIDNEY in the most uproarious comedy they ever made—and that's saying something. Two names that are world-beaters at the box-office. The most famous comedy team on the screen in a hilarious story of speculation and frazzled finance.

"SHE GOT WHAT SHE WANTED"

A JAMES CRUZE PRODUCTION. Taken from the Broadway stage success of the same name by Edward Rosner. Her husband has ceased to be her lover! Love was her heart's desire! In the arms of another man she sought the happiness she could not find at home!

"The DRUMS of JEOPARDY"

By HAROLD MACGRATH. A mystery story by the master of mystery story writers. Murder—stolen gems of fabulous value—a beautiful girl ensnared in the web of the underworld—a masterful detective who faces death to solve the puzzle. A notable addition to the list of mystery plays.

AL ROGELL PRODUCTION

AL ROGELL is the man who directed "MAMBA," the all-Technicolor feature that was one of Tiffany's outstanding successes last season. In that picture he made a big name for himself as an action director, one who can deftly weave into the romance of his picture, all the thrill and suspense the most ardent fan could desire. This will be personally directed by Rogell.

FEATURE PICTURES

"EXTRAVAGANCE"

With JUNE COLLYER, LLOYD HUGHES, OWEN MOORE, DOROTHY CHRISTY, JAMESON THOMAS and GWEN LEE. Directed by Phil Rosen. She sells her soul for a sable coat, and a thing of beauty becomes the destroyer of a family! The husband fighting to keep his business alive! The other man with millions to spend for women's favors. Drama, stark and soul-gripping!

"The SINGLE SIN"

If a woman errs but once and duly repents, should she be condemned forever in the eyes of the world? If she casts convention to the winds for the sake of love, is her sin the more easily condoned, or must she suffer the slights that are heaped upon women who love not wisely? A woman's soul laid bare in a poignant drama of the love tangle.

"The BELOVED ENEMY"

A thrilling, romantic story showing the eternal triangle against a new background—the conquered Rhineland and the American Army of Occupation. An American officer, a Countess whom he loves and a peasant girl who loves him. Romance, adventure and flashing action. Directed by AL ROGELL.

"WILD YOUTH"

Youth! Jazz! Pep! Whoopee! The wilder generation at its wildest! Wild parties! Wild love affairs! Never a thought for tomorrow, except "What shall we do next?" A sophisticated, bright, witty, snappy and spicy story of today with a splendid cast.

4 JAMES CRUZE PRODUCTIONS

FOUR REASONS WHY JAMES CRUZE IS A MAGNET AT THE BOX-OFFICE

1—Because he is one of the outstanding figures in the picture business.

2—Because he achieved world-wide fame from "The Covered Wagon," "Old Ironsides," "The Red Mark" and "The Great Gabbo."

3—Because his handling of epic themes ranks him second to no director in the industry.

4—Because his pictures strike a responsive chord in the hearts of the fans.

"HI-JACK"

Dark, tossing waves—pitching ships that skulk outside the twelve-mile limit—whizzing speed boats of the runners of contraband—the sputter of machine gun bullets from the Coast Guard cutter — the vicious coughing of the automatics of the outlaws! Thrills! Action! Suspense!

"STEEL"

Roaring blast-furnaces! Glaring, blinding flames from the white-hot metal! Blistering heat! An epic picture of an industry that is the backbone of a great nation. Out of this inferno emerges a man who has started at the bottom and fought his way to the top. A smashing story!

"LASCA"

From the famous poem by FRANK DESPREZ. A fiery, passionate girl of the frontier! A cowboy whose love she fought for with a knife! Saddle to saddle they rode across the plains of the Great Southwest, telling of a love that should last till death. Then, a rumble of hoofs—a stampede of cattle—and the wave of death sweeps over them. A Western of a type never before attempted.

Vol. XLII NEW YORK CITY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1930 No. 11

WHEN FAIR FELLOWS GET TOGETHER

SPEEDY ratification of the new standard exhibition contract may be expected as soon as the proposed rules of arbitration, which are to be made a part of that agreement, are completed.

This was emphasized at the Wisconsin exhibitor convention this week when Abram F. Myers, President of Allied, urged exhibitors everywhere to endorse the new draft.

He points out, as others familiar with the contract and its woes have done that the new agreement is not perfect. He comments, and again properly so, that it represents a sizeable improvement over the old types in use, despite the fact that, even in its revamped form, squawks and squawkers will not be silenced.

Bitter Sweet

FOR instance, there are some features which won't make distributors cheer and others which conceivably will turn exhibitors sour. But it is undeniably correct to state that the contract, as it emerges from back-breaking conferences, represents much that is the best in the minds of some of the industry's clearest and squarest thinkers.

The problem was to develop an instrument which came nearest to satisfying and protecting both the buyer and seller. Far from an easy task. The distributors, in some instances, were loath to relinquish any power. On the other hand, exhibitors often demanded more than they properly rated.

Scoring Score Charges

AT one point in the deliberations in which the Hays organization, the M. P. T. O. A. and Allied shared jointly, the exhibitor delegates united in a demand that score charges be eliminated. Most distributors proved sympathetic, but it developed that an attempt to make such elimination part of the standard contract would be an encroachment upon the rights of the individual distributor and perhaps savor of price dictation.

Exhibitors, at another turn, protested against a warranty to the effect that the contracting theatre was a licensee of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Such a clause, the argument ran, would make mandatory payment of the so-called "music tax."

AGAIN distributors were sympathetic. They pointed out that theatre owners had grounds for complaint, but demonstrated their inability to act, in view of contracts with the electrics under terms of which the disputed warranty was made a condition of the license for sound-recorded films.

Then distributors insisted that zoning should be divorced from the contract, contending that the subject of clearance properly is part of the agreement on playing time—something to be worked out as the buyer and seller worked out their deals. Independent exhibitors fought this, but the zoning tangle was omitted from the contract.

Chaos Vanishes

DISTRIBUTORS felt that exhibitors should play or pay for all contracted pictures. Theatre men protested against inflexible block booking and the upshot was a cancellation clause inserted in favor of the smaller exhibitor.

So it went, a spirit of give and take permeating the sessions. Not in the sense of trading were concessions made, but rather in the same spirit of friendly and helpful cooperation which led to the original conference call.

It appears to this observer that, with its faults and inadequacies, the contract is a forward step which should clear the chaos that followed in the wake of the Thacher decree declaring compulsory arbitration illegal.

Give It a Fair Deal

THE arbitration system set up under its terms is "moral arbitration," but is expected to prove effective in curbing contract violations. It seems reasonable to conjecture that chronic offenders will be weeded out of the picture, since each company has the undeniable right to choose its customers. So also is the right to demand security for performance of contract conceded by the exhibitor.

This much is certain and the observation brooks no refutation:

The contract is entitled to a fair shake from the entire industry, regardless of political allegiance. Only through application can flaws be unearthed and remedial measures adopted.

Bankers Put Screws on Producers to Determine Patent Tangle Liabilities

"True to the Whole Navy"

One big electric executive who is interested plenty in that $500,000 contract for sound machines for Uncle Sam's Navy is worrying over the existence of that much touted law of retribution.

If the gobs remember some of the "navy" pictures turned out in recent years by our producers, he believes the tars will insist upon a written guarantee from the industry divorcing movie flappers from sailor pictures. This truce with producers over garbled stories of gobs would automatically force Clara Bow ("the navy's girl friend") to surrender all claims on sailor boys—at least in pictures, he contends.

Enee Menee Minee Moe Who Will Get The Navy's Dough?

The nervous systems of at least three big electrics are known to be suffering from terrible strain. The disorder is diagnosed in high business circles as low-biditis, contraction of which usually is followed by a long and painful period during which the patient labors under nerve-racking tension. A rare and juicy plum, of large size, is the only known cure.

The patients in this pitiful case were suddenly stricken this week when Uncle Sam warmly invited all sound manufacturers to submit low bids for machines which he will install in 200 of his fighting boats. Films always have played an important part in the entertainment of sailors while away from port. The U. S. Navy buys prints outright and conducts one of the biggest exhibition units in the world.

With the supply of silent films fast terminating, navy moguls decided that

Millions Involved in Snarl; Report Schlesinger Makes Free Offer

Fearful over the possibility that damages running into millions may have to be paid to General Talking Pictures, the bankers, drawing tighter their hold on the picture industry, are responsible for decision of "Erpi's" licensed producers to ascertain from the A. T. & T. subsidiary where they stand in the patent snarl, MOTION PICTURE NEWS learns.

Considerable worry apparently exists over the final outcome of the legal squabble revolving around the Ries patent on sound-on-film recording which the Schlesinger interests have always maintained is basic. The bankers, with millions invested in the business, have been checking through confidential channels, it is understood, and are anxious to discover for their peace of mind as well as their investments how the producing companies licensed by Western Electric will be affected if high Federal courts sustain the initial victory scored by General Talking Pictures in Delaware.

To Quiz Otterson

It is their insistence which is prompting scanning of producer contracts with Electrical Research and their influence in the background which stalks through decision of major companies to quiz John E. Otterson on matters pertaining to indemnities if the final decision involving patents goes against "Erpi."

Precipitating this move, reported to have long been in the minds of some of the "Erpi" licensees at least, is the visit to

Coast Reports Replacing Offer By Schlesinger

Hollywood—Reported but unconfirmed is the yarn that before M. A. Schlesinger left for New York, he offered several studios, now functioning under Western Electric licenses, a De Forest recording system of which the Ries sound-on-film patent is regarded as the base.

It is further reported that Schlesinger is preparing to offer to replace W. E. equipment with De Forest reproducers as a step in further bringing to a climax the war now impending over patent domination.

Ha-Ha-Ha!

Los Angeles—Harrison Carroll relates the story now rounding studio corners concerning the head of a committee of safety who decided upon a sudden fire drill.

Going into the studio grounds, he blew shrilly upon a whistle, which was supposed to summon the entire volunteer department.

To the official's amazement, no one came. Hot under the collar, he blew another blast, and followed it with a third.

When no one answered this time, he stormed into the administration building to report the outrage.

There he was told that all the members of the department had been let out the day before.

$250,000 Paid to Nathanson for Canadian Houses

N. L. Nathanson received a profit of $250,000 on sale of the downtown Toronto and central Montreal sites he sold to Fox Film, it is understood, and as part of the deal agreed to keep out of the picture business for five years. The executive, who resigned as general manager when Adolph Zukor and I. W. Killam, voting trustees of Famous Players Canadian, blocked his efforts to sell the chain to Gaumont British, is said to have had a tie-up with William Fox to build a rival circuit in Canada.

Fox, it will be recalled, at the time had completed his deal for a "substantial interest" in Gaumont and the Zukor-Killam stand was to keep Fox from getting control in Canada. However, with Fox in financial difficulties, Nathanson had to mark time on the proposed Canadian chain. When the smoke cleared, Harley L. Clarke was in as president of Fox Film and, acting for the company, he is reported to have purchased the Toronto and Montreal sites Nathanson had assembled.

Sam Katz

The work was begun several weeks ago, when Sam Katz called for the paring of overhead. Final steps are being taken this week, when the work will be completed. A "gigantic" saving has been effected, it is stated.

During the paring process a number of persons were let out in various company departments. The trimming was accomplished without any wholesale salary slashes, Publix says, pointing out that morale has not been impaired to any degree.

Expansion to Be Slower

While additional circuit expansion will not be as rapid as in the past, it will be "more than large enough to take care of all promotions and give incentive to everyone who wishes to strive for progress," according to David J. Chatkin.

The decks now are cleared and the organization at fighting weight, he says, pointing out that promotion possibilities are at a new peak.

Fox West Coast Hit By Economy

Los Angeles—That economy wave which engulfed many theatre man in the East has washed up a number of employes of Fox West Coast Theatres. A shaving of personnel has been completed in many spots over the circuit. When the Publix paring was started, there was some pooh-poohing out here, but the reduction fad has caught on.

Fox Theatres in New York Cut Admissions to 10 And 15 Cents

The tendency on the part of circuits to slash admission prices to 10 and 15 cents for neighborhood first runs threatens to affect producer revenue to a point where quality product may be jeopardized, in the opinion of those who make a study of shifting industry trends.

The theory of the price slash is that the new scale will bring the same patrons back to the theatre more often, the increase in volume business picking up the slack caused by the drop in scale. But actual experience has demonstrated that, in the case of many theatres, that theory is not working out.

In the Bronx, two Fox houses, the Blenheim, 169th St. and Park Ave., and the Parkway, 172nd St. and 3rd Ave., have trimmed prices to 15 cents for all shows, matinee and evening, and to 10 cents for children. The theatres are first run. The opposition, composed of theatres not affiliated with any producing company, is getting 15 cents in the afternoon and 25 cents at night for second and third runs, but operators figure they can't maintain their prices in view of the Fox move.

A new policy instituted by Loew has resulted in a price tumble at many of the circuit's houses throughout the city. In most instances, the houses are first run in their neighborhoods and the situation confronting the independents is identical with the situation created by Fox in the Bronx.

Observers feel that the circuits which have gone in for the cut may have to return to their old prices. If they don't, they say, prices for film will have to undergo revisions with the producer holding the short end to a point where conceivably the loss in revenue will have a definite bearing on the amount of money invested in negatives.

Bulk of Chaney $550,000 Estate Left to His Widow

Los Angeles—Lon Chaney, late M-G-M star, left an estate of $550,000, the bulk of which, including $275,000 in life insurance, $150,000 in real estate and $125,000 in personal property, being bequeathed to his widow, Mrs. Hazel G. Chaney. A bequest of $1 was left to his divorced wife, Cleva C. Bush of Pasadena, the will stating: "I am under no obligation to her whatever, but I am doing this so there may be no contest of my will." Chaney's chauffeur received $5,000.

Paramount Realignment Forces Bachman Out

Hollywood—Jack Bachmann, associate producer at Paramount, friend of Ben Schulberg and at one time the latter's partner in Preferred Pictures, is off that company's lot due, it is reported, to the realignment of executive control at the studio.

Caesar Would

Hollywood—Harrison Carroll tells this one on Arthur Caesar, one of Hollywood's prime wags. Caesar attended the anniversary party of James and Lucille Gleason.

"I don't think much of your guest list," he reproached Gleason. "You haven't got anybody here who could even take up an option."

Loew-Zukor Split Leading to Reno Divorce Courts

With his wife, the former Mildred Zukor, now in Reno establishing a residence in preparation for a divorce, Broadway is buzzing over the crash of the romance which had united two of the most powerful families in filmdom. The Loew's have been separated for several years.

Arthur Loew

At the time of the Loew-Zukor marriage some years ago, much was written about the proposed union of the Loew and Zukor interests. Close co-operation between the two firms was maintained, and, for a time, it was expected that a merger would be consummated. The couple has two children.

The forthcoming action at Reno, it is understood, will not be contested by Loew.

$200,000 Trust Fund Makes Jean Harlowe Happy

Los Angeles—Things are coming Jean Harlowe's way. The blonde actress, who skyrocketed to fame in "Hell's Angels," has won a legal fight to prevent her husband from altering in any way a trust fund of $200,000 she says he made for her in 1927. The default divorce decree she won in July was set aside on the ground that ten days had not elapsed after he was served with papers in the action.

"Peck" Gomersall With "U" as Taylor Aide

E. T. (Peck) Gomersall, who for three years was assistant to James R. Grainger at Fox, has joined Universal as supervisor of the central western division, with headquarters in Chicago. He will be directly under Harry Taylor, western sales manager.

Giannini Returning

San Francisco—Dr. A. H. Giannini is en route to New York. He hurried West following the death of his step-father.

The Insiders' Outlook

THE sole topic of discussion in the office of a certain New York executive this week was the complicated patent tangle and the reported—and religiously denied—purchase of the Schlesinger interests in De Forest Phonofilm and General Talking Pictures by the electric twins, Western Electric and RCA Photophone.

As usual, the kibitzers were on hand and Western Electric's alleged plight came in for its share of kidding. This went on until a w. k. figure in the business was asked what he thought.

He compared "Erpi" with the youngster who found himself considerably troubled by a busy bee which had been lodged in his trousers by a "playmate." The chap was in a sorry way what with the villain in the piece waiting on the sidelines to direct a kick toward the seat of his pants if an attempt was made to get rid of the bee and the bee itself turning the discomfort market 100 per cent bullish.

The Outcome Speculative

Forecasts on how the patent knot will unravel are largely empty chatter because the situation is too involved and too much is at stake to conjecture idly who is going to win and why.

The facts in the case, however, rather clearly demonstrate that some, at least, of Western Electric's licensed companies are worried over the Schlesinger victory in the Ries case. Of course, that victory has yet to be sustained by the higher courts before Western Electric, in any wise whatsoever, may be construed as having gone down to defeat.

It may be that John E. Otterson will try, and successfully at that, to assure questioning producers that the issue is still exactly an issue and that there is no need to wax concerned over an eventuality which has yet to take final form.

On the other hand, you have the bankers underwriting the picture business, who are declared to be more insistent daily for some sort of understanding on liabilities and the measure of protection afforded by "Erpi" to its licensees under existing contracts. Kuhn, Loeb & Company, the Paramount bankers, are understood to be active in this direction.

The banking groups, checking through investigation waged independently of the picture business, have millions at stake. Their interest needs no further explanation.

Those Contracts

It is more or less open conversation throughout the trade that the W. E. licensees, envious of the edge obtained by Warners in the early days, fell for talkers with more speed than wisdom and that the contracts they signed were not subjected to that rigorous scrutiny which goes hand in hand with careful business operation. In the first flush of success accorded talkers and the huge task involved in wiring theatres as rapidly as facilities permitted, nobody worried much.

Then came the private conferences between bankers and the Schlesinger group and, it is understood, the secret probe of the latter's claims on behalf of the Ries sound-on-film patent. The story, so it is said, resulted in the conviction in several quarters that something had better be done about it. Therefore, the decision by producers to discuss the tangle with Otterson, precipitated by M. A. Schlesinger's trip to the coast and his offer to set up competitive production via free De Forest recording licenses to independents.

Past and Futures

Privately, some trepidation has always existed in the minds of the companies allied with Western Electric that the organization would some day see fit to tighten its already strong hold on the business. Coupled with this thought is the suspicion, never confirmed, that at least one extremely important organization, ostensibly operating under its own management, is in reality dominated by American Telephone and Telegraph through banking channels.

Those who countenance the hunch regard it as the beginning of a "peaceful penetration" campaign which will spread, although it may never break out into the open.

These rumblings, coupled with the edge on patents which many believe Schlesinger to hold, are reported to be the background facts leading up to the quiz which Otterson is about to face.

Valedictory?

The appearance of Roxy and his gang on the stage of the Roxy this week may be the farewell appearance of the troupe at the big Broadway first run.

For Roxy, so the story goes, in a few weeks is to leave the post as managing director of the theatre named for him, with Sid Grauman most persistently named as his probable successor. Roxy is joining the RCA interests and will have charge of the theatre to be housed in the amusement center project RCA and its allies will operate in midtown New York. Meanwhile, Roxy will devote his time to radio work for National Broadcasting Co.

Myers Advises Wisconsin Showmen to Endorse Contract; Zoning Debate Hot

"Kismet" Previewed

Hollywood — First National previewed "Kismet" in Santa Barbara, figuring that a different audience reaction could be obtained there, as few previews are held in that city. The audience was unaware of the advance showing and failed to account for the added attraction, thinking it was some sort of a series of short subjects. The reason for this, apparently, was that the talker was in very rough shape and the breaks between scenes were very noticeable.

The talker, which is in Technicolor, has plenty of production value and the work of Otis Skinner is outstanding. Aside from that, the picture seems to be erratic. Further editing will perhaps remedy this considerably.

CROUCH

New Production Unit System Is Tiffany Policy

Big Cedar Lake, Wis.—Tiffany has completed reorganization of its production forces, and the new system adopted will be reflected in a different class of product during the 1930-31 season, Oscar Hanson, company sales manager, told the Wisconsin exhibitor unit at its convention here.

Oscar Hanson

The unit system of production has been instituted by the company, splitting production responsibilities among several executives, he declared. This, he said, assures individual concentration upon all pictures in the new line-up.

"We realize that improvement of our product is needed, and feel that the new season will bring this about," he declared. A number of problems must be worked out mutually by Tiffany and Allied, he declared, characterizing the franchise arrangement as a cold-blooded business proposition between the parties, which "needed each other badly" when the deal was made. Hanson declared that a new franchise drive would be made co-incident with Allied's expansion into new territories.

Texas Meeting in October

Dallas—Zoning and the proposed new standard contract will be principal topics at the convention here Oct. 27 and 28 of the Allied Theatre Owners of Texas. Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Association, will be invited to attend

Pact "Measurably Superior," Says Allied President at Annual Meeting

Cedar Lake, Wis.—Endorsement of the proposed standard form of license agreement was urged by Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Association, at the annual convention here of the Wisconsin exhibitor unit.

The proposed contract, he said, "is "measurably, but not strikingly, superior to previously-used contracts." Myers asked that Wisconsin exhibitors read carefully their copy of the proposed agreement, when received.

Myers talked during the noon hour Wednesday and the way he held delegates, at a time when they ordinarily would have been having lunch, indicated the interest in his remarks.

About 70 exhibitors were present at the session, the seventeenth annual gathering of Wisconsin exhibitors, which began Tuesday afternoon with routine business, breaking up long enough to hear a talk by Phil LaFollette, gubernatorial candidate.

Frank and sometimes brutal discussion of the proposed zoning plan characterized Wednesday's meeting. During a hectic two-hour discussion of the proposed schedules for Milwaukee and the balance of the state, the plan was both riddled and defended. Most of the discussion centered about Racine exhibitors' contention that their situation was not cared for satisfactorily and arguments about apparent conflict between time protection and price protection.

Not a single change was made in the printed draft of the zoning plan, however, and the answer to all objections was, "Take up the matter with the permanent board of arbitration." The convention did not record itself officially upon the zoning plan in any way, and those anticipating either endorsement or rejection were disappointed.

Myers' View on Protection

"The rule on protection is simple and is expressed by saying protection must be reasonable," Myers told the convention. He seemed doubtful about the plan, which he had heard discussed, but did not commit himself definitely on it. Most zoning plans, he intimated, tend to become quite involved. Allied, he asserted, went to the December 5-5-5 conference with a zoning plan worked out by H. M. Richey of Detroit and would have offered it more widely except that a member of the group cut in with a plan of his own to meet a particularly bad situation in his territory. He mentioned no names, but said this caused suspension of Allied protection activity at the time.

By-laws were changed so that dues hereafter will be levied on the basis of seats and directors elect the officers. Reincorporation of the association is planned immediately. A resolution authorized keeping of all minutes of the permanent zoning committee meetings in the association offices, and another thanked the members of the clearance committee for their work. State and local legislation also came in for discussion.

Fred S. Meyer, new president of the association, was toastmaster at the banquet, where Steve Bauer, retiring president, was presented with a remembrance, with F. J. McWilliams of Madison making the presentation. Oscar Hanson, Tiffany sales manager, also spoke.

Meyer Wisconsin Chief

Cedar Lake, Wis.—Fred S. Meyer, veteran manager of Universal's Alhambra, Milwaukee, is new president of the Wisconsin exhibitor association, a unit of Allied States. Andy Gutenberg is vice-president; Jim Boden, recording secretary, and Ernie Langemack, treasurer. The appointive position of executive secretary, now held by H. A. Staab, is to be filled at a meeting of directors next week. Whether Staab will be reappointed is a subject of speculation.

The new officers were elected by the following directors: Steve Bauer, August Berkholtz, Bert Fisher, Al Kvool, Henry Goldenberg, Jim Boden, Andy Gutenberg, Fred S. Meyer, Ed Maertz, George Fisher, Jack Kiegan and Etta Wiesner, all of Milwaukee; William Ainsworth, Fond du Lac; George Huebner, Oconomowoc; Fred J. McWilliams, Madison.

Try to Tinker With the Clock In Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Some Milwaukee busybodies just can't be satisfied with God's time, for having succeeded in forcing daylight saving time upon the city this summer, they now are trying to put over year-round eastern standard time for the city.

At present, the eastern time belt ends just west of Detroit, which is about 250 airline miles from Milwaukee. Daylight saving here ended Sept. 1 and theatre business was helped considerably as a result.

With the advent of cooler weather, business conditions here and throughout the state are on the upgrade. Manufacturing plants are taking on more men. After following a policy of maintained personnel on shorter working hours, they now are increasing the hours for their help.

No Action Taken Yet on Iowa Zoning Schedules

Des Moines—Nothing definite has been determined upon by the zoning committee working here. Publix is demanding 30 days protection. The independent exhibitors, who recently formed Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and declared against any protection, have named a committee to confer with distributors on proposed schedules.

Asks $2,000,000 From Paramount In Boston Suit

Boston—Paramount Publix has monopolized and is attempting to monopolize the film industry, it is charged in suit for $2,000,000 damages brought in Federal Court here by the Strand Amusement Co., Portland, Me., under the Sherman anti-trust law.

Attorneys for the theatre firm are Arthur and Bernard Berenson, who early this year, sought to throw Fox into receivership in an action brought for minority stockholders.

The Strand firm was earning a "substantial profit" from its Portland theatre up to the time of alleged interference by the defendant, it is alleged.

Paramount is conspiring to violate the trust laws, it is asserted, the complaint setting forth that independent exhibitors are "wholly dependent upon the defendant's product to enable them to maintain the theatres owned and operated by them." The Strand firm, it is charged, was forced to submit to the terms dictated for its pictures by the company.

Paramount by various means acquired studios with a view to monopolizing manufacture of films and has thus eliminated competition in production, the complaint asserts. "To further extend its monopoly," the company went into the exhibition branch and acquired theatres, to coerce exhibitors to submit to terms for its pictures, the complaint sets forth.

"Among other respects in which the defendants monopolized or attempted to monopolize, directly or indirectly, the exhibition of motion pictures and the conduct of theatrical enterprises or the production of motion pictures," says the bill, "was by threats and intimidations to the plaintiff and to other independent exhibitors of motion pictures that unless the plaintiff conformed or agreed to the terms fixed by the defendant for the use or leasing or licensing of its motion pictures at an exorbitant price and upon the conditions named by it, the defendant would either acquire theatres operated in and around the place where the plaintiff operated its theatre, would refuse to furnish its pictures to the plaintiff or would build, operate and run theatres in opposition to and in competition with the plaintiff.

Paramount Publix, the complaint alleges, forced the Portland company to lease its theatres to the defendant at an annual rental of $65,000, after causing Netoco, a New England circuit, to withdraw from a proposed contract to lease the theatre from the Strand company at $65,000 per year, and in addition to pay the Strand company 40 per cent of the earnings.

Calls Charge Absurd

Charge of the Strand Amusement Co. of Portland that Paramount Publix has monopolized or attempted to monopolize the industry or any part of it is "utterly ridiculous and absurd," and a blanket denial of the charges contained in the Portland firm's suit will be entered, Austin Keough, company attorney, told MOTION PICTURE NEWS. He can see no cause for any damage action in the company's activities as a theatre operator at Portland, Keough declared. The case will be handled by the company's Boston attorneys, the firm of Friedman, Atherton, Ting & Turner.

On "U" Board

Phil Reisman, who recently became general sales manager of Universal after several years in a similar post at Pathe, has been elected a member of the company's board of directors.

Phil Reisman

Since joining Universal Reisman has set a number of important deals, with several more soon to be announced. Last year, as head of Pathe's sales force, Reisman rolled up a gross of $18,000,000.

The directorate declared a quarterly dividend of two per cent per share on outstanding first preferred, payable Oct. 1 to stockholders on record Sept. 20.

U. S. Films Again Send French Off Their Nut

Paris—American films again are on the spot here with demonstrations against them renewed Wednesday night and Thursday. The outbreaks were climaxed by hooting and whistling at the Theatre Madeleine, where an American film was being shown. Two hundred fifty patrons, ejected by police, demanded their money back.

Roxy Bids for Kid Trade Showing Indian Serial

Something new is being introduced to Broadway Saturday morning, when the Roxy begins showing of "The Indians Are Coming," Universal serial and the first chapterplay to get a first run on the Main Stem. This is a bid for kid patronage with an episode to be run each Saturday morning.

Schenck, Lefcourt Get Together on U.A. Removal

Joseph M. Schenck, it is understood, is negotiating with the Lefcourt Realty Company, operating several New York skyscrapers, for space in the latter's new structure at 49th St. and Broadway, where United Artists' entire home office would be housed. Schenck and Lefcourt have long been close friends.

Mean Dish Thrown by Jocelyn Lee, Charge

Hollywood—Jocelyn Lee's talent extends beyond her screen work, for she is quite adept at dish throwing, according to charges made by her husband, Luther Reed, in a divorce bill filed after three months of married life. Frequent outbursts of temper on the part of his wife are alleged by Reed.

2 Year Contract Binds Franklin to Fox West Coast

Los Angeles—While reports of policy differences between Harold B. Franklin and Harley L. Clarke over the long-pending deal for operation of Paramount's western theatres by Fox West Coast are responsible for rumors that Franklin may walk out, there is a little matter of contracts that may have a bearing on the situation.

Franklin has two years to go with the frequently discussed matter of renewal still in the limbo of the indefinite.

Clarke is reported opposed to the Paramount deal in view of the fact that the Publix theatres on the coast are losing about $20,000 a week. Franklin is declared for it. At any rate, the latter is now en route to Kansas City on a two weeks' inspection tour. There the matter stands.

Simmons Slate Elected Unanimously by AMPA's

New administration of the AMPA was inaugurated Thursday with Michael L. Simmons heading the slate unanimously elected. Charles W. Barrell is new vice-president; George Bilson, treasurer, and Edward Finney, secretary. The board of directors consists of the officers and Hank Linet, Ralph Lund, Paul Benjamin, Edward L. Klein and Vincent Trotta.

Selections for the other posts are: Trustee, Tom Wiley, replacing C. L. Yearsley; auditing committee, Fred Baer, Myles Laska, Joe Fine; national chancellor of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, P. L. Thompson; staff of the AMPA Bulletin: business manager, Clarence Shottenfels; editor, Walter F. Eberhardt.

Brandts Already Jailed In Brief Legit Career

Harry and Louis Brandt, who with their brother, William, have entered the legitimate business, face trial with 11 members of the cast of "Frankie and Johnny" following a police raid on Brandt's Carlton, Jamaica. "Billy" Brandt is operating the Windsor in the Bronx and two other legitimate theatres in New York.

Schenck in N. Y.

Joseph M. Schenck is in New York from Hollywood. He is expected to sail for the Continent soon to map United Artists' plans for foreign-language talkers.

60% Wired in Canada

Toronto—There are 600 wired houses, out of a total of 1,000, in Canada, a census by the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada shows. The results were made public this week by Col. J. A. Cooper, president. This ratio is much higher than in other British countries, Australia having only 300 wired houses out of a total of 1,250.

Al Boyd to Lead Paramount Offensive Into "Philly" Zone After Warner Split

All Business

Los Angeles—Business is business with James Cruze, with sentiment not entering into casting for his pictures. Just to prove it, he has cast his divorced wife, Betty Compson, for the feminine lead in "She Got What She Wanted," which will be the first picture under his new Tiffany contract.

Fox Hoyts Buy Spurs Paramount

Sydney, Australia—Acquisition by Fox of a substantial interest in 100 Hoyt theatres is expected to speed negotiations in a proposed purchase by Paramount of an interest in the Union Theatres chain. Some time ago, when it was reported Paramount was dickering for an interest in the circuit, Stuart F. Doyle, managing director, denied any deal was under way.

"Pete" Woodhull Proved Great DeForest Ballyhoo

R. F. Woodhull resigned from General Talking Pictures because he had accomplished "his mission," which was to place the story of DeForest Phonofilm before exhibitors of the nation, M. A. Schlesinger, head of General Talking Pictures, told Motion Picture News. The effectiveness with which this was done has been reflected in the reception accorded the company's machines, he said. Woodhull declined comment on his resignation, other than to say he plans an extended rest.

Lasky Arriving Saturday

Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president in charge of production for Paramount, arrives in New York Saturday from the Coast. While in the East, Lasky, with other producers, is to ascertain the company status in the patent fight between General Talking Pictures and Electrical Research Products.

Klein Handling Film

Edward L. Klein is distributor of "Alma De Gaucho," Spanish talker. Through a typographical error, Klein's name was accidentally dropped from the review which appeared in last week's issue of Motion Picture News.

Griffith in New York

Edward H. Griffith, Pathe director, who made "Holiday," and Horace Jackson, adaptor, are in New York for story conferences with Donald Ogden Stewart, author of "Rebound," the next Ann Harding vehicle.

Cohen's Mother Dead

Funeral services were held in Atlanta during the week for the mother of Louis Cohen, veteran theatre operator.

Chestnut Street Theatre to Be Chief Outlet; May Add Stage Shows

Philadelphia—Paramount's excursion into this territory will be in association with Al Boyd, close friend of Adolph Zukor and Sidney R. Kent, who resigned from the Stanley Co. to form Boyd Enterprises.

Boyd heads a new firm, the Moon Amusement Co., which is to operate Keith's Chestnut St. as the Paramount first run outlet here. The move follows the Paramount-Warner split over booking of the Paramount product in Warner-Stanley houses. Some of the product has been sold to the Fox here, and it is being sold away from Warners in the subsequent runs.

Officers of the new Moon company are the same as those of Boyd Enterprises and include: Frank Buhler, vice-president, and Louis N. Goldsmith, secretary.

Opening date originally was set as Sept. 19, but this has been set back and the new date is not yet determined upon. "Animal Crackers" will be the opening attraction. Edgar Wolf, former manager of both the Fox and Stanley here, will be manager of the theatre, to be known as Paramount-Keith's.

May Add Stage Shows

Keith's is favorably located on Chestnut St. between 12th and 13th Sts., has a seating capacity of about 1,900 and has lobby space enough to take care of all the displays incidental to picture presentation. The report includes the story that Paramount Publix stage shows will be used in connection with the films although at first films only will be shown.

The reported Fox block of 15 Paramount films for the season is headed by "Let's Go Native," scheduled in two or three weeks. The Arcadia, a former member of the old Stanley chain but now an independent and also located conveniently on Chestnut St., started its Paramount affiliation with "Grumpy." After some pictures under old contracts are played, "The Silent Enemy," "Manslaughter," "Queen High" and "Follow Thru" are consecutive bookings at this theatre.

Pinch Golf Operator

Glassboro, N. J.—Arrested on a warrant obtained by a Methodist minister because he allowed Sunday play, Harry Elliott, operator of a miniature golf course, is going to force the arrest of everybody engaging in work next Sunday, he said.

Success

Hollywood—What a whale of a difference a few years make. Three years ago Buddy Rogers was tickled to earn $60 weekly. His new Paramount contract is said to call for fifteen hundred smackers weekly, and a kick each six months.

N. Y. Television Station

Theatre television broadcasts are to be instituted by RCA from a station atop the Amsterdam, New York, as soon as the apparatus is installed. The apparatus is that developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, General Electric engineer, who recently gave a successful demonstration of a broadcast to a Schenectady theatre.

Recall Green for 'SeaLegs' Retakes

Hollywood—Retakes on "Sea Legs," the Jack Oakie vehicle, are being made by Richard Wallace. Victor Heerman directed the major portion of the picture and will receive full credit for the direction. Harry Green was rushed by plane from New York to be here for the retakes. He was appearing at the Paramount theatre in Brooklyn at the time of the call.

Companies Co-operate On Publishers' Show

RCA Photophone and four distributors are co-operating in furnishing entertainment to the annual convention of the National Publishers' Association, to be held Monday and Tuesday at Sky Top Lodge, Pa. Magazine publishers throughout the United States are represented in the association's membership.

Pictures which will be shown are "Caught Short" (M-G-M) and "So This Is London" (Fox) and the following shorts: "The Little Covered Wagon" and "In the Mountains" (Tiffany), "Match Play" (Educational), one of the Knute Rockne subjects (Pathe), and a special golf reel assembled by Ray Hall of Pathe News showing the play in the recent national open. Photophone is supplying a portable sound reproducer and an operator to project the convention program.

Plan Popularity Tests

Sixty-two girls in Brooklyn, Queens and Long Island will be given round trips to Miami in the popularity contest to be staged by Fox theatres in these sections, coincident with the Fox Greater Show Season starting Monday.

Arrive from Europe

David Sarnoff, with Mrs. Sarnoff and family, Vilma Banky, Maria Corda, Mrs. Marcus Loew and Joseph Bavetta, manager in France for Fox, have arrived in New York from Europe.

Lewin Sailing Next Week

Albert Lewin, M-G-M associate producer, arrived in New York Thursday and sails next week for Europe on a three-month vacation.

Steffes Leading Offensive on Warner Franchise Due to Score Charge Peeve

Help!

Attention of Hollywood's tough hombres who insist upon starving while awaiting work in Westerns is called to the following advertisement which appeared in a Santa Fe newspaper:

WANTED—A REAL TOUGH GUY!

I want a cow hand who knows cows. Not under 35 years of age nor over 50. One who smokes, swears, tells the truth and hates sheepherders. Apply to W. F. H., Three B Ranch, Large Canyon, Aztec, N. M.

Canadians Seek Relief from Taxes, Fireproof Laws

Toronto—Exemption from the ticket tax of admissions up to 50 cents, modification of the order that all theatre buildings must be fireproof by May or licenses will be refused, and dropping of the regulation providing for grading of operators in four classes will be asked of the Ontario government by independent exhibitors. Sixty unaffiliated theatre owners recently met here to draft the requests.

P. J. Nolan, who operates the Avalon, Roxy and Columbia, is chairman of arrangements. A deputation to present the requests to the government is to meet here in about two weeks.

The commitee to arrange for the deputation is as follows: P. J. Nolan, chairman; A. Bugg, Model, Midland; R. W. Weller, Weller, Trenton; Fred Guest, Delta, Hamilton; W. C. Ball, Revue, Toronto; T. Walton, National, Toronto; James Sullivan, King George, St. Catharines; T. H. Moorhead, Capitol, Brampton; T. Ross, Royal, Bowmanville.

The exhibitors argued that the cancelling of the amusement tax on tickets up to 25 cents was excellent in its day but admissions had been raised to 35 cents and more since the installation of talking equipment and new scales were not covered by the previous tax relief. It will be impossible for fireproof theatres to be built before next spring to take the place of those now doomed to close because of the government order, it was asserted, and relief is sought particularly because no menace is evident under present conditions. Wired theatres have made many changes, such as concrete booths and floors and other improvements required by the government.

Dissolves Indiana Company

Indianapolis—Officials of the Elkhart Orpheum Company of Elkhart, Ind., have filed a decree in Superior Court at South Bend, evidencing the dissolution of the corporation.

Declares He Has Discovered Cancellation Method; Polls Showmen

Minneapolis—They're sounding the tom-toms among independent exhibitors of Minnesota and the Dakotas, preparing to go on the warpath against Warners. Northwest showmen have been pretty peeved over the Warner stand on score charges and their offensive is to be directed against what they believe to be a vulnerable point, the Warner franchise.

W. A. Steffes

W. A. Steffes, general manager of the Northwest exhibitor association, now is polling exhibitors as to their experience with the Warner franchise. The association, he writes in a letter to members, believes that for members who desire to cancel, it has found a way "whereby you can be relieved from playing any more pictures under the Warner Brothers franchise."

Exhibitors are asked to state whether the franchise contains a clause stipulating that all roadshows shall play New York, Chicago and one other city, and to supply a list of pictures played and paid for as roadshows.

At the 5-5-5 conferences on the proposed new contract exhibitors unsuccessfully tried to secure elimination of score charges. The policy of Warners and First National, it was indicated, precluded a general move by distributors to abandon score charges or else to consolidate them with film rentals.

The Warner franchise is expected to be a chief topic of discussion at a special meeting of the Northwest exhibitor unit, to be held here Sept. 22 and 23. All independents of the territory, regardless of whether they are members, are being asked to attend the sessions.

British Nettleford Studio Is Photophone Equipped

London—With start of "Caste" under the direction of Campbell Gullan, the new Nettleford sound studios at Walton-on-Thames have begun active operations. The studios have been entirely rebuilt and RCA Photophone equipment installed. The main studio occupies a building 100 x 50 feet in dimension.

"Hell's Angels" Switched

Philadelphia—"Hell's Angels," originally announced for the Erlanger Theatre, is "out," as this house has announced a legitimate attraction to open Sept. 29, the approximate date for the film. The Fox-Locust is now considered as the probable house for the Howard Hughes film.

Says the Press Agent:

Hollywood—The most difficult camera subject has been found. He is "Mr. Satan," a canary used in Cecil B. De Mille's new M-G-M picture, "Madam Satan."

After five months of effort, starting even before the picture began, a scene of "Mr. Satan" taking a bath in a canary-size De Mille bath-tub has at last been secured.

De Mille claims that this short bit of footage is the most difficult of his career.

Daylight Saving Hit By Unions As Exploitation

Los Angeles—Branding daylight saving as a labor-exploiting device, the combined union forces of this city unanimously passed resolutions today "condemning and disapproving" the measure, which comes to a vote Nov. 4.

The resolution charges that the measure, if passed, would "create unfair competition with employers because of the longer working day," and this in an age when "the trend of the times is for higher wages, shorter work days and shorter weeks."

"It is the claim of the proponents of this measure," says the labor indictment, "that it will save the people of California one hour of daylight each day, but in reality will only start the day an hour earlier."

This, the unions assert, would tempt unscrupulous employers to add one or two hours to the day's work.

Turning Clocks Back

Toronto—Municipalities in eastern Canada are dropping daylight saving like a hot cake, although a return to standard time is normally scheduled for the last Sunday in September. Many cities have already turned back the clock, including Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Welland, St. Catharines, Lindsay and Gananoque. Ottawa, the Canadian capital, will retain summer time until September 27.

"U" in Tie-Up with Radio Fair for Screen Talent

New Yorkers attending the Radio World's Fair at Madison Square Garden, Sept. 22-27, will make screen and voice tests via Tone-O-Graph, in a stunt to be plugged by Universal. Successful applicants passing a preliminary test will then make a full screen test which is to be shipped to the Coast for inspection. Jules Brulatour will donate the film and Consolidated has been tied in to handle developing gratis.

Zoning Going to Bat Again in Court As Houston Showman Takes to Warpath

Flag-Waving?

Dallas—Is the Horwitz suit against Publix and distributors, charging a plot to force him to raise admissions, a publicity stunt on the part of the Houston exhibitor? That is a question being asked here, with some inclined to the view that Horwitz is seeking to capitalize the zoning situation, rather than expecting to beat protection in court. His newspaper assault is said to be bringing crowds to the theatre, for the low-price flag-waving strikes a sympathetic note in the public's ear.

Horwitz withdrew from the zoning meetings here with a statement that he did not need the help of those present but could fight his battles alone. In support of the publicity stunt view, it is pointed out that the clearance schedules have not been approved finally, so that the Horwitz houses have not been denied films on account of admission price, and that existing contracts are not affected anyway.

First Runs Thirty Day Demand Halts Cincinnati Zoning

Cincinnati—Neither side got to first base at the meeting here of southern Ohio exhibitors and distributors seeking to work out a zoning plan for the territory. There was much discussion and airing of views, but the meeting did not progress beyond the stage of appointment of committees, composed of four representatives for the exhibitors and two for the producers. The second major meeting is scheduled for Dayton, O., next week, with another meeting to follow the week after, provided the Dayton assembly is devoid of final results.

42 Days Locally

The nub of the situation as it now exists is that first-run houses here, in Dayton and Columbus are contending for at least 30-day protection over houses in contiguous territories embracing a radius of approximately 25 to 30 miles, as against 21-day protection which now obtains.

The situation locally, which, however, was not an issue at the state meeting this week, but the subject of separate discussions, provides for 42 days protection over the second run suburbans, after the date of second runs in the downtown houses, which, however, practically always follow the first runs within a week. First-run exhibitors do not want to deviate from this arrangement, which has been in effect for some time, although the suburban exhibitors are seeking concessions on the best basis they can get.

Horwitz Charges Plot to Force Him to Raise Admission Price

Houston, Tex.—Legality of protection, upheld in the consent decree entered in the Fox West Coast conspiracy action, is to be subjected to another test in Federal Court here in suit brought by Will Horwitz against Publix and nine distributors to restrain enforcement of zoning proposals which he says constitute an attempt to force the Iris and Ritz to raise admissions.

Distributors were successful in having the case transferred to Federal Court, when it came up for trial in District Court.

The next hearing is expected to be held early in the week. This move is regarded as a piece of strategy in view of the precedent established in the Coast case.

Horwitz is carrying his fight to the public and is enlisting the aid of other tradesmen. The Horwitz houses are charging five to 15 cents admission and, he insists, effort will be made to hold up films 120 days unless his prices are increased.

"War Is Declared" is the flaming headline he used in newspaper advertising to enlist public sympathy for his side of the matter.

Horwitz-Texan Theatres, operating the Texan, Iris and Ritz, is plaintiff in the suit which names Publix, Paramount-Publix, RKO, M-G-M, Fox, First National, Vitagraph (Warners), Universal, Columbia and United Artists as defendants.

Although maximum protection in Houston between first and second runs heretofore has been 60 days, effort now is being made to withhold pictures from the Ritz and Iris for 120 days, unless admissions are raised, Horwitz charges. Fourth and subsequent runs are being offered films in less time than the second and third runs are permitted to show them at present admission prices, the complaint alleges.

Clearance Stand Halts N. W. Buying

Minneapolis—While buying is suffering a severe setback in the territory, exhibitors and distributors are at loggerheads here over the Publix protection demands, and future meetings of the joint committee to fix schedules have been abandoned.

Now the exhibitors' association intends to demand the elimination of all protection throughout the territory, and a drawn out fight on the issue is in prospect. In addition, independents are threatening to boycott Paramount in retaliation for the Publix demands.

Exhibitors are refusing to buy product until they know just where they stand in the matter of clearance, and those who already have bought are declining to give dates until they get the lowdown.

I Am With You, Will Horwitz!

In Your Fight for the Right of Giving Better Shows for the Least Money. Your Policy Is My Policy. Every Good Citizen and Every Court in the Land Should Uphold and Support You in Your Position. I Admire Your Stand and the Nerve It Takes to Hold It.

Whenever an individual, a corporation, or a set of individuals or corporations, or both, seek to force a merchant to sell his wares at a higher price than the price at which he can afford to sell them and make a legitimate profit, that is coercion in its worst form and should not be tolerated; and, in my opinion, will not be tolerated. The public interest demands that every article of commerce, whether it be pictures, clothing, food or whatnot, go into the hands of the consumer at the lowest possible price. It is only in this way that the American dollar can be of greatest service, not only to its present owner, but to every inhabitant in this wide land. The cheaper we buy, the more things will our wage buy, and the more our wage buys, the more enjoyment do we get in this life, and the more jobs are made for others in supplying these additional things we buy.

The Purchasing Power of Your Dollar Must Never Be Artificially or Wilfully Restricted

Fair Prices Are a Circle of Prosperity

High Prices Mean Depression and Business Stagnation

We Must Never Allow Private Greed to Throttle Public Welfare

The great Moving Picture Trust, itself, would be among those hardest hit if a policy of greed and high prices dominated business. If the buying power of the dollar were generally restricted, theirs being a luxury business, would suffer the greatest. If the food merchant, the clothing merchant and merchandisers of other necessities charged more than the minimum price consistent with their ability to make a reasonable profit, nothing would be left for the average man to go and enjoy a movie, buy a radio or own an automobile.

Mr. Horwitz, You Are Right in Fighting to the Limit of Your Power to Prevent Anyone from Forcing You to Raise Your Prices One Cent Above a Legitimate Profit to Your Business

I Am With You. All Houston Is With You. You Must Now Keep Your Price Down to 15c and 5c

The poor man and his family should be able to enjoy a good picture as well as the rich.

Joe Weingarten

Contract Under Scrutiny at St. Louis Monday

St. Louis—Naming of a grievance committee to thrash out various controversies, reports on proposed zoning of the territory and consideration of the proposed standard form of licensing agreement will feature the annual convention of the eastern Missouri and southern Illinois exhibitor unit to be held here Sept 15 and 16.

Fred Wehrenberg

Whether the proposed invasion of all territories by Allied States Association will be injected into the meetings is problematical. None of the Allied leaders is scheduled to attend, although Oscar Hanson, Tiffany sales manager, will be on hand to outline the five-year franchise proposition.

Real Battle Last Year

Last year, it is recalled, C. C. Pettijohn's reference to "soap box orators" provoked an attack by W. A. Steffes, Allied leader, after an agreement previously had been made not to indulge in personalities. The eastern Missouri and southern Illinois unit has declined to join Allied and is affiliated with the M. P. T. O. A. It is expected that President Fred J. Wehrenberg will urge that this affiliation be continued.

Speakers scheduled to be on hand for the sessions, starting Monday are: M. A. Lightman, M. P. T. O. A. president; M. E. Comerford, Pennsylvania chain operator, who recently sold control to Publix; C. C. Pettijohn and Dr. Lee De Forest.

Selwyn to Raid Studios For Talent, Coast Hears

Hollywood—Arch Selwyn is out after screen talent for his stage shows, and ultimately for the pictures to be made from these shows. He is reported to have instructed Maurice Revnes to sign up all available names.

Levine to Coast to Start New Picture

Nat Levine, Mascot Pictures president, is en route to Hollywood where he will launch production of the company's second talker serial for release this season on the state rights market. The new chapter play, "Phantom of the West," will star Tom Tyler.

Lina Basquette Divorced

Los Angeles—Another episode in Lina Basquette's life was written here Wednesday when her husband, J. Peverell Marley, was granted a divorce decree on grounds of extreme jealousy.

Off for Europe

Mrs. Al Christie sails for Europe today aboard the Ile de France.

Europe Worse Off

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, reported on his return from Europe that conditions on the foreign continent were worse than here, with France in better shape than other countries abroad. "England is suffering from unemployment, and Germany is having a bad time because of political disturbances."

Complete First, Warner-Tobis to Make Six More

Warners and Tobis have one picture in production in Germany and six more are planned, George E. Quigley, general manager of Vitaphone, who has returned to New York from Europe, told Motion Picture News. The pictures are being made in both German and French, under the joint production plan, he declares.

Europe, he says is "definitely committed" to talkers, despite the fact that the market still is profitable for "acceptable" American silents. Contingent legislation will probably be liberalized sufficiently enough to admit American made foreign-language pictures that are suitable for the European market. It is not likely that a fairly liberal contingent would be exhausted by the supply of suitable American pictures. It is not feasible to produce in America a large number of pictures which are acceptable for European consumption even when made in the languages of Europe.

"At the present moment the field for silents may be larger than for audible films, but I am of the opinion that those who make silent versions for the European market instead of foreign language talking pictures are pursuing a short-sighted policy—sacrificing a future market for temporary profits. Europe is committed to talking pictures and theatres are being rapidly wired for sound. I am convinced that the big field of the almost immediate future for American pictures in Europe is for those made in the language of the country where they are to be shown.

"The German language offers the biggest field for American pictures because of the greater number of German-speaking peoples and the superior German production and exhibition facilities. Spanish has undoubtedly the next largest audience and Spanish language pictures are economically feasible as are also French language pictures. Those seems the only continental European languages in which it is profitable, for the time being, to produce. An Italian market may develop in the future. Russia remains an almost unknown quantity."

Fox to Produce In Italy, France, Germany, Spain

Fox is mapping plans to produce, or have produced for the company by local companies, talkers in Italy, France, Germany and Spain.

A deal has been made with Joseph Aussenberg, former Fox representative in Germany, to make a series in Berlin under the name of the Atlantis Film Company.

Clayton P. Sheehan

Definite plans for the other countries depend on market conditions, but it is the expectation of Clayton P. Sheehan, Fox foreign manager, who has just returned from the Continent that talkers will be made in the remaining three as well. In the meantime, the Fox plant in Hollywood has completed "One Mad Kiss," "Common Clay" and "The Last of the Duanes" in Spanish, as well as a series of comedies.

Phila. Appeals Court Upholds ERPI Claim

Philadelphia—Electrical Research Products, fighting on behalf of Victor Talking Machine, is winner of an appeals suit brought in U. S. Circuit Court here, in the case of Frederick Vreeland and Frank Dyer, who sued Victor, claiming violation of patents relating to "mixing."

The "mixing" arrangement is for using a plurality of independent microphones or sound pick-ups with a single recording circuit. Erpi defended on behalf of Victor in view of the recording license assigned to the latter by the Western Electric subsidiary. The appeals court reversed the District Court's decision in charging the patents sued on are invalid.

Break Ground for Studio

Montreal—Ground-breaking ceremonies were held here last week-end for the proposed studio of Canadian-American Talking Pictures Studio, Ltd. A party, headed by Ray Jackson, managing director, made the trip from New York for the affair. Among those who attended were: Arthur Lubin, Betty Blythe, Beverley Bayne, Mary Burke, Myrtle Miller, Patricia Quinn, Fiske O'Hara, John Breedon, Phillipe DeLacey, Claire Windsor and Jack Sullivan.

Harkness Appointed

W. E. Harkness has been appointed general sales manager of the educational department of Electrical Research Products.

CHARLES FARRELL'S GREATEST ROLE

PICTURE NEWS OF LILIOM

GREATEST STAGE HIT OF ITS SEASON
POWERFUL FOX MOVIETONE

THAT FARRELL SMILE—It has thrilled millions of fans. Rose Hobart, who plays opposite him in "Liliom", is not immune to it. One of the many gay moments in Franz Molnar's drama of carnival life.

ON THE OBSERVATION PLATFORM— The chief magistrate, who is H. B. Warner, and Farrell on the Celestial Limited which carries him far away from his loved ones.

IF LOOKS COULD SLAY!—Estelle Taylor, dark-eyed gypsy of the carnival, is none too fond of the peasant sweetheart who stole Liliom from her. She matches her wiles against the country girl's demure charm.

YOU CAN'T LOSE—"The Buzzard" plans a stick-up and Farrell listens to the voice of temptation. It sounds so easy. Liliom, tired of the monotony of domestic life, is hungry for adventure and longs to return to his lively companions in the amusement park.

FARRELL IDOL OF EVERY GIRL'S DREAMS

Adv.

DOMESTIC CARNIVAL LIFE—Liliom's wife knows what is good for him, but can she make him like it? The lure of the gay midway is in his blood and he longs for its bright lights and rowdy throng of pleasure seekers. Sometimes he loses his temper and beats her, but he is always sorry afterward. And she, because she loves him, grants him forgiveness. Poignant, this Fox Film.

BY CANDLELIGHT—With his heart-broken wife watching by his side, Liliom's spirit awaited the celestial summons. All his days of swaggering as the carnival barker are over, and he starts on the long journey to atone for his sins.

A RELUCTANT CUSTOMER—Liliom wants him to see the carnival, and is determined not to let him get away. With the music of the carrousel in his ears, he shouts the attractions of the carnival. No wonder he causes many hearts to flutter.

HOW STRANGE!—When Liliom lost his temper and slapped his little daughter, it did not hurt at all. But it was just that sudden outbreak of his old impulsive nature that cost him the freedom which he had spent ten years to earn. And Liliom's appeal for another chance was denied.

QUARRELS FORGOTTEN — They were not always happy, but sorrow blotted out everything but love.

BY SPECIAL MESSENGER — An important message comes to Liliom in purgatory.

WHICH SHALL IT BE? — The dark charmer or the demure little peasant girl?

SEDUCTIVE WAYS—The dark charmer seems to be carrying the day.

FIERY TEMPER—But when she loses the man, she shows plenty of spite. It's a tough spot for Liliom, but his better nature triumphs in the end.

IN CONFERENCE—Liliom presents himself to the Chief Magistrate, and is none too hopeful of the verdict.

THE ROUGHNECK—Even with the woman he loves, he loses his temper, only to be sorry when it's too late.

ON THE EMBANKMENT — Liliom and "The Buzzard" planned a hold-up, but it didn't work out that way. And he paid dearly for his folly

BORZAGE WINS AGAIN IN SCREEN SWEEPSTAKES

DANGER AHEAD!—Liliom can read the signals in those coal-black eyes of Estelle Taylor—a siren if there ever was one. Will she make him forget the little girl waiting at home, who loves him with a devotion that even death cannot destroy?

HIS NERVE FAILED—Setting out to rob the paymaster, Liliom bungles the job in this Fox dramatic triumph.

ESCAPE—From the police, but not from the reckoning of his sins.

HERE'S TRANSPORTATION!—Liliom steps aboard the train which has steamed right into his room—a thrilling moment.

VERY LONELY—Life without Liliom is empty and dreary to Rose Hobart.

Industry Gets $7,300,000,000 Yearly; Hays, $365,000,000; Believe It or Not!

With Sound Effects

Did you know, writes Willard Robison to Lou Sobol, that the first Greek songwriter has made his appearance? His initial offering is titled, "All Quiet on the Restaurant Front!"

Pioneer Kidnaped Forty Years Ago

A mystery of the industry's beginnings, the disappearance of Louis Aime Augustin Le Prince, a pioneer motion picture inventor, will have its 40th anniversary on Sept. 16, 1930. On this day in 1890, Le Prince entered the Paris train at Dijon, France, with his new apparatus for photographing motion pictures, and no trace has ever been found of him since. He was on his way to take a steamer for America, where he was well known and where he expected to get the capital necessary to commercialize his invention.

Le Prince obtained two patents (U. S., Jan. 10, 1888, No. 376,247) for a "method of and apparatus for taking animated pictures" and (British, Oct. 10, 1888, No. 423), according to Merritt Crawford who is an authority on early motion picture inventions. The U. S. patent, according to Crawford, is for an apparatus using multiple lenses (2 batteries of eight each, but used from the same position). The British patent was for "one or more lenses," thus being an ancestor of the modern movie camera.

Le Prince actually took motion pictures in 1888 with his device, Crawford states, specimens of which still are in existence, and but for the fact that he did not specify celluloid film, he would have antedated Friese-Greene as the inventor of commercial cinematography. Le Prince specified only "gelatine" and "Eastman paper film" in his patent.

A movement to place a memorial plaque or tablet for Le Prince on the wall of his workshop in Leeds, England, is now under way, sponsored by E. Kilburn Scott, of London, historian on Le Prince's film activities.

Tiffany Puts Over Tie-Up on Chimp Series

Gund Manufacturing Co., in a tie-up with Tiffany Prod., will manufacture a mechanical toy similar to the chimp appearing in Tiffany's "Chimp Comedies." The toy will reach 30,000 retailers throughout the States and Europe, it is claimed, and provides for exploitation on the tie-up, including window displays, snipes, streamers, and button novelties.

Beaton to New York

Hollywood—Welford Beaton, publisher and editor of The Film Spectator, leaves for New York in a few days.

Abramson Flings Figures Fancifully in Fight for Filthy Lucre

The income of the industry is $7,300,000,000 per year.

Of this amount the Hays organization rakes in $1,000,000 per day.

Believe it or not.

The mathematical genius who is so generous with his ciphers is none other than Ivan Abramson. Ivan went to the trouble of dabbling in dizzy arithmetic for the reason that he wants $1,300,000 of the mazuma because, he avers in a 75-page (count 'em) bill of particulars in his suit against the Hays office, its members and high officials of various companies, they drove him out of business as a producer in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The document, while lacking in sex appeal, is packed with drama, with Will Hays stalking the boards as the villain. Regarding the general, Nathan Perlman, counsel for Abramson, says that the defendant companies "engaged the services of the defendant, Will H. Hays, for the sole purpose of trading his great political influence for immunity from the law," adding:

"Mr. Abramson charges that Mr. Hays, who never had any experience in the motion picture industry, was crowned the czar of the motion picture industry and made chief dictator for political purposes and that Mr. Hays was forced upon the industry against the will and protest of 75 per cent of the members engaged in the industry. Mr. Abramson charges that Mr. Hays has assumed unlawful super-authority upon the motion picture industry."

The attorney announced he would seek a court order "to expose the method of disbursing that income (the $1,000,000 per day) and determine if the Federal income tax law is being violated."

For days after the publication of Ivan's venture into higher mathematics General Hays, Charley Pettijohn, Gabe Hess, et al., wore wistful expressions and it was reported that they are considering signing up Ivan as treasurer to handle the $350,000,000 per year.

Abramson alleges that the members of the organization have an income of $20,000,000 per day, and that the Hays office gets five per cent of this amount. In actuality, the Hays organization's yearly revenue is between $500,000 and $750,000, representing one-half of one per cent.

Columbia Quarterly Dividend

Columbia has declared regular quarterly dividend of 37½ cents on the common, payable Oct. 2 to stock of record Sept. 19. Upon the same date will be paid the first instalment of the 2½ per cent on the semi-annual dividend on the common, declared some time ago.

Katz Returns

Sam Katz, president of Publix, is back in New York from a European jaunt.

"Her Man"

Pathe comes to bat with another powerful drama in "Her Man," based on the rollicking ballad of "Frankie and Johnnie." It is characterised by fine acting, and the effective direction of Tay Garnett. Read the extended review of this production on page 57.

RKO to Hold Back Wide Film Process

Hollywood—With M-G-M and United Artists working on wide screen processes, RKO probably will not use its projected process until the sound track is improved. As it is now, the film runs at 75 feet per minute and to reproduce successfully the sound track must be run at 90 feet per minute.

M-G-M will await reaction to "Billy, the Kid" before going ahead further on its Realife process. The wide effect is said to be obtained by oversize film. The company says that projectors can be fitted to handle the new device at a low cost.

7 More North Carolina Houses Go to Publix

Publix has acquired seven additional North Carolina theatres. They are the Palace and Lyric, Rocky Mount; White, Greenville; Mason, Goldsboro; and Paramount, Carolina and Lyric at Burlington. Meanwhile, the company has set Oct. 10 as the date to open the new Paramount, Staten Island, N. Y.

Nancy Carroll at L. I. Studio Instead of Bow

Nancy Carroll is to make her next picture at the Paramount New York studio, instead of Clara Bow, as previously announced. The Carroll vehicle will be "Two Against Death," an original by Dana Burnet.

Beery for 'Tol'able David'

Hollywood—Columbia is out after names for "Tol'able David," even though the title role is to be played by a screen unknown, Richard Cromwell. Noah Beery is the latest to be signed for the picture, and will play the heavy role, which "made" Ernest Torrence in silent pictures.

Robbed on Ride

Shirley Dinwoodie, assistant manager of the Lefferts, Richmond Hill, Queens, New York, went for a ride with bandits, who relieved him of $1,500 which he was taking to the bank. They shoved him from the car after reaching Manhattan.

Elsie Quits Stage

Hollywood—Elsie Janis has abandoned acting and will devote her time to writing. The actress announced her decision seven weeks after the death of her mother.

"Lottery Bride" Laughed at, So Producer Quits

Philadelphia—Declaring that film audiences would not stand for good music, Arthur Hammerstein announced that he was through with talking picture production, in an interview here, where "Luana," his stage show, is playing.

With this announcement, Hammerstein reverses his stand of last year when, with equal finality, he declared that he was through with the stage and would devote all his time and talents to the screen. His statement came in answer to Walter Damrosch's recently expressed opinion that it is futile for musicians to fight against the influx of "canned music."

"The motion picture audience will not stand for the best music," said Hammerstein. "I know, for I tried it in 'The Lottery Bride,' which I made in Hollywood this summer. When we showed it to the audience it either laughed, or paid no attention to what was going on on the screen, so we had to retake much of it to inject the ingredients the audience demands. Photography is the screen's most important asset, and it must continue to play up photography rather than voice or music.

"I announced last year that I was through with the stage and was entering picture production permanently. It was my intention to make 'Thais' and other masterpieces on the screen in operatic form, but I realized there was no place for serious music on the screen and I am planning to continue with stage shows and music rather than with the talking pictures."

Just a little while before he announced his stand for the films last year, Hammerstein was interested in a reproduction device which would eliminate orchestras in stage musical comedy productions.

Moran Resigns Universal Post; Joins Midwest Co.

Oklahoma City—Bill Moran has resigned as Universal branch manager in San Francisco and is returning here to go into partnership with Phil R. Isley in the Midwest Theatre Operating Co. The circuit is reported to be planning expansion in this state.

Tully at New Bedford

New Bedford, Mass.—The Publix Empire has reopened with new Western Electric sound equipment and a completely renovated house. W. R. Tully is now managing the theatre. He was formerly located with the Publix houses in Boston.

Flesh on Stage Draws Them In; Boosts R-K-O Net

Swing of public taste to flesh shows will be reflected in the third and fourth quarter earnings of Radio-Keith-Orpheum. Third quarter earnings are expected to be very favorable, with indications that the fourth quarter net will set a new high, eclipsing the three months' peak experienced in the first quarter of this year.

Joseph Plunkett

The vaudeville circuit under General Manager Joseph Plunkett now is enjoying one of its best seasons and the outlook for the new season is the best in years. Public apathy to average all-talker fare is the reputed cause of the spurt combination houses are enjoying, as pointed out last week by Motion Picture News. The outstanding pictures are continuing to click, but the general run of talkers have felt the need of stage shows in the de luxe houses, in order to maintain grosses.

Profits of Radio-Keith-Orpheum for the six months to Dec. 31 should show a substantial increase over the first half, when net after all charges, taxes and provision for preferred dividends of subsidiaries was $1,764,853, the New York News Bureau states. This is equal to 95 cents a share on 1,850,169 shares Class "A" no-par capital stock. Such earnings were greatest not only for any six months' period, but for any annual term, exceeding the $1,669,564, which also included non-recurring profits reported for year ended Dec. 31, 1929, equal before non-recurring profits to 62 cents a share and with such items to 92 cents a share.

"The company enjoyed a remarkable increase in net income in first quarter of this year, when it reported net earnings, after preferred subsidiary dividends of $1,607,622, equal to 87 cents a share on 1,850,169 Class "A" stock outstanding compared with $384,749 or 22 cents a share on 1,778,629 shares in the 1929 period," the report continues. "In the second quarter of this year net was $157,231, against deficit of $191,138 in similar term of 1929. In the third quarter of 1929 net income after all charges and provision for subsidiary preferred dividends was $793,833, equal to 44 cents a share on 1,808,409 Class "A" stock and in fourth quarter net was $147,123, or 8 cents a share.

"Radio-Keith-Orpheum follows a policy of writing off rentals for theatres over a period of 40 weeks during the time when theatre attendance is highest. This period includes fall, winter and spring months so that in June, July and August there are no charge-offs in this connection."

Resort Theatre Destroyed

Ocean City—Damage estimated at $125,000 was caused by fire which destroyed the Park here. The theatre closed last week for the season.

High Scaling

Bugs Bear complains that so many song writers are making the trip from Hollywood to New York these days that a fellow can't get an upper berth any more.

Roper, Connie Mack, Fighting Philly "Blues"

Philadelphia—Fight for an open Sunday in Philadelphia will be carried into the city council by Councilman William W. Roper as soon as that body convenes after the summer recess, ending Sept. 18. Roper, veteran Princeton football coach and Philadelphia's most aggressive councilman, plans to call Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, to testify before the council as well as representatives of the city governments of Washington and Boston, both of which have instituted liberal Sunday regulations. It is expected that representatives of theatrical and picture interests will be present at the meeting.

"It is my hope and confident expectations," Roper stated, "that we can reach ar almost unanimous decision in Philadelphia and present a solid front to the legislature next winter. Developments this summer have shown clearly that the blue laws are not in step with the times. The people of Philadelphia are not lawbreakers and they are entitled to pass their Sundays as they see fit, free from police interference."

Sound Over Novelty Stage In Chile; English Film OK

Washington—Novelty has worn off talkers at Chile, where exhibitors are going full steam ahead to wire all houses, according to a Dept. of Commerce report from Ambassador Culbertson at Santiago.

Talkers in English are acceptable to the Chilean public as the language is widely taught and is recognized as a medium of commerce, Ambassador Culbertson states. Public interest has been maintained in sound, it is pointed out.

Sterling Lining Up New U. K. Sales Unit

London—Sterling Film Co., Ltd., capitalized at $50,000, has been formed here to distribute. Headed by H. Defries, the organization is backed by S. Harrison, L. Zimmerman, and Harry Harrison, the latter as general sales manager.

Toomey Contract Renewed

Hollywood—Regis Toomey will appear in Paramount pictures for another year. A contract calling for more money and more important roles has been signed by Toomey this week. Toomey is slated to play opposite Clara Bow in her next talker.

Musicians May Strike Monday In Washington

Washington—Theatre owners and musicians are making last-minute efforts to avoid a strike threatened next Monday unless agreement is reached. Projectionists and stagehands also may be affected.

Theatre owners, through Julian Brylawski, president of the theatre owners' association, have promised to keep their houses open despite a strike, although they have not disclosed their plans for replacing the machine operators. A few years ago, when a similar situation threatened, managers and assistant managers at a number of houses took a course of instruction in operating projection machines, but that was before talking equipment had come into use.

As the situation stands now, the theatremen have offered to keep smaller orchestras than now employed in the Fox and Palace, but object to the union's demand that they keep orchestras in other houses.

"We have no quarrel with the musician's union," Brylawski said. "We have no differences on the pay scale, high as it is; we do not want different conditions, working hours or changed perquisites, but we do object to the musicians' union arbitrarily setting the size of our orchestras and dictating the number of musicians we must employ in order to get any. Yet our offer for orchestras where needed and musicians in all of the downtown and larger uptown houses was rejected contemptuously. The musicians' union, and not the managers, is taking 'living music' out of the theatres.

"Nowhere else in their wage scale do they attempt to enforce a specific number of men or to force compulsory employment on their clients. Why, therefore, penalize the theatres? And yet music today is but a small part of a modern theatre program. The silent picture that required music to fill the void has gone to join the horse car and the kerosene lamp.

"The theatre owners regret the present impasse—we do not feel at fault. The three-year contract that went out of existence Sept. 1 cost the theatres of Washington hundreds of thousands of dollars for unwanted and unneeded music, but it was a contract and we kept up our part of it, but we are not going to stick our heads in the same noose again. The theatres of Washington will meet any demand that the public make of them and the M. P. T. O. of the District of Columbia will keep its members' theatres open, no matter what happens."

Operators Ready to Sail

The owners do not believe that the projectionists, who have just signed contracts calling for pay increases, will join the musicians in a walkout, but it was stated by Fred Stevens, president of the projectionists' union, that his organization still has orders to walk out if an agreement is not reached by Sept. 15.

Charges that an "apparently organized effort" to force all living music out of the theatres was being made by the owners were voiced in a statement from the musicians' union, in which the chain theatres were likened to circuses as organizations which took much money out of a city and left but little return. Every intention of standing firm was voiced by the musicians, who are seeking to enlist the sympathy of the city by charges that "Wall street banking control" will benefit by the money saved by the houses through the elimination of orchestras and "correspondingly impoverish the local business man."

As a means of preventing hasty action on the part of the unions, Washington managers are giving consideration to the desirability of securing an injunction against a walkout if the negotiations now under way are unsuccessful.

They say they are reluctant to take this action, but believe themselves justified should their failure to secure an agreement with musicians result in an effort by the latter to take out the projectionists and stage hands.

The End

Hollywood — Charlie Chaplin has completed production of "City Lights," upon which he has been working for nearly three years.

150 Musicians Out in St. Louis Owing to Defi

St. Louis—Both sides are standing pat in the musicians' squabble here, which has resulted in dropping of orchestras and stage shows at all St. Louis theatres. Negotiations may be resumed when the Skouras contracts expire Sept. 19. Musicians on Sept. 1 refused to grant an extension of time to the Fox and St. Louis pending a new agreement, so the houses changed to a straight film policy.

Although the contract with the Skouras houses runs until Sept. 19, the firm decided to go along with the Fox and St. Louis in cutting out stage units and pit musicians. The musicians at the Ambassador and Missouri will report for work daily until Sept. 19, but will not be used.

The chief point in dispute was the effort of the musicians to change the status of the RKO-St. Louis from a vaudeville to a de luxe picture house and thus increase its orchestra from 12 to 20 pieces.

Abe E. Jeffries, chairman of the musicians' committee, said the membership of the union voted last week not to grant the extension.

This stand has thrown about 150 musicians out of work.

San Antone Unions Waive Boosts Until January

San Antonio—Taking cognizance of adverse business conditions and low attendance, the unions here have decided to waive demand for increases in wages under the old agreement until Jan. 1. The request for the postponement came from the theatres.

Musicians Lay Lockout Protest With Minister

Montreal—With the minister of labor at Ottawa having under advisement a protest by a deputation from the Montreal musicians' union charging that members of the orchestra at the Capitol there were locked out, the theatre, Friday, is beginning its second week as an all-sound house. "All Quiet on the Western Front" is the second week's attraction. Prices have been cut.

The musicians were locked out, it was claimed at the conference with the labor minister, after Famous Players Canadian had agreed through Eastern Division Manager Clarence Robson to a board of conciliation, under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, for a discussion of difficulties between the orchestra and the company.

The men claim the alleged lockout was a violation of the Federal statute. Meanwhile, Manager Dahn of the Montreal Capitol, has announced a straight talker policy, and return of stage shows has been abandoned temporarily.

Chains Dickering With Operators on Western Contract

Los Angeles—Negotiations still are under way for new operator contracts with circuit houses here. A $5 increase has been asked by the operators. The smaller and suburban theatres have settled, gaining concessions in the form of a one-man-in-the-booth agreement.

At San Francisco, contracts were signed in June, and in Portland and Seattle some relief is anticipated for smaller houses. Publix expects some relief in Rocky Mountain states. The circuit is not asking for a reduction in scale in any instance, but wants to eliminate over-manned booths and excessive overtime.

Stagehand Strike Ousts F. & M. Units

Hollywood — Threat of a stagehands' strike is looming at Long Beach and San Diego and, if it materializes, Fanchon & Marco shows will be pulled out of Fox West Coast houses in those cities. Demand for an extra flyman and for a six-day week at picture houses is the cause of the jam. Operators in the two cities are set on new contracts, it is stated.

Los Angeles stagehands are threatening a walkout Sept. 16 unless their demands are met, but an agreement is expected to be reached before the deadline.

To Determine Liabilities Of Sound Producers

Hollywood of M. A. Schlesinger, who traveled West to offer independent producers De Forest recording licenses without charge in an effort to create product outside the sphere of influence wielded by the electrics.

It is learned that some of the nature of the conferences held by Schlesinger on the coast eventually reached the ears of major studio executives and that decision to come to New York, bulwarked by the legal presence of Edwin Loeb, prominent Los Angeles attorney, developed directly from Schlesinger's activities.

Offered Free Licenses

He returned to New York this week, admitting that he had offered free licenses to independents but refusing to comment on the outcome. Reports current during the week that Western Electric and RCA Photophone had jointly bought him out for $50,000,000 are denied by Schlesinger.

Schlesinger told Motion Picture News that no negotiations, either directly or via bankers or third parties, were under way and that under no circumstances would he sell out. He declared himself interested only in world-wide participation and said he had informed both Otterson and David Sarnoff that only under such conditions would he consider a deal.

From another source entirely, it is understood that, prior to the Wilmington trial where General Talking Pictures emerged as victor in the first step in what many consider will prove to be the principal battle for basic patent supremacy, a deal was discussed but was turned down by Schlesinger because it was offered on the basis of a sale rather than participation. One familiar with the situation estimates that royalties involved to date approximate $100,000,000, this figure covering the exhibition of talkers throughout the world.

Erpi Refuses Analysis

That the W. E. producers have made up their minds to discover exactly how and where they stand assumed more tangible form during the week. There seems to be a difference of opinion over the interpretations to which the protection clause in the Western Electric contract might be subjected. Effort to secure an analysis of the clause from "Erpi" during the week was made by Motion Picture News, but the request was turned down.

The Schlesinger interests embrace a large chain of theatres in South Africa and the Far East, totaling perhaps 400. These are either owned or controlled through domination of the supply of film for the territories in which those houses operate. Schlesinger states it is essential for him to maintain the flow of product from American studios so that his exhibition interests may continue operation without interruption. He, therefore, points out that no matter how the patent tangle may swing, he is primarily interested in seeing to it that nothing impairs activity in Hollywood. He asks if it is not consequently obvious that his policy will be one of sympathy with the American producer.

Reports current in New York that General Talking Pictures had abandoned equipment sales and was marking time in the expectation that the Ries patent suit would result in a deal with Western Electric and RCA Photophone are emphatically denied by Schlesinger, who insists sales are now enjoying a peak never before attained in his company's history.

Shorts' Big Year

"From what we have already seen of the short product available for the coming season, it looks as if it will be the biggest year ever for quality short subjects," declares Burt Kelly, director of the short subjects department of Publix.

Dembow Sees Big Business Due to Good Pictures

With a rich harvest of product coming from all studios and improved weather conditions, this fall "will so violently explode the depression theory that not a single vestige will remain," declares Sam Dembow, Jr., vice-president of Publix.

"The minute that frightful weather conditions became slightly ameliorated and good pictures were available," he says, "business immediately swung back to, and even passed, its normal level. Obviously, this could not happen if an actual business depression existed."

The fall season is starting under "the most ideally-favorable conditions that have ever confronted the film industry," according to Dembow. The product, he says, is "at its uppermost peak of box-office effectiveness. The weather is the best to be had in all the year for theatre business. The natural reaction of vacationists is to be drawn back to the theatre. Every possible force which has any bearing on business conditions is rapidly lining up behind better theatre grosses for this fall."

Dembow believes that product for the fall season "outranks any array of real money-getting merchandise ever offered to the public in any line of business."

'Clay' Films to Start New Cycle in Common Rush

in some instances.

A few weeks ago the bandwagon rolled to the tune of melodramas and outdoor pictures. That was what the public wanted, it was broadcast in no uncertain terms. Society and problem dramas, it was stated, had gone the way of the backstage musicals, so far as box office pull is concerned.

Then along came M-G-M's "The Divorcee," which clicked pretty generally, with Fox following through with "Common Clay." The sensational four weeks' run of that picture at the Roxy, at a time when other houses were crying plenty, to be duplicated by subsequent runs, started the guessing all over again, and a swing to pictures of that "type."

only the purchase of sound machines could still the thunderous roar of complaint voiced by gob and devil-dog marine alike against the antiquated array of screen fare available since the advent of dialogue

The bids were submitted in all sizes and shapes and attractive concessions understood to have been included by several companies, realizing what a nice juicy piece of fruit old "Doc" Sam will prescribe when he hands out the plum for $500,000 worth of equipment. About $332,000 in cold cash is already on hand, with the rest to come from naval sources whenever needed.

This probably is the largest order to be received by a sound manufacturer in over a year and one of the largest single jobs in the history of the industry. More than one electric is known to have been watching for it with eagle-eye ever since completion of the wholesale wiring of picture houses, when they all settled down to the more quiet routine of orders few-and-far-between.

Picture executives who are close to high Washington circles discount the possibility of political patronage influencing bids for the big order. In certain Capitol Hill quarters, however, one company now very desirous of securing the $500,000 contract is looked upon with disfavor following its refusal to lend aid in launching a movement to create a film history of the life of George Washington for a forthcoming national celebration. The expenditure of a few thousands at that time no doubt would have helped tremendously at this crucial moment.

Motion Picture News exclusively published the incidents attending this "boner" when it happened three months ago, at which time it was pointed out that two or three companies refused cooperation when it was discovered the government had made available less funds than the production necessitated.

President Hoover is reported to have been personally enthusiastic over the film's possibilities as a great celluloid document, and it had his backing along with other figures important in Naval circles where "favors" such as a $500,000 contract might be handed out.

Kolfeldt Has News Reel House

Los Angeles — Management of West Coast's news reel theatre, recently opened, has been assigned to W. Kofeldt, with M. Murphy in charge of publicity.

"Angels" Breaks House Record at N. Y. Criterion

With Howard Hughes' air opus, "Hell's Angels," breaking a long-standing house record at New York's Criterion, the twin run at the Gaiety clicking high grosses, and "Abraham Lincoln" building up plenty strong at the nearby Central, the main stem box office spotlight is currently centered on $2 runs. Although the regular line-up of pop admission houses came through at a fairly decent pace, majority in the latter category made little to boast of.

"Romance," at the Capitol, failed to hold up in its second week as expected, despite la Garbo; "Outside the Law," featured at the Globe, was another so-so run, while "Top Speed," the Joe E. Brown comedy at the Strand, "Let's Go Native," another comedy at the Paramount and Roxy, with "Journey's End," all had unimpressive weeks. Weak advertising plug undoubtedly slowed down the latter.

Cool weather of this week automatically turns off the refrigerated systems and opens the way for fall and winter sessions, with box office grosses right down along the line showing the natural tendency to spurt upward from summer lows.

Estimated takings:

"BIG HOUSE" (M-G-M)

ASTOR—(1,120), 50c-75c-$1-$1.50-$2, 7 days, 11th week. Other attractions: Comedy, "College Hounds"; newsreel. Gross: $19,932, betters last week's take by $100; DeMille's "Madame Satan" is being readied for opening here, although grosses have held up well.

"ROMANCE" (M-G-M)

CAPITOL—(4,700), 35c-50c-75c-$1.50, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Overture, Hearst Metrotone news, presentation "Capitol on Parade." Gross: $78,374; a $20,000 drop under first week was too much for a Garbo.

"ABRAHAM LINCOLN" (United Artists)

CENTRAL—(1,490), $1-$2, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: Short-reel comedies. Gross: $18,279, a climb of $200 over opening week's figures and a knockout gross.

"HELL'S ANGELS" (Caddo-U. A.)
(Playing simultaneously at Criterion and Gaiety)

CRITERION—$1-$2-$2.50, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: None. Gross: $20,014, breaking all records at this house and mounting steadily; hundreds turned away all week.

"HELL'S ANGELS" (Caddo-U. A.)
(Play simultaneously at Criterion and Gaiety)

GAIETY—(808), $1-$1.50-$2-$2.50, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: None. Gross: $17,400; the dual Hughes run at this house continues to turn in sensational figures.

EMBASSY—All Newsreels

EMBASSY—(598), 25c, 7 days. Straight show, running continuously. Gross: $8,544; newsreel shows pulls 'em heavy, gross usually running well over par.

"OUTSIDE THE LAW" (Universal)

GLOBE—(1,050), 35c-50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Comedy, ("Carnival Revue"); cartoon, ("Honolulu"). Gross: $22,985; pretty good for this house, considering stiff competition of $2 runs nearby.

"MOBY DICK" (Warners)

HOLLYWOOD—(1,600), 60c-75c-$1-$1.50, 7 days, 3rd week. Other attractions: Two short reel comedies. Gross: $19,441; Barrymore is failing to hold up here; gross of the opening week totaled $25,000; a slide of $6,000 in the third week is plenty.

"LET'S GO NATIVE" (Paramount)

PARAMOUNT—(3,700), 40c-50c-65c-85c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Short, "Voices of Lonesome Men." Gross: $79,800; just so-so for this key Publix house; Oakie the draw.

"ANIMAL CRACKERS" (Paramount)

RIALTO—(1,904), 65c-85c, 7 days, 1st week. Other attractions: Short, "Many Moons." Gross: $62,500; four Marx brothers playing to s. r. o. and turning away plenty.

"MONTE CARLO" (Paramount)

RIVOLI—(2,103), 35c-65c-85c, 7 days, 1st week. Other attractions: Shorts, "Stein Song," "Sure Cure." Gross: $55,300; great and much higher than summer average.

"JOURNEY'S END" (Tiffany)

ROXY—(6,200), 50c-75c-$1, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, newsreel. Gross: $82,470; a low gross, but what can be expected when they fail to plug it?

"TOP SPEED" (Warners)

STRAND—(3,000), 35c-50c-65c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Shorts, "The Hard Guy," "Hot Tamale." Gross: $22,592; this house needs a good picture to get out of the red—and how!; summer performances were practically all very unimpressive.

"OLD ENGLISH" (First National)

WARNERS—(1,490), $1-$2, 7 days. Other attractions: Vitaphone Varieties. Gross: $21,577, holding up fairly well, nothing sensational, however.

"DAWN PATROL" (First National)

WINTER GARDEN—(1,493), 35c-50c-65c-$1, 7 days, 8th week. Other attractions: Frisco short, "Song Plugger." Gross: $25,450, nearing the end with Jolson's "Big Boy," scheduled to open shortly; grosses rolled up by "Dawn Patrol," were okay and mounted higher than was at first anticipated.

Hoover First

Hollywood—President Hoover will be the first person to view "The Big Trail," the Fox special which opens at Grauman's Chinese theatre here, early in October. No preview will be shown of the picture until the president has seen it, according to reports. Just when the special showing will occur, or where, has not been announced.

'Grumpy' Breaks Record at Des Moines Theatre

Des Moines—"Grumpy," playing the Strand, hit the best rating made at this theatre for many, many months, with 120%. The Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers" drew them in at the Des Moines. The picture was rated as a 200% attraction. The Des Moines has had big business for four weeks since its reopening.

Duncan Sisters, playing the Paramount next door, played up to the audience heavily. The first half of the week when they were on business was very good. The feature, "Sea God," was rated as a 100% draw. At the Orpheum "Little Accident" reported 150% business. Weather was pleasant.

Estimated takings:

Signal Doesn't Work; Robber Steals $226

Indianapolis—Police here are seeking a youthful gunman who raided the till of the Uptown and obtained about $226 from the cashier as she was counting the night's receipts. He shoved a gun through the window and commanded her to turn over the money. She stepped on a warning signal as she gave him the money, but the signal failed to work.

Big Slump Sends 'Angels' Down to $9,500 on Coast

Los Angeles—With "Hell's Angels" far in the lead of the flop brigade, a terrific slump sent box office figures well under average grosses. Six houses went under par plenty, and all others felt the pinch, with but two exception, "Bad Man," which was high for the week on a $25,000 take, and "Raffles," following-up on a gross of $19,500. Other runs were near enough to par to make the week unimpressive. "Angels" was low on $9,500, or 59%.

Denver—Harry Huffman will not construct a new theatre here but, instead, will reopen the Tabor Oct. 1 under a long term lease. The house will be completely remodeled.

Jolson Picture Flops Badly in Balto; Gets 45%

Baltimore—Judging by the amount of business done at the majority of first run houses during the week, the season should prove a very prosperous one for exhibitors.

The weather was variable, clear, cloudy, hot with showers Monday. The Veterans of Foreign Wars convention was in full swing with a big parade Tuesday.

"Common Clay," during its second week at the New theatre, took honors for the highest rating for the week with 125%, giving this house a gross of $12,500. It was held for a third week.

The Rivoli went right into a high stride with its opening week, "Hell's Angels," doing a gross of $9,200 which gave this house a rating of 115%. This house has had a typhoon dual-unit cooling system installed.

Highest gross for the week was done at Loew's Century, where "Good News" was the attraction. The gross was figured at $22,050, a rating of 105%. Opening was backed up by large slice of national advertising campaign.

The Palace, which reopened with Bert Smith Players in tabloid stage production with "Borrowed Wives," as the film feature, had a splendid seven days, doing an estimated $10,200 gross on a rating of 97%.

Showing the sound and musical production with a talking prologue, "The Silent Enemy," the Little did $1,100, rating 110%.

Al Jolson did not go over so well at the Auditorium in "Big Boy," with the $1 top price prevailing at night. This gross was figured at $3,960 for the 8 days, a rating of 45%. High price blamed for slump more than picture, but Jolson's film work seems to be losing appeal here.

Marxs Go Big At Omaha; They Bring in $10,800

Omaha—The Paramount held field day for the nuts all week with "Animal Crackers" to the tune of $10,800. This 135% week is the best for several months, thanks to the Marx brothers.

The eyes of Middle West RKO managers continues on the Orpheum here which has been doing phenomenal business all summer. "Dixiana," plus Viola Dana on the stage, brought another of those 125% weeks. Gross totaled $18,750. Oakie for the third time in six weeks at the World got $10,450 with "Let's Go Native." That's 110%.

"Queen High" was a dud at the State first half. Only $1,593, or 75%. Last half, "Grumpy" (Par.) rose to 90%. Money, $2,025. Weather was clear and warm.

That's News!

Ottawa—An exhibitor was found reading the Bible while roars of laughter sifted through the door during a presentation of "Queen High" on the screen. The man engrossed in the Holy Book was Manager Joe Franklin of B. F. Keith's theatre, Ottawa. It was a rare and valuable copy of the Kincaid Bible printed in 1775 which Franklin had purchased to add to his collection of old paintings and ancient relics.

Portland High To "Doughboys"; $13,950 Gross

Portland, Ore.—Spontaneous comedy of Buster Keaton and Portland's own Cliff Edwards in "Doughboys" was sufficient to roll up another heavy gross at Fox Broadway. Cooler weather and return of beach residents also swelled the population, helping the grosses at all houses. Critics were also unanimous that Fanchon & Marco outdid themselves with their "Green Devils Idea." Gross $13,950, rating 132%.

The popularity of Jack Oakie was again demonstrated at the box office of the Paramount in "Let's Go Native" with Publicity Manager Henson making splendid tie-ups and exploitation, and on the stage Gourfain's "Od-Dities." Gross $13,450, rating 125%.

Famous Canadian Net For Year to Be Off

Toronto—Due to the Paramount-Publix policy of withholding official information regarding Famous Players Canadian Corp., no announcement has been made regarding the financial statement for the fiscal year of the Canadian company ended Aug. 31. Intimation has been made, however, that the company will show its dividend earned by an ample margin for the full year, although revenue fell off during the last six months because of a decline in interest in talking pictures, it is said.

Three in Ottawa Click Heavy on S. R. O. Business

Ottawa—Theatres had things pretty much their own way during the week. Three houses, the Regent, Keith's and the Centre, had stand-up crowds on many occasions and a damp week-end helped to swell receipts. The following registered 100% ratings: "Manslaughter" at the Regent, "Anybody's War" at Keith's and "The Dawn Patrol" at the Centre. A mixture of weather was provided, Tuesday being very warm with succeeding days chilly.

Estimated takings:

Toronto Closing Sends Customers To Other Houses

Toronto—Heavy week-end business worked mightily for exhibitors, the weatherman helping by throwing in a wet brand of atmospheric conditions. The Canadian National Exhibition also brought many people to the Ontario capital, many of whom took in a show before going back to farms.

The Imperial closed to prepare for the return of stage shows and this sent many regular patrons to other downtown houses, thus adding more to receipts. Incidentally, it was the last week for stage presentations at the Uptown, which has become a second-run house. All in all, it was a big week.

Estimated takings:

"MANSLAUGHTER" (Paramount)

Heap Big Head

Hollywood—Wesley Ruggles, director, received the following wire from Chief Bacon Rind, Osage Indian, who will support Richard Dix in Radio Pictures' "Cimarron."

"Coming to Hollywood before time due for picture to get fan photos taken. Since announcement I was to play in 'Cimarron' got thirty-two letters from fans demanding autographed photos. Feel like movie star already. Bacon Rind."

Montreal Houses Start New Season With a Big Spurt

Montreal—The week in Montreal found leading theatres striking their "New Show World" stride, not one feature attraction showing signs of a flop. The return of summer resorters to the city and a great influx of tourists added appreciably to attendance.

The Palace registered $16,000 with "Animal Crackers," while the Princess was also well above average with "Rain or Shine" taking $11,500, or 105%. There wasn't a main-stem house below 90% in rating for the week. Weather was mostly cool.

Flexible Disc Formula Protection Is Asked

Suit for an injunction to restrain three Columbia professors from selling to RCA-Victor the secret formula for making flexible discs has been filed by the Durium Products Corp., New York. Otto Nielsen and Adolph Hawerlander devised the basic process, it is claimed, by using a printing press to sink the designs into paper, which was then covered with a heat-hardening, malleable varnish. When this proved imperfect, the professors were called in as consultants, and they developed the process at a given rate of compensation, the complaint charges. When sales reached 400,000 a week, they are alleged to have demanded more compensation under threat of selling the formula to rival disc makers.

$64,800 Taken By "Anybody's Woman" at Chi

Chicago—Good business kept Loop grosses above average for the most part. The Chicago Theatre, with "Anybody's Woman," after playing four opening days to capacity, slumped gradually toward the close, but finished with a new house record, according to W. K. Hollander of Publix-B. & K. The gross was $64,800, about $1,500 over the previous mark established one year ago by "Canary Murder Case" and a strong stage show. In the case of "Anybody's Woman," however, no name draw figured on the stage. B. & K., classifying the picture as "the strongest attraction ever to play the house," gave it entire credit and further complimented it by sending it to the Oriental for a second Loop week.

Two disappointments also marked the week. "Eyes of the World" returned a miserable $13,200 at the United Artists, and was replaced after one week by "Follow Thru." "Dixiana" likewise failed to live up to expectations at the Woods in its initial week. Its gross of $10,300 (90%) quickly led to a retrenchment in the advertising appropriation for this one.

Three other high spots were "Anybody's War," which replaced "Common Clay" in mid-week and got $24,000 (130%) in five days; "Animal Crackers" with $35,000 (125%) in its third week at McVickers, and "Bride of the Regiment," which gave the Castle $5,700 (190%) in its second week for "adults only."

Estimated takings:

"BRIDE OF THE REGIMENT" (F. N.)
CASTLE—(300), 60c, 2nd week. Other attractions: Newsreel. Gross: $5,700. Rating: 190%.

"ANYBODY'S WOMAN" (Paramount)
CHICAGO—(3,940), 35c-85c, 7 days. Other attractions: Stage show, orchestra, newsreel, comedy, novelty short. B. & K. claims a new house record with this one, which goes to the Oriental for a second Loop week. Gross: $64,800. Rating: 135%.

"ANIMAL CRACKERS" (Paramount)
McVICKERS—(2,284), 35c-85c, 3rd week. Other attractions: Comedy, newsreel, musical short. Gross: $35,000. Rating: 125%.

"GOOD INTENTIONS" (Fox)
(Second time in Loop)
MONROE—(962), 25c-40c, 7 days. Other attractions: Thirty minutes of newsreel, comedy. Gross: $3,600. Rating: 72%.

"CALL OF THE FLESH" (M-G-M)

"LITTLE ACCIDENT" (Universal)
PALACE—(2,509), 35c-85c, 3rd week in Loop. Other attractions: Five acts RKO vaude., newsreel, comedy. Picture playing to "adults only" was put in here after 17 days at the Woods. Gross: $20,400. Rating: 85%.

"ANYBODY'S WAR" (Paramount)
ROOSEVELT—(1,591), 35c-85c, 5 days. Other attractions: Newsreel, musical short. Gross: $24,000. Rating: 134%. Picture replaced "Common Clay" (Fox) after six weeks. Gross (final week): $18,500. Rating: 90%.

"THE STORM" (Universal)
STATE LAKE—(2,776), 35c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Five acts RKO vaude., comedy, newsreel. Gross: $22,100. Rating: 85%.

"EYES OF THE WORLD" (U.A.)
UNITED ARTISTS—(1,700), 35c-85c, 7 days, final. Other attractions: Two comedies, newsreel. Red for this house. "Follow Thru" (Paramount) replaced. Gross: $13,200. Rating: 60%.

"DIXIANA" (Radio)
WOODS—(1,166), 35c-75c, 1st week. Other attractions: Newsreel, novelty short, cartoon. A disappointment. Special appropriation for plugging this one in the dailies was called off when it failed to build. Held for another week regardless. Gross: $10,300. Rating: 90%.

China's Dilemma

Toronto—H. Karim Bari, former operator of a Chinese chain, is here sponsoring an exhibit of oriental models and antiques. He declares himself definitely out of celluloids in the Orient. He does not see what can be done to draw the yellow man in multitudes for talkers in English, nor how Hollywood would manage to translate wisecracks into the language of the East.

"Manslaughter" K.O.'s K.C. Runs With High Gross

Kansas City—The Newman again went over the top this week, taking the town by storm with "Manslaughter" and running up a gross of $18,000 or a rating 180%. John Gilbert proved to be a draw at the Uptown which showed "Redemption," grossing $7,500, which means 125% rating at this house. The Mainstreet turned in a rating of 110% with "Little Accident," grossing $16,500. "Man From Wyoming" did average business at the Royal, taking in $4,500, or 100%. Buster Keaton's "Dough Boys" gave the Midland $14,000, or 100%, while the Pantages reported 100% rating on "The Sea Bat," which got $10,000.

Estimated takings:

"DOUGH BOYS" (M-G-M)
MIDLAND—(4,000), 25c-40c, 7 days. Other attractions: "Kiddies' Review," Metrotone news, "Romantic Venice." Gross: $14,000. Rating: 100%.

Theatre Finds Cameraman On Staff Business Aid

Minneapolis—Local newsreel shots are proving a good draw at the Hennepin Orpheum, which maintains a cameraman to cover local events. The police and fire departments tip off the theatre on events to cover. The house recently made a big hit with shots of a grain elevator fire which were on the screen four hours after the blaze occurred.

Pathe Role for La Roy

Hollywood—Rita La Roy, RKO featured player, has been borrowed by Pathe to play in "Sin Takes a Holiday." Constance Bennett and Kenneth McKenna have the featured roles. Miss La Roy has just finished a feminine lead in Amos and Andy's talker "Check and Double Check."

Philly Goes for Sex Stuff in Big Way; Others Hold

Philadelphia—Current trend of popularity toward the sex picture was evidenced last week in Philly by the tremendous business scored by "The Office Wife," at the Mastbaum. Helped also by heavy week-end business all over town, the turnstile clicked to the tune of $51,000, beating all summer grosses, even the figures scored during the "personal appearance" series which included Eddie Cantor, Davey Lee, Will Osborne and others. The house rating for the week was 130%.

Fox held up to $28,000, over average for the fourth and last week of "Common Clay," while the seventh week of "Big House" at the Stanton reaped $12,000, likewise over average.

Playing its first run Paramount film, "Grumpy," the Arcadia, a 600 seater, did two days of good business at the beginning of the run, grossing $2,000. Film will play four more days, then several second runs will be shown under previous contracts, when house will return to Paramount first runs. The second week of a scheduled three week engagement of "Unguarded Girls" brought $11,000 to the Chestnut, a legit theatre.

The Earle also hung up its biggest gross record in months, scoring $25,000 with "Sap from Syracuse" for a 140% rating. Local popularity of Jack Oakie probably helped business.

Back on Standard Time

Baltimore—When the Rivoli, managed by Frank Price, Jr., reopened with "Hell's Angels," recently, it started operation on standard time instead of daylight time, as before it closed. Price thought it better to conform with the other theatres in this respect. Daylight Saving will end officially in Baltimore Sept. 27.

Allez Oop

Paris—They're beginning to talk box car numbers over here, judging by the yarn that Maurice Chevalier is getting 1,000,000 francs for two weeks' booking at the Theatre Chatelet—or $20,000 weekly. He can run up his take above that for the contract is reputed to call for a percentage of the gross, said to be a new high for a percentage appearance. Chevalier is said to have refused $5,000 for a week at a London vaudeville house.

State Fair Aids Mpls. Runs Pull In High Grosses

Minneapolis—With the Minnesota State Fair to pull the yokels in from the small towns, local theatres did not have to do a great deal of ballyhooing to make the shekels roll in. Opposition furnished by the Shubert, a legit house, which opened its season with "Let Us Be Gay" as the drama attraction and "Let's Go," a reorganized burlesque troupe at the Gayety, did not hit enough to notice.

The Century's box office grossed $12,500 on "Animal Crackers," to hit a rating of 115%. The Minnesota, a much bigger house, did not do as well in proportion to its size as the Century. It did $35,000 for the week, rating 100% on "Sap from Syracuse."

The Orpheum collected $20,500 on "Shooting Straight," getting much of its customers because of fair week. The house rated 98%. "Last of the Duanes" at the State took $21,000 to ring the bell at 95%. The Lyric, showing "Queen High," had a take of $3,000 to register 100%. The Aster followed suit, also getting a rating of 100% on a $3,000 take. They showed "The Silent Enemy." The death of a parachute jumper, George Babcock, at the Excelsior Amusement Park (out of town, but a crowd catcher) is claimed to be mainly responsible for the park closing earlier than usual. Weather was cool.

Estimated takings:

Frisco Top Goes To "Birth" on a $31,000 Intake

San Francisco—Theatres generally did not do as well as expected.

The weather was very pleasant and not too warm. "Birth of the Nation" did high business of the week with a $31,000 gross and a rating of 150%. "Animal Crackers," shown at the California for a second week, rated but 80% with a gross of $8,000. "Man Trouble," at the Fox, rated 125% and grossed $30,500.

"The Office Wife," shown at the Embassy, rated 106% and grossed $10,000 and "Our Blushing Brides," at Loew's Warfield, grossed $15,100 and rated 100%. "High Treason," at the Davies, rated 100% and grossed $8,000, considered well for these theatres.

Three more miniature golf links were opened during the week near the larger theatres, but it is not thought they will injure house receipts.

M. P.'s Operate Chain

Montreal—There are five present and former members of the Canadian Parliament on the directorate of Confederation Amusements, Ltd., operating a chain of five theatres in Montreal, according to offifficial announcement regarding the make-up of the company. C. B. Howard. a member of the House of Commons, is a vice-president and the directors include P. E. Blondin, Speaker of the Senate; G. A. Fateaux, a member of the Federal Cabinet; Emile Massicotte, a commoner, and Fern and Renfret, former secretary of state. F. A. Tabah of Montreal is the president and N. N. Lawand, managing director.

Another Harold

Kansas City—Police were notified here one night last week that Harold Lloyd had been held up and robbed in an alley in the downtown district. Several policemen were dispatched to the scene, hoping they might be of assistance to tne comedian. When they arrived, they learned that the person robbed was Harold Lloyd, but the name belonged to a 10-year-old newsboy, who had lost $1.65 to a couple of hoodlums.

Musicals Go Big In Boston; High Spot to "Native"

Boston—Box-office receipts took another jump upwards with the formal opening of the fall season and despite the reopening of many legitimate theatres which have been dark for eight or ten weeks. Metropolitan, with "Let's Go Native" hit one of the highest marks in months with a gross of $38,000 for 128%, while every new film in town boosted receipts.

The Marx brothers' "Animal Crackers" returned to town after a week's absence and pulled in $15,500 at the Scollay Square for 115%, a high figure for a third week for any film. "All Quiet on the Western Front" was held over for day-and-date showing at the Olympia and Uptown for a total of $31,000, dropping only $3,000 from the first week's grosses for the two theatres. "Dough Boys" at Loew's State hit $24,000 for 120%, while "Rough Romance" at the Keith-Albee" recorded an equal percentage and "Outside the Law" at Keith Memorial hit $25,500 for 110%. Every theatre in downtown Boston went well above the average for the week. Weather was fair and cool.

Higley Transferred

Cleveland—Howard Higley, RKO Hippodrome assistant manager, has been transferred to the Rivoli, Toledo, also an RKO house.

Cincy Theatres Polish Up, and Receipts Mount

Cincinnati—Business at RKO houses here is increasing by leaps and bounds. In fact, grosses at all the houses are now in excess of the highest figures reached during the regular season before RKO came into the picture, and this in spite of some of the hottest weather ever experienced in this territory. Some idea of the enormous increase in box-office takings can be gained when it is reported that the Albee, the only vaudefilm house in Cincinnati, has more than doubled its gross since June of this year.

The reason for this tremendous gain is not difficult to find. Better pictures are being booked, every conceivable method of novel and effective advertising, exploitation and tie-ups is being used, house employees are either being changed, or the present staffs are being taught to "step on it," and the entire house personnels from managers down to janitors are being schooled in modern theatre ethics. Houses are adorned with new fronts of ornamental design, and everything possible is being done to put Cincy on the theatrical map in a big way. Improvements are still being made, and S. R. O. signs are the rule rather than the exception.

Estimated takings:

"LITTLE ACCIDENT" (Universal)

ALBEE—(3,300), 35c-50c-75c, 7 days. Other attractions: Five acts of vaudeville, Audio Review No. 34 Metro news, comedy "The Brats" with Laurel and Hardy. Gross: $29,500. Rating: 132%.

Child Reaction Held Good Film Barometer

Hollywood—Child attendance should be regarded as some index of the general success of the program being submitted, according to Bradley King, authoress and scenarist, who is now writing the picture version and dialogue for "East Lynne," which Frank Lloyd is to direct for Fox. Not that production should be addressed to the juvenile taste, but it is an indication that the adult public is satisfied if the young people are permitted or encouraged to attend the theatre, she believes.

When the screen fare becomes too sophisticated or too unwholesome for the child, it is a fairly good warning that a large percentage of the adult patrons will turn away from the box-office, Miss King opines. The percentage of people to whom "high-brow" or sex impregnated films appeal is too small to permit their patronage to be a criterion, she declares.

Play Up Huston

Toronto—"Abraham Lincoln" will play the Shubert legit house in Toronto, the Royal Alexandra, opening on Sept. 15. Exploitation is being based, not so much on "Honest Abe," who might not appeal to Canadians, as the fact that a Torontonian, Walter Huston, plays the title role.

"Manslaughter" And "Flesh" in Stiff B. O. Tilt

Seattle—Again this week a major share of first-run business was divided between the two key houses operated by Fox and Publix. The Fox Fifth Avenue, standard bearer of the former chain, scored high gross with about $16,900 (120%) on "Call of the Flesh." The Paramount was a close second with about $15,000 (120%) on "Manslaughter."

Fox's Coliseum, now on an extended run policy at 50c top, clicked close to $5,000 on "Common Clay," moved from the Fox Fifth Avenue, where it took $17,000 last week. The Coliseum rating was 155%.

"Good News" in its first week at the Fox Theatre failed to reach the 100% mark, but is being held for another week.

The two disappointments of the week were "Silent Enemy" and "Journey's End." The former in its one-week run at Publix's Metropolitan was given no exploitation and very little more advertising, and was a weak bet throughout, instead of the strong attraction that the film itself warrants. "Journey's End" in its second week at Hamrick's Music Box fell to a low level, justifying the belief that the public here does not want war films (since "All Quiet") or films without known stars.

Estimated takings:

"RAFFLES" (U. A.)

Air Stunt in New Film

Berlin—The Germany company which went to the Swiss Alps to film "Stars Over Mont Blanc" has returned to complete interiors. The German pilot, Udet, makes a landing 3,200 meters high in the mountains in one of the climatic sequences.

Par Rating Hit By All Houses At Cleveland

Cleveland—Downtown picture business is holding to very high averages as compared with the past six months. Pleasant cool weather, and unusually good screen attractions are drawing the crowds. Big vaudeville headliners are pulling business for RKO Palace. While there are no SRO signs around the theatre lobbies, and no long box office lines, auditoriums of the first-run houses are well filled both matinees and evenings, and it's this consistent business that is making for a good weekly average. Neighborhood houses are unanimous in stating that their business has not picked up sufficiently to make them optimistic in their attitude toward the new season.

"Common Clay" did so well at the Stillman during its second week that it is being held a third week. Keaton's Dough Boys" pulled heavy attendance, with Fred Waring and His Pennsylvanians as the big stage drawing card.

Estimated takings:

"COMMON CLAY" (M-G-M)

STILLMAN—(1,900), 40c-75c, 7 days, 2nd week. Other attractions: "Midnight in a Toy Shop," (Columbia); "Egypt, the Land of Pyramids," (Standard Film); Screen Snap Shots, (Columbia); Fox Movietone news. Gross: $16,000. Rating: 106%.

Cosmetics for Men!

Cleveland—Clarence Ward, late with Fox, and Henry Laws, formerly with Pathe, are district sales representatives for a 13-piece cosmetic set to be distributed as premiums at theatres. The sets come in two types—one for women and another for men. This is said to be the first premium offered for men theatre patrons.

Ban on Prison Films in Ohio Election Issue

Columbus, O.—Ban on "The Big House" and other films depicting prison conditions may be made an issue in the Ohio elections, it is indicated by William G. Pickrel, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, in assailing the censors' stand in the matter.

"Unjustifiable censorship of the films," he says, "is as much an infringement on freedom to express ideas as would be curtailment of the liberty of the newspapers. I am assured by the concurrence in judgment of officials of other states and qualified picture critics that there are no defensible reasons for barring the film in question from Ohio.

"It is inconceivable that the simple matter of passing or rejecting a movie film should become a baffling problem of statecraft too intricate for immediate solution by a governor. I am certain that when my colleague, George White, becomes governor we shall see such minor questions as well as the major affairs of government handled with common sense and fairness. If the censorship department were unable to determine what to do, George White as governor would apply sound reasoning and a sense of justice and arrive at a decision quickly. There would be no suspension of action suggesting fear, evasion or political expediency."

Refuse Official Ruling

Pickrel's statement was evoked by persistence of state censorship officials in failing to permit or forbid showing of "The Big House" in Ohio. Without offering legal grounds for prohibiting it, the department has declined for months to make an official ruling on the admissibility of the film and thus has prevented its exhibition.

Theatre owners, who have charged that concern over possible political effects of showing the picture is responsible for lack of official sanction, pointed to the fate of three other pictures today in support of their conviction. These are "Numbered men," "The Convict's Code" and "The Squealer." Through all of these runs a prison story based upon overcrowded conditions surrounding convicts, they assert. None of them can be barred on moral or legal grounds, it is contended, but all of them have been denied official approval necessary to their distribution in Ohio.

To reluctance of Governor Cooper's administration to have public interest centered upon Ohio penal conditions and the penitentiary fire during the election campaign they ascribe the policy of deferring an official ruling.

Meanwhile protests accumulated as Ohio residents of border towns crossed state boundaries to view "The Big House" in neighboring communities and came away to testify their morals were unsullied, their minds undefiled, but their appreciation of the problem of prison reform was intensified.

"Non-showing of this production placed a great industry of the state of Ohio in a very embarrassing position, as the general public is requesting that this picture be shown or a legitimate reason for not permitting it be given," said an official of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association. "I know of no reason why it is being held back unless it be for some personal and private purpose."

Iowa Showmen Favor Joining Allied States

Des Moines—Directors of the new Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa favor affiliation with Allied States Association, it is reported here, following a meeting of the board attended by W. A. Steffes of Minneapolis, as an Allied organizer. However, under the by-laws, the directors can only submit their recommendations to the membership meeting in convention.

E. P. Smith

Allied, it is understood, is to loan one of its secretaries to the new Iowa association to assist in organizing the state. Meanwhile, there is speculation over the future status of the M. P. T. O. of Iowa, headed by E. P. Smith. Whether this organization will disband at its fall convention, or continue to carry on in opposition to the new independent organization, is problematical.

Canadian Woman Leader Wants Gov't in Films

Ottawa—The Canadian government has been asked to sponsor a talking picture industry in the Dominion by Mrs. A. Carolyn Bayfield of Victoria, who has a financial interest in British Pictures Producers, Ltd., which has a studio in Victoria. That company has just turned out its first production, "Forest Adventures."

Mrs. Bayfield, who is a prominent worker in women's organizations, has announced she will go to London from Ottawa to invite British capital to invest in a talking picture industry in Canada and in Canadian theatres to provide an outlet for British films.

To Show Irish Films

San Francisco—Premiere of two pictures made in Ireland will be held soon at the Knights of Columbus Hall under the auspices of Irish Press, Ltd., of Dublin. Proceeds of the affairs will go towards the establishment of Eamon de Valera's projected daily in that city. "Irish Destiny" will be the picture feature on the program.

Helen Harrison Joins Big 4

Helen Harrison, formerly fan paper editor for Pathe, has become publicity chief of Big 4 Film, which is releasing a Western talker monthly via the independent market.

Gov't to Watch Ether-Films with An "Eagle-Eye"

Washington—While the Federal Radio Commission, which has complete governmental powers over television, has no intention to hinder the new growing art, it has adopted a stern policy regarding applicants for frequency assignments, who hereafter must produce evidence that their work is legitimate research before broadcasting privileges will be granted.

The commission, according to Gerald C. Gross, one of its engineer members, "has been forced to deny a large number of requests for television stations from applicants who were not interested from an experimental research standpoint. The main purpose of the regulations is to encourage and foster technical progress in television in order that the public may be better served."

The international radio convention of 1927, signed in Washington on the occasion of the last general international radio convention, did not provide specifically for frequency assignments to the new service called visual broadcasting, the most important subdivision of which is television, the engineer explained.

4 Frequency Bands in U. S.

A North American conference, held at Ottawa, Canada, in January, 1929, set aside the following frequencies for television assignments: 2,000 to 2,100 kilocycles; 2,100 to 2,200 kilocycles; 2,750 to 2 850 kilocycles; 2,850 to 2,950 kilocycles, with the additional frequency band 2,200 to 2,300 kilocycles, available for assignment in the United States, in such geographical regions as the South and Southwest, where such assignments would not interfere with the use of the same frequencies for other purposes in Canada or any other nation on the North American Continent, or in the West Indies. It will thus be seen that there are only four frequency bands, each 100 kilocycles wide, for general allocation in the United States.

The Federal Radio Commission has maintained a policy of permitting and encouraging the type of legitimate experimental research work in television, which will advance the art. For this reason, the present frequency assignments to television stations are made upon a purely experimental basis. All of these stations are subject to the provisions of General Order 64, covering experimental stations. This order requires the filing of regular quarterly reports showing the technical progress made by the station during the previous quarter, and definitely precludes the commercializing of the stations' transmissions. Since a large part of experimental television work can be conducted in the laboratory long before any need exists to conduct the transmissions on radio waves, and the actual radio transmission is in reality one of the more advanced stages of this development work, the Commission now requires a showing of laboratory research in television previously carried on by the applicant before

Sees September As a Fine Month For Kid Matinees

Los Angeles—September offers splendid opportunities for special Saturday morning kiddie shows, according to Ryllis Hemington, director of public relations for Fox West Coast, who has prepared the following suggestions for Saturday, September 20:

Saturday, September 20

James Fennimore Cooper, Sept. 15, 1789-1851. Novelist. (Wrote "Last of the Mohicans.")

(a) Guests of honor: Members of Writers Club, Book Clubs, Indian Woman's Club.

(b) Librarian to tell children of Cooper's life and his writings.

(c) Arrange with book store for window display of Cooper's books, using card announcing that matinee on Saturday, September 20, is celebrating Cooper's birthday.

(d) Doorman in Indian costume.

(e) Attendance prize: Small copy of "Last of the Mohicans" for older boy or little Indian doll for girl.

(f) Cooperate with the Indian Woman's Club for display in foyer of tepee and Indian relics; Indian attendant in costume. Old Indian tepee and relics might be a loan of window decorations from sporting goods store.

Pictures:

1. "War Paint" (McCoy-M-G-M., 5 rls.)
2. "Savages" (Indians-Talking Picture Epics, 5 rls.)
3. "Spoilers of the West" (McCoy-Indians-M-G-M., 6 rls.)
4. "Custer's Last Fight" (Roy Stewart, 6 rls.)
5. "Orphan of the Sage" (Pioneers-RKO, 6 rls.)
6. "Pony Express" (Paramount, 8 rls.)
7. "Covered Wagon" (Paramount, 8 rls.)
8. "Vanishing American" (Dix-Para., 7 rls.)
9. "Tumbleweeds" (homesteaders-Bill Hart-U. A., 7 rls.)

Shorts:

1. "Little Indian Weaver" (Pathe, 2 rls.)
2. "Cow Camp Ballads" (Bruce scenic-Para., 1 rl.)
3. "Sunset Hunter" (Scenic-Para., 1 rl.)
4. "Pining Pioneers" (Bruce scenic-Para., 1 rl.)
5. "Bow and Arrow" (Sportlight-Pathe, 1 rl.)
6. "Western Whoopee" (Fable-Pathe, 1 rl.)

Pilgrims Sailed in the "Mayflower" from Plymouth, England, Sept. 16, 1620.

(Poem: "The Pilgrim Fathers" by Wordsworth.)

(a) Guests of honor:
1. Daughters of the American Revolution
2. Daughters of the American Colonists
3. Colonial Dames
4. Daughters of the British Empire.

(b) Display from library of books and pictures relating to this period.

(c) Cooperate with book store for window display of early American books with card calling attention to the fact that the Junior Matinee is celebrating the sailing of the "Mayflower."

(d) History teacher or librarian to tell of the difficulties encountered by the Pilgrims in crossing the Atlantic, the landing, early experiences, and their first harvest.

(e) Attendance prize: Small print of the "Mayflower" or copy of Wordsworth's poem, "The Pilgrim Fathers."

(f) Doorman and usherettes in Pilgrim costumes.

(g) Children in Pilgrim costume admitted free.

(h) If possible, have cartoonist or artist illustrate on blackboard the arrival and early activities of Pilgrim Fathers.

Pictures:

1. "Evangeline" (Fox, 5 rls.)
2. "Evangeline" (U. A., 10 rls.)
3. "America" (U. A., 11 rls.)
4. "We Americans" (Univ., 8 rls.)

Shorts:

1. "Landing of the Pilgrims" (Chronicles of America Series-Pathe, 2 rls.)
2. "Little Indian Weaver" (Pathe, 2 rls.)
3. "Moon Bride's Wedding" (Para., 1 rl.)

Constitution Day, Sept. 17.

The Constitution of the United States adopted 1787. "It was framed by the Constitutional Convention which met in Philadelphia, May 25, 1787, and adjourned September 17, 1787. It went into effect March 4, 1789, having been ratified by eleven of the thirteen states, others ratifying it November 21, 1789, and May 29, 1790, respectively.

"The Constitution deserves the veneration with which Americans have been accustomed to regard it. It ranks above every other written Constitution for the intrinsic excellence of its scheme, its adaptation to the circumstances of the people, the simplicity, brevity and precision of its language, its judicious mixture of definiteness in principle with elasticity in details."—Bryce "American Commonwealth."

"Liberty and Union now and forever, one and inseparable."

(a) Guests of honor:
1. Daughters of the American Revolution
2. Daughters of the American Colonists
3. Colonial Dames.

(b) Invite local judge, mayor or city manager to explain, simply, the Constitution and its meaning to children; freedom as set forth by the Constitution, comparable to other forms of government.

(c) Librarian or history teacher to explain, briefly, the meaning of the expression: "James Madison, the father; John Marshall, expounder; Daniel Webster, defender of the Constitution."

(d) Newspaper editors to tell of their part in promoting a better knowledge of the Constitution through oratorical contests.

(e) Attendance prize: Copy of the Constitution.

(f) Library to furnish display of pictures of early American flags.

(g) Singing of patriotic airs.

Pictures:

1. "Quality Street" (M-G-M., 7 rls.)
2. "Janice Meredith" (M-G-M., 8 rls.)
3. "Little Old New York" (M-G-M., 7 rls.)

Shorts:

1. Chronicles of America Series (Pathe, 2 rls.)
2. "Frontier Romance" (Revolution-M-G-M., 2 rls.)
3. "Paul Revere" (comedy-Univ., 1 rl.)
4. "Two Americans" (patriotic playlet-Para., 2 rls.)
5. "Star Spangled Banner" (Pathe, 1 rl.)

Louis Joliet, Sept. 21, 1645-1700.

French-Canadian explorer. Pioneer in Mississippi Valley explorations in company with Marquette.

(a) Guests of honor:
1. Explorers
2. Geographical Society
3. French-Canadian family.

(b) Display American and French flags.

(c) Member of Historical Society, history teacher or librarian to review the outstanding experiences of Joliet in his trips of exploration.

(d) Geography or history teacher to illustrate with blackboard or map the territory explored and to tell of the Indian and wild animal life of that time.

(e) Cooperate with book store for window display of books on travel, animal life and Indian lore, with card announcing the commemoration of the birthday of Louis Joliet at the Junior Matinee.

(f) Attendance prize: Small book on travel or animal life.

Pictures:

1. "Canadian" (Para., 8 rls.)
2. "Prisoner of the Storm" (Univ., 6 rls.)
3. "Red Riders of Canada" (mounted police-RKO, 7 rls.)
4. "The Flaming Forest" (Canada-M-G-M., 7 rls.)

Emancipation Proclamation Issued Provisionally by President Lincoln, Sept. 22nd, 1862.

Known as Emancipation Day.

(a) Guests of honor:
1. Daughters of the Confederacy
2. Civil War veterans.

(b) Display of flags of that period.

(c) Boy Scout leader to tell the interesting story of the life of Abraham Lincoln, his boyhood, young manhood, political life and great service to his country.

(d) Civil War veteran in uniform to read excerpts from the Emancipation Proclamation and explain meaning of same.

(e) Singing of Civil War songs led by member of the Music Division of the Federated Woman's Club.

(f) Doorman in Civil War uniform.

(g) If possible have small group of colored children sing (or children in "blackface").

(h) Attendance prize: Small print of Abraham Lincoln.

Unions Blamed For Stench Bombs In Indiana House

Fort Wayne, Ind.—An audience in the Creighton theatre here was thrown into a near panic when five stench bombs exploded during the first evening show. Tony H. Neilesen, owner, declared that the bottles were carried into the show by two persons in sympathy with the union operators released by the management Aug. 31. Since that time the theatre had been picketed.

The offensive odor caused a number of women and children in the theatre to faint. Police were called to restore order. The theatre was filled to capacity at the time. Part of the audience remained seated during the performance.

The management had refused to grant demands for higher wages to the machine operators and since Sept. 1, had been operating with non-union operators. The wage demand was $65 weekly for 4½ hours a day. The man had been receiving $50 a week, having been raised last March from $41 a week. Neilsen said he positively would refuse to employ union labor at his theatre from now on.

Ralph T. Fisher, manager of the Capitol theatre here, also owned by Neilesen, reported the same night that while returning to the business district he was forced to drive his machine to the curb by a man he believes to have been a sympathizer of the operators. Fisher declared the man threatened to hit him. The owner declared he would seek a court injunction restraining picketing his theatre by union members.

Exhibitor Made the Goat In Sunday Closing Fight

Owensboro, Ky.—R. P. Thomas, manager of the Bleich and Empress theatres, who has been arrested for 15 successive Sundays for violation of the Sunday labor law, and who, to prove that he was discriminated against, caused the arrest of 144 other business men in the city for similar offenses, was fined $50 when his last case was tried.

The Ministerial Association, which preferred the charges, retained an attorney to assist the prosecuting attorney in the case against Thomas. Four theatre employes arrested with Thomas were tried by juries and found not guilty, and another employe was acquitted before the case came to trial, the court holding that insufficient evidence had been introduced against him. The 144 men arrested in Thomas' clean-up crusade were either acquitted, or the cases pigeonholed.

Joy Killer

First Maid—"So you don't like to work for highbrow directors?"

Second Maid—"You bet I don't. I worked for one nut—and never again! Him and her was fighting continually, and it kept me too busy running back and forth between the keyhole and the dictionary all the time."

"She's Dancing with Tears in Her Eyes"

A sob sister of the over-flowery fan paper vintage would have us believe that Mary Pickford is at odds with this cruel world, having been dealt a blow of indifference—or what have you—after 25 years of "unhappy servitude."

"Since the poverty-bareness of her childhood," pens this writer, "she has striven and slaved to acquire that success measured in the dimes and dollars of the movie public. She has seen her girlhood romance wither on the stem like a blighted rose. Children have been denied her. Family escapades have brought her sorrow. The searing rays of white-hot publicity have burned into the most sacredly secret corners of her heart. . . .

"In return for a quarter-century of unhappy servitude she has failed to win the common freedom necessary to either ignore the gossip-mongers, or sever a loveknot that may have become a gyve upon her heart. Mary Pickford would gladly exchange life-roles with any of her flapper fans. 'Our Mary' has known little of happiness."

And this, despite the fact that "Our Mary," from her "quarter-century of unhappy servitude," has amassed one of the big fortunes of Hollywood, and during which she was "queen of the May" for a longer period than any other living picture star.

Cincy Exhibitors Back to Old Scale

Cincinnati—Refusing to continue with the basic wage cut agreed to for July and August, local operators have insisted that exhibitors continue on the old contract scale which does not expire until Sept. 1, next year.

Without any alternative the reinstatement was made and first run exhibitors once again pay a weekly total of $672 for four men, two daily shifts at $84 per man. Stage man's salary of $70 weekly is additional. Legitimate theatres continue without change, while smaller houses are also ordered to operate on the basis of full salary.

Report Legitimate In Cleveland House

Cleveland—It is rumored that a plan is on foot to show Erlanger stage productions at the Public Auditorium this season instead of at the Ohio, where they have been shown since the house was built. Ed Strong and Robert McLaughlin of the Ohio are in New York trying to renew their agreement with the Erlanger interests. It is said that McLaughlin had a verbal agreement with A. Erlanger which became void upon the death of Erlanger. No alternative policy for the Ohio has been suggested in the event that the Erlanger situation is not satisfactorily adjusted. It is known, however, that because of an arrangement with Loew's Ohio Theatre, the Ohio is limited in its possibility of showing pictures in competition with the Loew houses.

Cawthorn, Sparks Together

Hollywood—Joseph Cawthorn and Ned Sparks, RKO comedians, will appear together in a picture called "The Accordion Man." No director has been assigned for the production as yet.

Pose for Photos, Break Into Print, But Get Nowhere

Milwaukee—Differences between theatre owners and operators still are unsettled, although conferences have been held regularly during the last three weeks. Outside of having their pictures taken by the daily newspapers, nothing definite has been done.

C. A. Hoover, secretary of the operators' union; C. A. Millis, president of the operators; A. Guttenberg, vice-president of the Milwaukee Theatre Owners; Fred S. Meyer, past president of the owners and chairman of the arbitration committee; Steve Bauer, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin; Adam Snyder, vice-president of the operators, and Glenn Kalkhoff, business manager of the operators, all broke into print. But there is no news on disposition of the strike.

The understanding seems to be that the status quo will obtain until a new agreement is reached, which should be before Sept. 15, according to indications.

Planes to Be Used in Filming "Cimarron" Shots

Hollywood—Airplanes will be used to get the scenes which are too wide for a stationary camera shot when "Cimarron" is filmed, according to plans made by Wesley Ruggles, director. Heretofore such shots were made from mountain tops but Ruggles thinks that the panoramic view from a plane will be more effective. The thousands of men, women, animals and wagons participating in the Oklahoma land rush can all be filmed at once with this new method. Shooting on the special production has started, with Richard Dix in the leading role. RKO is producing the talker.

Gets Sheboygan House

Sheboygan, Wis.—Ed. Benjii is temporarily in charge of the Fox, succeeding Julius Lamm, who has gone to Cleveland to manage a Warner house. The Fox figured in the recent accident when its canopy fell on a crowd of people watching the Legion parade, injuring over twenty. Benjii is also manager of the circuit's Oshkosh and Strand at Oshkosh.

Sound for the Eskimoes

Fort Churchill—Canada's far north ocean grain port, Fort Churchill, on Hudson's Bay, now has talking pictures, the Prince of Wales theatre, seating 250, having been wired. Eskimos, Indians and the few whites crowd the theatre every night.

THE

Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

A COIL of wire is a simple thing, yet its action under different electrical conditions is ofttimes the cause of great confusion. Our discussion up to this point stated that when current was caused to flow through a coil of wire, imaginary lines of force were created around that wire. These lines of force are known as magnetic flux and, while they are not visable, evoke forces which can be set to work. We further stated that a coil of wire bears a certain name, inductance which is related to the generation of flux. Let us see how.

Suppose we arrange a coil of a large number of turns as in Figure 55. The coil is in series with a current indicating meter, a battery and a switch. It is natural that when the switch S is closed current will flow in the circuit. Furthermore, the magnitude of the current will be limited by the resistance of the circuit, primarily by the D. C. resistance of the coil. Suppose that the coil has 5,000 turns and the resistance of the wire used in the coil is 2,000 ohms. The voltage of the battery is 50 volts.

If we now close the switch S, the electrical circuit is completed and, if we observe the action of the meter subsequent to the instant that the switch was closed, we note that the current in the circuit as indicated upon the meter M rises slowly from the zero value to some higher value and after a short period remains at rest at some value of current. The mystifying action considering the normal speed of electric current is that the meter does not instantaneously rise to its maximum value. The maximum value naturally is that value at which the meter needle came to rest after the circuit was closed.

If we now open the switch S, we again note a peculiar action. The opening of the switch should instantaneously interrupt the circuit and current flow should instantaneously cease. Such does not appear to be the case because the meter needle does not drop suddenly to zero. Instead its motion appears sluggish; that is, its drop from the maximum to the zero position is slower than what would be termed instantaneous. A fraction of a second elapses before the meter reaches zero and, when observed by the eye, one realizes that the current flow in the circuit seems to be retarded. A retarding action is actually taking place. If we were to show how the current flows through that circuit, a curve such as that shown in Figure 56 would be the closest approximation. The solid curve shows current variation with respect to time for the circuit shown in Figure 55. Neglecting the actual action in the circuit, the maximum amount of current in the circuit is limited solely by the resistance of the coil L. (We neglect the battery and the conductor resistances). An examination of Figure 56 shows that a definite period elapses before the current in the circuit reaches value governed by the simple form of Ohm's law, where

$$I = \frac{E}{R}$$

In other words, according to the electrical constants quoted earlier in this text, the current flow in the circuit should be 25 milliamperes or .025 ampere. Such a value of current flows after a period of time as shown by the junction point between the solid and the dashed line curves in Figure 56. Such a condition is contrary to what would exist if the coil L were replaced by a pure resistance of 2,000 ohms. Indicating instruments of high precision, arranged to show the current at the moment the switch is closed in a circuit, illuminate upon the condition that, in a purely resistive circuit, the current reaches its maximum value as governed by the resistance, the moment the switch is closed. There is no lag as in the case of the inductance L.

Retard action upon current flow through inductance. We know that the action of current through a conductor is to create magnetic lines of force around that conductor. The fact that current does flow through the conductor is due to the application of a voltage across the terminals of that conductor. Now, when the flux lines are produced, their origin is the charge flowing within the conductor. The number of flux lines are proportional to the current and any change in current will change the number of flux lines.

Now the flux due to the current flow in the wire surrounds the wire and, as such, there occurs a reaction between the generated flux lines and the coil itself. In other words the coil turns which produce the flux by virtue of the current flow again link with the flux lines. The final action is interesting. The linkage between the induced magnetic field and the coil turns produces a voltage across the terminals of the coil. This voltage is known as the "induced" voltage or emf of self induction.

Another significant fact is allied with the induced voltage. In accordance with the law developed by Lenz and bearing his name, the direction of the emf of self induction is opposite to the applied voltage. Another important consideration is that the emf of self induction is produced only when the flux is varying. And a third, is that the emf of self inductance produces its own current which naturally is in a direction opposite to the current due to the applied voltage. The current flow due to the emf of self induction produces its own flux lines which are in a direction opposite to that due to the applied voltage. Lenz's law explains the relation between the applied and induced currents and the respective magnetic fields. Thus Whenever an induced current arises, by reason of some change in linkings, the magnetic field about the induced current is in such direction as to oppose the change in current.

To explain the above law we must dwell a little longer upon linkings. We stated that the flux is due to current flow. We also stated that the flux links with the circuit responsible for the flux. The number of linkages is dependent upon the structure of the circuit. (One should remember that such linkages take place with all forms of conductors, and, while it is customary to neglect such linkages in straight wires, they occur nevertheless.) If the circuit consists of a single turn of wire, the flux lines can link but once with that circuit. On the other hand, if the circuit consists of a coil of many turns, the flux may link with the individual turns and the flux of one turn may link with other turns in that coil. The actual number of linkages between flux and turn depends upon several factors, magnitude of current, size, shape and form of the circuit. If the current is constant, only the last three must be considered.

Now, in connection with the coil shown in Figure 55 and Lenz's law, we must consider two instances. First, the moment that the switch S is closed and second, the next successive instant. When the switch is first closed, current starts to flow, that is charges are moving through the coil. These charges create a flux which links with the turn and induces a counter emf and current. The induced current creates its own flux which tends to limit the original flow of current. Such is the action at the first instant. During the next, however, the applied voltage is forcing more current through the coil and the induced current, being due to the original current, lags in action behind the original current, hence is not equal and simultaneous.

Consequently, the retarding action is not complete and the current due to the applied voltage gradually increases and, after a period of time, reaches the maximum governed by the resistance of the circuit. At this time, there is no further change in current and with an applied potential of D. C. character there are no further variations in the number of linkages that the current through the circuit remains constant. That period during which a variation in linkages occurs and the current flow is retarded is shown by the sloping portion of the solid curve in Figure 56.

From the above and reference to Figure 55, we can glean a significant fact, namely that the current lags behind the voltage in an inductance This is evident when we consider that the voltage across the coil produces the action which limits the current flow, hence the voltage is there before the current. This will be shown in greater detail when we consider alternating voltages applied to inductances. The fact that a coil of wire possesses the property of retarding current flow and changes in current is utilized in sundry manner to be mentioned later in this text.

Inductance. The word inductance frequently proves confusing because of its applications. We designate a coil of wire by calling it an inductance, yet the word inductance actually signifies electrical inertia. Inductance is a property possessed by a coil of wire, and the word is employed to enable a means of differentiating between the varying characteristics of circuits relative to flux which threads these circuits. Suppose that we had two coils, one consisting of 500 turns and the other of 2,000 turns. Both are windings and let us assume are wound upon like cores, bakelite tubes. Furthermore, the wire used for the coil with the fewer turns is larger than that used for the coil with the greater number of turns so that both coils occupy the same physical space. Obviously these coils differ in two respects. First, the number of turns and second, the formation of the winding, since one has four times as many turns as the other. Further, let us assume that unit current flows through these two coils. How are we going to differentiate between them.

We stated that the number of linkages depends upon the structure of the coil or the circuit. In this case one coil has 500 turns and the other has 2,000 turns. Obviously with unit current flowing through both coils, one coil will have greater number of linkages than the other, because the number of turns is greater. Hence, the emf of self-induction will be greater in th coil of greater number of turns. The emf of self-induction with unit current flow is, therefore, a measure of the retarding action upon current flow by that coil and is therefore a measure of the inductance or self-inductance of that coil. Inductance is a magnetic property of a coil. The greater the number of turns, the greater is the inductance of a coil or wire.

Inductance, usually designated by the capital letter L, depends upon several factors, such as the number of turns, upon the shape and size of the turns and the medium through which the flux lines are passing. If we have a given length of wire and it is coiled into a number of loops, the greater the diameter of the loops, the fewer the turns, hence the lower the inductance. The smaller the diameter of these loops, the greater is the number of loops or turns and the greater is the inductance. The greater the ease with which flux lines thread the turns of a coil because the core of the coil enables such a state or the permeability of the core is greater than that of air, the greater the inductance of the coil. Thus, an iron core winding has a greater value of inductance than the same winding upon an air core bakelite or cardboard tube.

The absolute value of L is independent of the current when the core is non-magnetic, in which case the current influences the inductance of the winding. The presence of the magnetic core greatly increases the inductance of a coil because the core enables much freer passage of the flux lines and the number of linkages is greatly increased.

As to the unit of inductance, we can recognize that it is allied with the emf of self induction, hence the greater the emf of self-induction with any coil through which is flowing unit current, the greater is the inductance of that coil. When defined the unit of inductance is the "henry" and a coil is said to have an inductance of 1 henry when the current changing at the rate of one ampere per second creates an emf of self-induction of 1 volt. Thus inductance really represents flux, since a certain number of linkages must occur in order that the induced voltage be 1 volt when the current traversing the coil is 1 ampere.

All coils used in sound systems do not contain sufficient turns or do not employ cores of such permeability that the inductance will approximate 1 henry or some multiple of 1 henry. Instead, the inductance is less than the unit and a decimal designation is applied. These decimals are thousandth part and millionth part or the millihenry and the microhenry respectively. Thus

$$1 \text{ microhenry} = \frac{1 \text{ henry}}{1000000} = .000001 \text{ henry}$$

and

$$1 \text{ millihenry} = \frac{1 \text{ henry}}{1000} = .001 \text{ henry} =$$

1000 microhenrys
and 1 henry = 1000 millihenrys = 1,000,000 microhenrys.

Types of Inductances—Two types of inductances find application in sound systems. One such type is the air core inductance consisting of turns of wire wound upon an insulating form with air as the core, such as a tube of bakelite or other compound of like character. The core is air. These inductances frequently bear designations such as choke coils, retard coils and plain inductances. They are available in various types, that is relative to the amount of inductance required. When the inductance is arranged to be used as a unit and the entire inductance is utilized, the usual representation is like that shown in Figure 57, extreme left, a number of loops with but two terminals. The plane of the winding is of no consequence. When the coil or inductance has been so designed that fractions or parts of the total number of turns may be used, the representation is as the centre illustration in Figure 57; the coil with the taps. When the winding is continuously variable by one form or other, which is a physical consideration, the coil is cut by an arrow as in Figure 57, extreme right.

The iron core inductance has been mentioned in previous lessons and illustrated in Figure 30, Lesson 10.

Air core coils are frequently referred to according to the type of winding used; that is, whether the turns are wound in a single layer and adjacent upon one level, when the coil is known as a single layer winding; or when the coil consists of several layers atop each other, the coil being known as a multi-layer winding, or when the coil employs a patented criss-cross winding frequently referred to as duolateral or when the coil employs a winding which resembes a pyramid construction and is known as bank wound.

Various means of computation are available to determine the inductance of an air core coil, or strange as it may see, the inductance value of an inductance. These shall be considered in reference sheets to be submitted later in this text.

Iron Core Inductanees—The iron core inductance finds more frequent application than the air core inductance. The reasons are numerous. First and foremost is the fact that the iron core inductance is a part of many units which are used in sound systems, such as transformers. Second is the fact that it is not practical to wind air core inductances which will possess the inductance values required in sound systems. Such air core coils would be extremely large and would occupy too much space in the quipment. Hence, the iron core coil is much more popular.

In connection with iron core coils used in sound installations, we must mention that these coils are of certain structure because of the application. When employed, the usual position in the sound system is such that two conditions must be fulfilled. First the coil is employed to pass D.C. currents and second, it is employed to minimize the passage of alternating currents; to retard the flow of alternating currents. Its magnetic property of electrical inertia is used in this direction Hence, the coil must pass direct currents yet possess the required value of inductance. If you recall we made the statement that the inductance value of a coil is influenced by the current flow through the coil, when the core is made of magnetic material, usually iron or an alloy. Thus, iron core or magnetic core inductances must be constructed in a special fashion. Two such forms of construction are shown in Figure 58 and 59.

Here we see two iron core chokes, consisting of a winding upon the core. In each illustration we note mention of an air-gap and also that the magnetic path is not complete. Were one to consider the usual electrical symbol for an iron core inductance as indicative of the form of structure, he would imagine that the core consisted of a bundle of iron wires. Such was the case many years ago, but refinements in the electrical field produced the cores shown in Figures 58 and 59.

The presence of the air-gap is due to the fact that the winding is to be used in such position that it must pass direct currents and yet act upon alternating currents. If the former were absent the core could be closed and the air-gap would not be necessary. When subjected to the two forms of currents mentioned, the core carries two fluxes, that due to the steady D.C. and that due to the transient A.C. We know that core material is definitely limited in the number of flux lines which may be passed through it. If the flux is excessive, the total number of linkages required will not be available and the action of the unit upon alternating currents will be impaired. The means of preventing saturation of the core material is to include the air-gap. The size of this gap is an important item. The presence of the iron core normally increases the inductance of the winding, but the fact that the gap is present reduces the value of inductance so that it is less than what would be available were the gap closed. On the other hand the presence of the gap enables the flow of a definite amount of direct current without saturation of the core material and thus permits satisfactory operation when the alternating potential is applied.

The size of the gap is, therefore, a compromise to provide the maximum value of inductance to act upon A.C. and yet to enable the passage of D.C. The air-gap has a tendency to reduce the inductance and if the gap is excessive because of extreme precautionary measures with D.C. current flow in mind, the action upon A.C. is impaired. On the other hand, if the gap is made too small and the action upon A.C. is improved, the amount of direct current which may be passed through the winding is limited. Thus it is necessary to find a satisfactory compromise.

Opinions On Pictures

Billy, The Kid

(M-G-M)

Spotty

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

AUDIENCES that like lots of action, hard riding and plenty of shooting will enjoy this talker which endeavors to relate the story of the famous bandit who killed 25 men, one for each year of his life. Taken from the book "The Saga of Billy, the Kid," King Vidor has carefully brought out the highspots in the life of the gunman. Naturally, the story is very episodic and suffers from this considerably as there is little to hold the piece together and one wonders at times what it is all about.

The best part of the picture is the scenic background. Taken in the beautiful mountain country of Arizona, the shots have rarely been equalled. In M-G-M's new "Realife" wide screen process, the film should be impressive.

The title role of the talker is played by Johnny Mack Brown, who does the best work of his career. He lacks, however, the "toughness" that must have been characteristic of the real Billy. This failing makes some parts of the picture a trifle unconvincing.

The story opens with the arrival of Tunston and McSween (Wyndham Standing and Russell Simpson) in the territory "governed" by Hatfield (Nelson McDowell). Despite Hatfield's orders that the Englishmen move on, they decide to settle in the valley. It is then the feud starts which eventually costs the lives of many men, including Tunston, McSween and their party.

"Billy, the Kid" is caught stealing cattle and is about to be hanged by Tunston and his party when the rancher decides that Billy would be an acquisition to his forces. He lets him go free. Billy is devoted to his master and, when Tunston is killed in an open fight with Ballinger (Warner P. Richman), one of Hatfield's henchmen, and his gang, the Kid decides to kill every man who took part in the fight. Tunston, at the time, was en route to the church where he was to marry Kay Johnson. Billy admires her and wants to avenge the killing of Tunston for her sake, she, however, cannot become reconciled to the fact that Billy is a murderer.

Shortly after Tunston's murder, McSween and his men with Billy are trapped in the McSween home. Wallace Beery, as sheriff, demands that McSween give himself up for committing a crime which he did not do. The boys, however, decide to fight it out with the sheriff's men and even after several days when McSween goes out to surrender and is killed, Hatfield's men refuse to quit. Finally the ambushed house is set afire and the men are forced to brave the guns of the Hatfield gang. Only three escape alive. Billy, the last to leave, shoots his way clear and escapes.

General Lew Wallace then decides to take a hand and stop the feud. He calls for Billy, the Kid, telling him that he will not be convicted. They discuss a treaty. Billy, however, figures he will take the law in his own hands and goes into hiding. However, Beery and his men trap him in a cave and he has to surrender. In the county jail, Billy tricks Beery and gets away. It is upon returning to the town; to see Miss Johnson, that he is trapped and shot by Beery, whom he intentionally misses, because the latter has been on the level with him. Billy dies in Miss Johnson's arms.

The love interest which was so evident in a preview showing will be left out in the final cutting, making the story one that deals strictly with the escapades of the Kid. Lots of action and gunplay feature the talker which, in the main, is a wild and woolly western.

The characters are especially well drawn. Wallace Beery as the sheriff plays the role in a manner that convinces.

The characters portrayed by Standing, Simpson, Roscoe Ates, Richmond and Karl Dane are exceptionally well acted. Miss Johnson and Blanche Frederici are most capable, although they have very little to do. Ates and Dane have comedy roles that are well played.

Director King Vidor has brought out the more important parts of the Kid's life convincingly, but lack of a story to hold the various episodes together does real damage to the picture. It would have been better box-office, perhaps, to have woven a love story into the talker at the risk of being less authentic. As it is now the audience will fail to find reasons for many of the happenings.

Musical shorts, cartoons, etc., will fit in here.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. From the story, "The Saga of Billy, the Kid," by Walter Noble Burns. Directed by King Vidor. Continuity by Wanda Tuchock. Dialogue by Lawrence Stallings and Charles McArthur. Photographed by Gordon Avril. Edited by Hugh Winn. Length, not set. Running time, about 100 minutes. Release date, Oct. 25.

Liliom

(Fox)

Distinguished and Dubious

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

NOT an easy one to figure. "Liliom," a fine talker version of Franz Molnar's play of the same name, is in many ways a distinguished picture and a production that reflects great credit on Fox, Frank Borzage and the industry.

Yet, and despite what might appear to be an attempt to evade the issue, here is a picture which, because of story conception and treatment, is a tough hombre to figure out. This reviewer's suggestion is that the exhibitor take a peek at it himself in order to determine in his own mind whether the public will bite.

Not that "Liliom" is lacking in merit. Rather is the reverse the truth. The direction is able, the performances splendid and the production values excellent. It is the story thread, treatment of which envisions for the audience the author's conception of heaven with a bit of hell thrown in, that precipitates the doubt. So far as memory recalls, the public has never had such an experience. Whether it will accept it in that full seriousness the delicacy of the drama demands is something which speculation cannot dispel, but which actual audience reaction can.

The Molnar play concerns the love of Julie, a Hungarian servant girl, for Liliom, merry-go-round barker in a Budapest amusement park. They fascinate each other and finally marry. Liliom attempts to break away from the influence of the side show and Madame Muskay, never actually demonstrated to be one of Liliom's flames although the intimation is made clear.

The conflict waged by the two women for Liliom is eventually won by Julie, symbolism stressing the conquest of the pure love over the illicit. Liliom, never having been a good provider, is spurred into action when he discovers Julie is to have a baby. He eventually submits to the undermining influence of the Buzzard and, together, they plan to rob a bank cashier, half of the money to go to Liliom so that he might take Julie to America.

But the plan miscarries and Liliom, rather than be caught, stabs himself with the knife which was to kill the cashier. He dies and is carried by a celestial express to heaven. On board, he meets the Chief Magistrate, pleads for another chance and is given that chance after spending ten years in the purifying—presumably—fires of hell.

So back to earth goes Liliom, hungry to do something that will make his wife and daughter happy. The girl naturally doesn't know him and, therefore, resents Liliom's frantic pleadings for permission to enter her garden. Exasperated eventually and demonstrating that promises of reformation are empty, he slaps her and is returned to the heavenly special where the Chief Magistrate convinces him that the best deed he can perform for his family is to leave them with their cherished memories.

The latter half of the picture is highly imaginative and handled with considerable deftness and charm. The dialogue between Liliom and the Magistrate is clever and subtle—perhaps too much so for the mob.

As a matter of fact, the entire film is replete with lovely touches keyed in the tempo that did so much to distinguish "Seventh Heaven." It seemed, however, that in some earlier passages the placid touch which Borzage usually gives to his work missed fire.

In point of performance, Rose Hobart, as Julie, and Lee Tracy, as the Buzzard, rate No. 1 and 2 with Charlie Farrell, as Liliom, the third and H. B. Warner, as the Chief Magistrate, a close runner-up for honors with Farrell, despite the comparative unimportance of Warner's role.

Miss Hobart is new to the screen, having been recruited by Fox as a result of a splendid performance in "Devil Takes a Holiday," one of Broadway's stage successes of last season. She gives a beautiful performance, rich in restraint and sympathy. Not only has this newcomer plenty in looks, but she also has a finely timbred voice. Starring material here, no question.

Farrell does extremely satisfying work, although his Middle Western accent in a Hungarian role often knocks credulity from his performance. Tracy, in a crook characterization, comes through with probably the best work he has done in talkers. Warner does splendidly. Estelle Taylor has little to do and does it well. A cute ingenue part is played by Mildred Van Dorn. She shows promise.

Escape

(RKO)

Lacks B. O. Punch

(Reviewed by Sherwin A. Kane)

MADE in England with an English cast, "Escape" is an excellent explanation of the popularity of American films in Europe. If it may be considered in the least typical of foreign productions, of which there seems little room for doubt, American producers need not fear lost markets abroad so long as this type of film continues to be produced there.

Its object is to arouse sympathy for a hunted man; its appeal is to the imagination, neither of which is very successfully accomplished and both of which have been attempted without the injection of anything that might be construed as box-office appeal.

Gerald du Maurier, one of the favorites of the London stage, plays a kindly English gentleman who quits a fox hunt out of pity for the harried animal against which the odds are so great. Returning to London, he is accosted by a woman of the streets whose advances are witnessed by a policeman.

In defending the girl to save her from arrest, du Maurier enters into an altercation with the officer, who is killed when knocked to the ground by a blow. For this, du Maurier is sentenced to serve five years in prison. He escapes, and the remainder of the picture—fully three-quarters of it—details the incidents of his two days of liberty in flight, which end with his being captured and returned to prison. Thus endeth the fox hunt.

Romance, at least in the American understanding of the word, is entirely lacking in this production. True, his several encounters with pleasant enough English women during the days of his flight for liberty, would have you believe the man had a way about him where women were concerned. But these brief encounters were consummated by nothing more satisfying than the gift of a chocolate bar, a bit of brandy, clothing and lies to his pursuers to aid him to escape. The ending, wherein he is returned to prison, conveys an impression of futility that renders the entire production pointless. Little has happened up to this point, and the disappointing finale implies even less because it has failed to arouse sympathy to any great extent.

Photography is spotty; excellent in many instances, but confusing in others with the characteristically European fade-outs coming with irritating frequency and confusing volume. Outdoor shots of the English countryside offer picturesque backgrounds. Sound recording, for the most part, is well done and includes occasional barnyard effects which prove excellent. The English accent is no obstacle to understanding the dialogue of this one.

Action for the most part is undistinguished. A good performance is delivered by du Maurier, but the middle-aged Englishman, judged by American box-office standards, is not the man to captivate the female hearts of Main street. The supporting cast is satisfactory.

This is decidedly no bet for small-town theatres. It will get by with strong support in vaude-film houses, or as part of a double feature bill.

Needs plenty of short subject report.

Sweet Kitty Bellairs

(Warners)

Lacks Box-Office

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

DESPITE the waning of public interest in filmusicals, Warners have turned out another, a costume picture of seventeenth century England, but it is not likely to overwork the ticket sellers. Adapted from the David Belasco musical comedy of the same name, it follows the stage method of presentation, is exasperatingly slow in tempo and the almost negligible story thread is halted frequently by abrupt cues for musical interludes. Warners apparently had no illusions about its appeal, for its New York premiere was staged in an outlying house, and only a handful graced the opening matinee.

There is such a paucity of action and so much posing and strutting that the film becomes boresome, and it is difficult to understand why the stage vehicle was considered at all as screen fare. The picture's greatest asset is the use of Technicolor throughout.

The talented players had little chance to show their wares, due to the haphazard direction and the failure of the adaptor to provide clean-cut characterizations. Claudia Dell in the title role is the outstanding member of the cast, being possessed of looks and acting ability, but her singing voice, while clear and distinct, does not possess a lyrical quality. Walter Pidgeon sang effectively, but his role was such a vague one that not until the end did he step forth as the hero of the opus.

Ernest Torrence carried the small amount of comedy as a bibulous nobleman, but whenever he sang there was a titter from the audience. Arthur Edmund Carew also proved amusing when he essayed to sing. Perry Askam and June Collyer gave satisfactory, although stereotyped, performances.

The picture is uninspired and lacking in punch. The male members of the cast looked silly in wigs, knee breeches and colored costumes and the music, with two exceptions, was monotonously intrusive.

Many young blades, among them Pidgeon, seek the hand of Miss Dell, but after being held up by a courtly highwayman who restores her valuables in return for a brace of forced kisses, she finds herself dreaming romantically of the stranger. Pidgeon, calling on Miss Dell, is believed by Torrence to be making a play for Torrence's wife (June Collyer) and is challenged to a duel. Torrence gets drunk and apologizes. Cheated by the author of depicting one duel, Director Green thereupon stages another, with both antagonists sitting in chairs, Torrence refusing to stand because the other has the gout. The scene is enacted with broad humor, bordering on burlesque. Later Pidgeon and Askam, who had masqueraded as the highwayman, engage in another duel with swords. Pidgeon wins and cops the girl, even though she had been lukewarm to him throughout.

The picture fails to hold the interest owing to its weak story and choppy continuity and the failure of any of the leads to give life and plausibility to their roles. The only song that gets over is "You--O-O, I Love You."

Good comedies needed, but not of the musical type.

Misbehaving Ladies

(First National)

A Laugh Fest

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

REAL honest-to-goodness laughs at a preview greeted this talker, which should meet with success in the neighborhood houses and small town theatres. The laughs were not forced, but were natural throughout. Lucien Littlefield and Louise Fazenda were the mirth-provoking couple. They deliver their best comedy in ages.

This picture, while rating only as average program fare, has plenty of appeal as good clean comedy. No special production value has been given it, but clever characterizations make it worthwhile.

Lila Lee and Ben Lyon have the romantic leads and are at all times capable. Miss Lee, as the small town girl, who married a prince and 12 years later returns to her native land, is especially good. The preparations for her return by Miss Fazenda, her small town aunt, and Littlefield, as the husband, are most ludicrous. The arrival is unannounced and she is mistaken for a seamstress. However, when she sees the elaborate preparations being made for her return, she "arrives" again, this time with pomp and splendor and is unrecognized, due to a blonde wig and royal apparel.

Littlefield and Lyon, who knew her at first sight, are on the game and keep the secret. Lila is welcomed with a ceremony at the town hall and speeches are made in her honor. She takes this opportunity to get all of the town's men interested in a dishwashing machine that Lyon has invented. It is this sales campaign which ruins an otherwise perfectly good little picture. However, this sequence may be cut and if so, it will aid the picture greatly.

The preparations for Miss Lee's homecoming are the best part of the talker and are played with finesse. So human and understanding is the work of Miss Fazenda that it is at times more touching than funny.

Director William Beaudine has been adept in handling the comedy touches. The story, while not at all unusual, is full of interest. Emily Fitzroy and Martha Mattox are well cast and do fine work.

Opinions on Pictures

Her Man

(Pathe)

Powerful

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

BESIDES being very well acted, this story of Frankie and Johnnie has received exceptionally fine direction at the hands of Tay Garnett and gives Pathe another talker that will stand up in the class of "Holiday," although the story is the opposite of the Barry production.

This talker is splendid for week run houses and subsequent bookings. Will do business in any house, as it has drama, action and humor that will satisfy any type of audience.

The story is about a girl who was brought up in a dive in a Cuban port. The only thing she knows is stealing and preying upon the sailors who visit the resort where she works, but instinctively she wants to get away from this life. Helen Twelvetrees is the girl, Frankie, and Ricardo Cortez is her pal, Johnnie. Cortez looks out for the girl, but she is unaware that he is not on the up and up with her.

The opening shows her being sought by Mathew Betz, a rival crook despised by Cortez. In the midst of a "framed" fight, Betz is stabbed and Helen is unaware that Cortez did the killing. When Phillips Holmes enters the place and sees Helen he immediately takes a liking to her. She tells him that she wants to get away from it all and he agrees to help her. However, when he visits the place again she is giving the same story to another customer, but Holmes decides that she really does mean it and quits his ship to go to the States with Helen. Holmes' pals, Jimmy Gleason and Harry Sweet, are sent to jail for being drunk and they, too, miss the boat. Holmes comes to the saloon after Miss Twelvetrees and proposes to her. She accepts after confessing what her life has been. She is very happy and tells her friend, Marjorie Rambeau, an old-timer at the waterfront dives of the elopement and Rambeau offers to help. Johnnie, however, hears of the plans Helen has for leaving and decides to kill Holmes. When Helen learns of this she sends Miss Rambeau to stop him. However, Rambeau is offered a drink at another saloon and when Holmes appears she fails to stop him. Holmes enters the place intent upon taking Helen away. She, fearing for his safety, tells him she played him for a sucker and he leaves, disgusted with her. Miss Rambeau catches him this time and tells him that Helen lied in order to save him. Holmes then returns and starts to clean up Cortez. The battle is terrific. Holmes and his gang finally win and Cortez is killed by his own hand. Helen and Holmes then get away and return to the States.

Comedy touches supplied by Slim Summerville, Franklin Pangborn, Gleason and Sweet are very amusing and not over-done. They are well handled and are vital to the production. The love scenes drag a trifle but further cutting will undoubtedly help considerably. The fight is the biggest part of the picture and is a thriller from start to finish.

In the leading roles Miss Twelvetrees and Holmes are decidedly well cast. She carries the role of Frankie with complete understanding and Holmes, as the romantic sailor lad, adds a new type of character to his list and establishes himself as one of the outstanding youthful leading men of the screen. His work is fine at all times.

Marjorie Rambeau, as the drunken woman of the streets, is very good. Ricardo Cortez as Johnnie is well cast and makes a fine heavy.

The care with which the delicate nature of the story is handled is apparent. Evading of censorable scenes is done in a most skillful manner and the story loses nothing through this treatment. The picture would have perhaps been improved if Miss Twelvetrees had been allowed more opportunity to show her handling of the important dramatic situations. Scenes which she did have, showing her fight to gain freedom, were not given enough footage and lacked the power that could have been obtained otherwise.

Musical shorts and cartoons will fit in here.

The Pay Off

(RKO)

Program Stuff

(Reviewed by Bill Crouch)

LOWELL SHERMAN, RKO's actor-director, turns out another picture that is similar to "Lawful Larceny" but lacks the smoothness of the former. Several twists are given to the story that make it illogical and result in an average program rating.

The story is one which deals with the exploits of a band of crooks, headed by Sherman. Hugh Trevor, as one of the younger members of the gang, holds up William Janney and Marian Nixon and takes the money they had saved to get married on. Janney recognizes Trevor and with Miss Nixon attempts to rob Trevor and some of the members of the gang. They are foiled in the robbery, however, and Sherman decides to give them jobs working for him.

The gang, planning a jewelry store holdup, need someone to work along. Trevor, despite Sherman's warning that the kids be left out of any jobs gets them to innocently take part in the holdup. Trevor kills the shopowner and escapes while the kids are put in jail.

They call for Sherman to help them and in order to clear them he confesses to having planned the robbery. Before this, however, he fights with Trevor over the ruse used in getting the kids implicated in the killing of the jeweler. In the melee Trevor is killed and Sherman's gang turns against him.

Sherman's confession sets the kids free. So justice gains its ends and all winds up well for everyone except Sherman.

There is nothing much to the story of this talker which is inconsistent throughout. No outstanding motivation helps the piece and it, therefore, struggles to survive. Sherman's direction is good, but he needs more material to work with. Apparently some scenes have been cut out, for in spots the dialogue is inconsistent.

Sherman's performance is flawless and Hugh Trevor is very good as the young crook. William Janney and Marian Nixon are adequate in their roles. Lita Chevret, George Marion and Helen Millarde are well cast.

Use strong shorts here. The stronger the better.

The Squealer

(Columbia)

Fair Hokum

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

IN "Squealers" is presented concrete evidence and further confirmation of the fact that a serious dearth of original ideas for story material exists in Hollywood. A trifle belated, perhaps, but with the release of what should be Columbia's full quota of gangster yarns, it is to be hoped that this production signifies the close of a long era of racketeer films—temporarily, at least. Furthermore, we doubt if another of Hollywood's great production "geniuses" has the audacity to prolong the agony which picture-goers are forced to suffer because of that predominating trait of "copycatitis" which is only too noticeable in the makeup of many Gold Coast "entertainment" purveyors who seem to ease their conscience-stricken souls with the thought that they are box-office wise to follow the dictates of picture making by cycles.

The condemnation of an insipid factor in production, however, is aimed only at the root of an evil which originally influenced the producers' decision to "follow the leader," and not at this production itself, which, despite its overdone theme, stacks up in entertaining fashion for average audiences. It contains nothing sensational, but has sufficient of the box-office elements as to readily fall in line as a fair programmer.

Exactly how far its success or failure at the till will be influenced by the racketeer-cycle stigma depends entirely upon the number of gangster stories which you have previously played. There is a fairly important twist of misunderstood love between husband and wife. This might be accorded heavier ballyhooing than the racketeer angle to bring them in if your patrons have had their full of murders and gangs.

"Squealers," basically, is built along the same lines as its predecessors in the field of gangdom, except for elimination, completely, of long drawn out police interference, and the inclusion of an obvious steal on "The Big House" with its highly impressive penitentiary sequences. Columbia's version of a wholesale jailbreak, the mass effect of prisoners behind bars and in yards, and close studies of hardened criminals in "stir," is so weak in comparison to the former dramatic masterpiece, however, that it appears microscopic and like child's play. The producer apparently decided to take advantage of the latest in film criminology, and so shaped the latter half of his story.

Director Harry Joe Brown did his job in pretty good shape, everything considered, while photography, sound and the continuity of events all hit par rating. Dialogue is exactly what one might expect in a crook drama. Action is maintained at a speedy pace, with very little time being lost for incidentals. Light comedy angles help tremendously.

The cast is to be commended for developing the most receptive factor in the entire vehicle. Jack Holt bears the brunt of the burden, as the big bump-'em-off man and loudest noise in this particular racket. No doubt Jack consumed huge quantities of Murads during production, because he is unusually "non-chalant" during at least three cold-blooded murders.

Holt leads his wife to believe he is a respected business man, although his neglect arouses her suspicions. Dorothy Revier, the wife, and Davey Lee, as the young son, do well what little there is to do. Holt's allies and enemies in gang feuds, led by Louis Natheaux, are kept much busier than either Miss Revier or young Davey. Performance of Zasu Pitts, who contributes many laughs, is up to par.

This has drama, a little comedy and a sequence with jazz music. Short subject support, therefore, should be concentrated in the novelty and cartoon line.

Storm Over Asia

(Amkino)

Powerful Drama

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

A TALE of primitive passions, staged in a partly-civilized region of the globe, this Russian production grips and fascinates by the sheer force of its dramatic power and its breath of authenticity. It is life in the raw, enacted by a cast entirely devoid of staginess, and flawlessly directed.

Like most Russian pictures, this contains Soviet propaganda, centering about the revolt against the Czarist white Russians, aided by the Mongol tribes of Central Asia, but it is subdued to the point where it becomes a necessary ingredient of the plot. However, a portion of a New York audience gave the climax, showing the uprising of the Mongols, a hearty applause. It was shown in a house patronized by Soviet sympathizers.

The picture justifies a general showing throughout this country by its sheer merit and because its novelty and unique backgrounds will prove a relief from studio settings. And it could be seen with profit by Hollywood and all its satellites for pointers in simplicity and sincerity in all departments.

A Mongol, played by V. Inkizbinov, whose immobile features can hold the onlooker rapt without the movement of a facial muscle, is the central figure in the drama. Sent to the market place by his sick father, a fur trapper, to sell the season's catch of pelts, he is swindled out of a valuable silver fox fur by an unscrupulous white Russian and in desperation beats the trader. He is forced to flee, finding refuge with others of his race conducting a battle with the Russians in a mountainous section.

Overjoyed by the opportunity to wage war against his enemies, he enters whole-heartedly in the campaign until he is taken prisoner. He is stripped of his belongings and ordered shot. A single soldier is detailed to this task, and it is this sequence that wrenches the heart as the executioner, overcome with nausea at the thought of shooting down a defenseless man, deliberately stalls as they march to the place of death and tremblingly tries to show kindnesses to his prisoner. It is an extremely poignant scene.

In the meantime the commander of the Russian forces finds among the doomed man's possessions a document purporting to show that the Mongol is a direct decendant of the famous Genghis Khan, and he conceives the plan of installing the latter as the chief of the Mongols —another Great Khan—and by an alliance with him achieving his objective of wiping out the "rebels," as they are termed in subtitles. He sends a squad to stop the execution, but it is too late. The lone soldier had fired his revolver and rifle wildly at the Mongol—and fled. However, the victim is still alive.

The Mongol is carefully nursed back to health and surrounded with all the pomp of royalty in preparation for the great coup. A prince of his blood sends 2,000 horsemen as homage; the Russians treat him servilely. But throughout it all the Mongol remains expressionless. Bewilderment changes to distrust of the motives of his captors. Then a countryman, trying to break in to see him, is shot down in cold blood. The Mongol goes berserk, wrecks the place as he flees and, in a tremendous climax, rides at the head of his horsemen as they run down and wipe out the Russians. It's "the storm over Asia."

Vivid contrast is provided in the latter portion of the picture by the appearance of A. Sudakevich in a minor role. Mlle. Sudakevich not only displayed considerable acting ability, but she's got so much "It" that she'd turn many a head on Hollywood Boulevard.

Oh, Well

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

"ME 'n' my pardner ain't thieves," ejaculated the honest ranch owner at the opening of the story. However, he was fooled, even if the audience wasn't, for the partner was a bad egg. But everybody in the cast sure raised hell before the old man got wise to himself.

It's a talker with a vengeance. The first two reels are jammed with dialogue which might have been intelligible if some of the actors had taken the cuds of tobacco out of their mouths. The sounds emanating from the horns didn't resemble human voices. It was difficult to follow the thread of the story—not that it meant anything, for it followed the usual formula, with love, virtue and manliness triumphant over villainy in the end.

Charles Delaney and Virginia Brown Faire head the cast, but they did not fit in. The tough eggs and cowboys were the homeliest congregation of males assembled at any one time, and the direction and continuity were mediocre, sequences ending abruptly with the actors not knowing what to do next.

Soda jerkers and bookkeepers who enjoy this sort of stuff may get a vicarious thrill out of this offering, but it doesn't stack up for the better class houses.

Give it plenty of good comedy support.

The Last of the Lone Wolf

(Columbia)

Good Program Offering

(Reviewed by Herman Pincus)

EUROPEAN kings, even in mythical kingdoms, have had hard sailing in trying to make both ends meet, and the fact is emphasized by some of the obvious skimping on the palace furnishings in this new picturization of the Louis Joseph Vance character.

It is a good program offering, improbable in spots (as what meller isn't?), but with a number of dramatic moments, well handled to give it audience value. Bert Lytell, who has played the Lone Wolf in the entire series, does effective work in this. The Lone Wolf stories are popular, so this should have box-office draw.

The trick camera stuff in the automobile chase is easily discernible, while the romantic scene, featured by the tweet-tweet of birds, drew laughs and snickers from the audience, where this was previewed. Otherwise, the customers seemed to like this picture, which was put on cold.

The story opens with the arrest of Michael Lanyard, who is brought before the prime minister of Saxonia (Otto Matieson) and sentenced to ten years, but is allowed to escape so that he can steal and deliver to the prime minister a ring belonging to the Queen of Saxonia which reposes in the safe of Saxonia's foreign ambassador. The queen promises to wear the ring at the royal ball and sends her dearest friend, Countess Stephanie (Patsy Ruth Miller), to recover the ring, realizing the prime minister's duplicity.

On the train Lanyard meets her and saves her from being robbed by Varril (Lucien Prival), the prime minister's spy. Arriving at the embassy, Lanyard gains entrance through false papers and steals the ring, but, realizing that he is suspected, replaces it and escapes.

Back in his hotel he finds Varril in his rooms and overpowers him. Meanwhile Stephanie tells him of her queen's plight and Lanyard again steals the ring, this time for the queen. An exciting chase back to Saxonia, Michael gives the queen the ring in time and wins Stephanie's love.

Patsy Ruth Miller does some fine work as Countess Stephanie, but a big play on Bert Lytell should bolster the box office.

Musical or comedy shorts would go well here.

Playboy of Paris

(Paramount)

Music for the B. O.

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

MAURICE CHEVALIER blossoms forth in his latest from Paramount, "Playboy of Paris" as a millionaire waiter. The picture will cash in at the box-office for several reasons. Chevalier has won a big following. It has a good title. The supporting cast carries appeal.

The Chevalier fans may be slightly disappointed because the star is allowed to warble but once. He is one actor in pictures who seems to have won a singing place in the hearts of the fans.

Chevalier dominates the picture. He is in every scene but two and he manages to hold the spotlight in all of them. Stuart Erwin walks in as the dishwashing pal of the waiter and grabs off a large chunk of the comedy glory. Had the star been anybody else Erwin would have stolen the picture.

The story doesn't amount to much as is usual with vehicles Paramount gives the Parisian. A French waiter is left a million frances and can't quit his job because of a framed forfeit contract. If he quits he has to pay his employer 400,000 francs. He attempts to live the gay life of a rich boulevardier and continue in his position. The consequences allow wide latitude for comedy and, as a result, Chevalier insults a rich gentleman and is challenged to a duel. Erwin and Eugene Pallette, who makes a swell cook in the dumpy cafe where Chevalier works, act as seconds. The duel is frustrated when the daughter of the cafe owner busts into the middle of it and announces that Chevalier isn't a rich gentleman, but merely a waiter. This discloses the fact to both that they really love each other—and there you have it.

Frances Dee, a cute little college girl who slipped into the spot as leading woman, does adequate work. She is quite evidently miscast as the cafe owner's daughter and is not given much of a chance to hog the camera but offers promise as a clever youngster who should build into a valuable asset if properly handled.

Dorothy Christie is the blonde menace who almost lands Chevalier while O. P. Heggie handles the role of cafe owner in capable fashion. Tyler Brooke has the small role as a dandified lawyer's clerk which proves duck-soup to him with his long training in comedies.

Scenic and newsreel would balance well.

Schenck Arranges for Insurance for Loew Staff

Fifty millions in group insurance were contracted for by Nicholas M. Schenck, president, and David Bernstein, vice president of Loew's, Inc., for all employees of Loew's and M-G-M, who are to receive units ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 based on their weekly earnings.

The policy, taken with John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Boston, provides for coverage against sickness of any nature; accidents of any type, including non-occupational accidents, and dismemberment, which may also occur while away from place of employment. This coverage, ranging from $10 to $40 weekly indemnity, is said to be the first of its kind promulgated. Double indemnity in case of accidental death is also provided.

Arthur Stebbins, of Stebbins, Leterman & Gates, closed the contract.

Fair

HITS average in entertainment value. The Pathe sound quartette renders "Silver Threads Among the Gold" in a setting in keeping with days when this sentimental number was at the height of its success. Two ice-skaters in a colored and effective number are sandwiched in between the vocal rendition and old shots of intimate moments of all presidents since McKinley. Photographically, the latter is terrible, but it has an interesting flavor nevertheless. Running time, 11 minutes.

Will go with a comedy feature.

Fine Sport Reel

PATHE'S Grantland Rice series usually hits a high mark in entertainment value. This new release is no exception, with majority of audience appeal intended for the men and kiddies, inasmuch as ring fights at a boy's military camp are the big attraction. The youngsters provide snappy screenfare, while older boys put on a fast moving bout in the closing sequences. Good stuff. Running time, 10 minutes.

This novelty will go in any spot on your bill.

The Wanderer

Dull

DOUGLAS STANBURY sings a couple of numbers in this, but they just don't seem to click. The first is "A Cottage for Sale," sung before a deserted cottage, the second "Just a Wanderer," telling why he became a wanderer. It's stagey, and, although Stanbury sings well enough, this is pretty dull. Running time. 9 minutes.

Where a weak number can get by.

The Ebony Shrine

(Pathe)

Okay

ANOTHER in the Tom Terris "Vagabond Adventure" series, with a strong religious flavor predominating in a camera study of Guatemala and its inhabitants. While interesting to an extent, too much time is taken up with the miraculousness of a shrine in a native church. Intimacy in religion is always a touchy subject and should be left alone. Does not stack up as highly as predecessors in this series, but may get by without much adverse criticism. Running time, 10 minutes.

Heavy stuff; use on a bill with a light comedy feature.

The Jay Walker

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1,051)

Silly but Funny

A BURLESQUE on the ban against jay walking. Pedestrians are forced to procure licenses and take road tests in much the same manner that motorists do. Chester Chute is the goofy jay walker and gets some laughs. The burlesque is overdrawn but funny, and this should please. Running time, 10 minutes.

Good with musical subjects.

Frozen Frolics

Average Cartoon

USUAL stuff is found in this new Aesop Fable sound cartoon, with animation and musical accompaniment taking the laurels. Ideas for the reel are pretty tame and in keeping with the played-to-death freak dancing variety. Too bad they can't find gags radically different from the lineup found in most reels. Has a few laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.

Okay for lightening a bill with a dramatic feature.

Cempligre, Kuschner Hurt in Auto Crash

Indianapolis — Alphonse Cempligre, proprietor of the Fort Wayne State theatre, and Oscar Kuschner, manager of the Universal exchange of this city, were cut when the automobile in which they were riding was forced off the road near Anderson. Cempligre and Kuschner had filled an appointment with Harry Muller, manager of the Publix theatres at Anderson and were enroute to Fort Wayne when the accident occurred.

"Inspiration" Garbo's Next

Hollywood—Greta Garbo's next picture will be "Inspiration," which Clarence Brown will direct for M-G-M. It is an original by James Forbes. Brown was to have directed Lawrence Tibbett in "The Southerner," but the renewal of King Vidor's contract resulted in switching the latter to the Tibbett film.

Fisher looks enough like Benny Rubin to be his twin.

Big City Sights, Not Big Cinemas, Thrill the Hicks

Chicago—De Luxe Loop houses admit the vacationing hick trade is passing them by. Summer business in the past was considerably aided by the burnt necks in from the Iowa and Nebraska plains, but nowadays the farthest they come from is Evanston, Cicero and Englewood.

Civic attractions are claiming the hicks who, with circuit-built palaces in their own or nearby centers back home, get all the grandeur and the newest pictures just as accommodatingly as a Chicago Loop house could give them. They still come to the city, but not to the city's theatres.

Grant Park is claiming the bulk of the furrow followers in town for a new suit and a look. The Field Museum, Shedd Aquarium and Adler Planetarium are jammed from morning till closing in nice weather. And the parked cars about them from the hay states outnumber Illinois license plates four to one. The same goes for those around the Lincoln Park Zoo.

Another favorite pastime of the R. F. D. immigrants is gawking at the skyline from the Grant Park islands on the "made" land, filled in for World's Fair building sites. They leave their out-of-state cars on the mainland near Soldier Field and hike over the bridge to stare and "ah."

Golf K. O.'s Song As Auditorium Goes Miniature

Chicago—The staid old Auditorium Theatre here, shrine of Chicago's Civic Opera for more than a quarter of a century, is to be converted into an indoor miniature golf course. Terms of a lease are now being discussed and operators of the indoor courses expect to open by Oct. 15. The Auditorium has been darkened for a year since completion of the new Civic Opera skyscraper at Madison St. and the river. Already in the hands of receivers, the chance for new revenue offered by the midget golf scheme was made to appear even more favorable by a bonded indebtedness of $834,000 against the Chi-

"Listen," said Bill, crawling out of his car and taking his better than six feet with him, "If you weren't so damned small I'd smack that funny little face of yours."

Jury to Decide When Pee Wee Turns Whoopee

Chicago—A jury here will be asked to decide at what hour of the morning miniature golf ceases to be pee wee and becomes whoopee. Leo Harrington, owner of the course at Bryn Mawr Ave. and Sheridan Road, has requested the decision, rather than rely on the mercies of Judge John H. Lyle's court, of which he is an old customer.

Harrington was fined $200 and costs by Judge Lyle several weeks ago when apartment dwellers in the vicinity of Harrington's magnified-marbles course sustained nuisance charges which had been filed against him. At that time Judge Lyle invited the harassed neighbors to prefer similar charges against Harrington whenever their night time slumbers were disturbed by exuberant patrons of the course. The invitation brought Harrington into court again this week.

A resident of the Edgewater Beach apartments adjoining the course charges that Harrington's clients who play at 3:30 a. m. are whoopee and not pee wee golfers, and as such constitute a nuisance. Harrington has requested a jury trial.

Official Spikes Effort to Force Seating Changes

Chicago—Chris Paschen, Chicago building commissioner, stated this week that inspection of representative Chicago theatres showed ample exit facilities in all houses inspected and indicated no need of readjustments in seating arrangements such as have been proposed in a bill submitted to the city council by Alderman William R. O'Toole. O'Toole's ordinance would demand installation of flip-up seats or readjustments of chair aisles to a minimum intervening space of 36 inches. Paschen does not believe this ordinance is warranted.

Petitions asking Mayor Thompson to veto O'Toole's ordinance, which has already been passed by the city council, have been signed by 180 Chicago theatre owners and forwarded to the mayor. Copies of the petition have also been sent to Alderman O'Toole and to Commissioner Paschen.

Chi Cours-ettes Thumb Noses at Tournament Gag

Chicago—The Herald-Examiner's effort to cut itself in on the attention being given pee wee golf by staging a tournament for Chicago addicts is only getting laughs from the other papers.

Plugging the tournament in sport page headlines for the past six weeks now, the Her-Ex has succeeded in enrolling only 47 city courses in the play-off originally scheduled for Monday. Lack of enthusiasm over the event on the part of both players of the game and course operators led the paper to announce this week that the start of the tournament would be postponed two additional days in order to accommodate the numbers of courses seeking to sign up before the deadline. In reality, the postponement was made to give time for final efforts to boost the thing into respectability. The actual number of entrants two weeks ago was 43. At the time of the postponement it was 47.

Truck Pick-up Service, Hit for Row, Picking Up

Chicago—Operators of the film truck pick-up service here claim the past summer was the worst in local film history. Darkened houses knocked the operators' revenue for a row, while overhead remained practically the same as always.

The pick-up service is paid by the number of houses called on. Darkened theatres this summer cut heavily into the revenue, but the salaries of drivers remained the same, though their work, obviously, was much lighter than ordinarily. Twelve houses on one driver's route were dark for two months, and comparable conditions existed on all other routes, it was reported.

Relief came late in August, with the lights going up again in all neighborhoods. Reopenings are at their peak now, with normalcy looked for by the end of the month. The following were reopened this week: Halsted, Lindy, Circle, Wallace, Chateau, Gem and Palace (Glickman's).

Fifteen Midwest Theatres Closed During August

Chicago—Fifteen theatre closings—six of them in the Chicago area—occurred in the state during August, according to the monthly report of the Chicago Film Board of Trade. Four Illinois theatres were reopened during the same period.

Following are the closings:

The Bridgeport, Schindler's (except Saturdays and Sundays), and the Independence, Chicago; Dupage, Lombard, Ill.; Community, Winnetka; Broadway, Indiana Harbor, Ind.; Coliseum, Annawan; Jewel, Eureka; Lyric, Lacon; Maroa, Maroa; Gayety and Illinois, Ottawa; Princess, Princeville; Illini, Sterling; Stockton, Stockton.

Reopened:

The Gage Park, Chicago; Grant, Cicero; Orpheum, Georgetown; Strand, Rockford.

The following changes in theatre ownership are noted:

Joyland (formerly the Chicago), from Hulquist Bros. to Maurice O'Leary; Ridge (formerly Ellantee), from Greater Chicago Theatre Corp. to Devon Amusement Co.; Shore, from South Shore Bldg. Corp. to Warner Bros.; Windsor Park, from I. M. Hale to H. L. Lyon; Roxy, Berwyn, from O. F. Vonesh to Laskers; Temple, Mishawaka, Ind., to Brown, Lowenstein & Cochovety; Niles Center to L. B. Waldron, Jr.; Ottawa, Ottawa, from Great States-B. & K. to Ottawa Amusement Co.; Oliver, South Bend, to Holfman and Slocum; White Eagle, South Bend, to Julius Fodor, Favorite, Wakarusa, Ind., to Lewis & Boice; Calumet, Hammond, Ind. (new theatre), Calumet Theatre Corp., and Ritz, Lowell, Ind., (new theatre)—Ed. Yates.

considering any frequency assignments to new stations.

In addition, an applicant for a new television station is required to appear at a formal hearing before the Commission, when the case may be presented in full, and a written transcript under oath obtained. These restrictions are imposed in order to insure the freedom from interference of the limited frequency bands available for television, and permit ligitimate experiments in the field.

May Develop More Channels

Because of the very few channels available in the medium-high frequency band (1,500 to 6,000 kilocycles), some thought has been given to the development of television in the very high frequency part of the spectrum, i.e., in the bands from 30,000 to 400,000 kilocycles. Should these very high frequencies prove useful for television a considerable step forward in the development of the art will have been made as the necessarily large band widths used in television can be more easily accommodated on these frequencies.

For example, assuming a 0.1 per cent frequency separation is in use, as recommended for the present by the first meeting of the International Technical Consulting Committee on Radio Communications at The Hague in the Fall on 1929, the band width at 2,000 kilocycles on a 9.1 per cent basis is only 2 kilocycles; in order to create a television channel of 100 kilocycles, 50 such channels are required.

The same percentage separation applied to the very high frequency end of the spectrum would give, at 60,000 kilocycles, a channel width of 60 kilocycles, 30 times as wide as the two-kilocycle channel in the 2,000 kilocycle-portion of the spectrum.

The Radio Manufacturers Association has created a television committee which, among other things, has considered and adopted standards of scanning as follows:

1. Scanning from left to right and from top to bottom.
2. A scanning speed of 15 pictures per second.
3. The use of 48 lines, requiring 48 holes in spiral in the scanning disc.
4. In addition to the 48-line standard a secondary standard of 60 lines was created in order to permit more detail in a picture for more advanced research workers.

The Commission does not require adherence to these standards. However, if one method of reception can be used for all television stations a larger experimental audience is obtained, since no receiving set experimenter has the inclination or the apparatus to shift from one to another of several methods of scanning, when he could be concentrating his efforts on reception experiments which would be independent of scanning methods.

Facing New Tax, Iowa Exhibitors Back Hagemann

Des Moines—With a ten per cent admission tax measure declared to be in preparation by legislators, exhibitors of the state are greatly concerned in the forthcoming gubernatorial election. They are to be asked to get behind the campaign of Fred P. Hagemann, veteran showman, who operates the Grand at Independence and the Palace at Waverly. Hagemann is the Democratic nominee, and is conceded a good chance of election in this normally Republican state.

The nominee is opposed to the proposed luxury tax, and is quoted as advising the recently formed Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa that the reported protection demands of Publix in the state are illegal. He suggested that the exhibitor body employ counsel and fight the matter in court.

Exhibitors will be asked to flash a screen message backing Hagemann's candidacy. A special committee is being formed for the purpose.

THE Projectionists' Round Table

By John F. Rider

Variation of Inductance—The inductance of an air core winding and of an iron core winding varies as the square of the number of turns. Thus, if the number of turns is increased twofold, the inductance increases fourfold. The above is a general statement bearing certain modifications in practice, as for example, it does not hold true if the length of the winding is changed. As to iron core inductances, the inductance value is usually proportional to the cross section area of the core and inversely to the length of the airgap. As to current flow, the inductance of an iron core winding is reduced when current flows through the windings. The frequency effect upon air core windings need not be considered at this time, since its effect upon inductance is negligible in zone of frequencies encountered in sound systems.

Honey or Vinegar?

WITH your kind permission we will invoke the ancient expression "You can catch more flies with honey than you can with vinegar."

Why, why can't some of the men, supposed to be possessed of tact and executive ability, placed in the field to supervise and direct the destinies of a group of theatres, learn that they too can get further with a little "honey" in their contacts with the men than by constantly riding them?

If they were house managers themselves in the past, they must know the grind and grief that goes with present-day theatre management. Why not try to lighten the burden? Make the men feel and work happier. Make them want to plug harder. ing to pull wires over the d.m.'s other districts.

On my recent coast-to-coast trip I found much more cheerful conditions and better business wherever the managers were working under fair, understanding bosses. They spoke well of them; were anxious to produce greater results; in fact, they were more keen about pleasing their district supervisor than the home office.

But I also found spots where the managers were chiefly concerned with the possibilities of making new connections. Trying the pull wires over the d.m. head to secure assignments in districts outside of where they were working.

They lacked the pep and the desire to plug; to produce; to do anything at all, for that matter. And all because they knew that a word of praise or a so-called pat on the back would be missing regardless of how well they worked.

I even had the opportunity of chatting with one of the supervisors of the latter type. I am respecting his confidence so far as his name and location are concerned; but it would be a burning shame if I kept his thoughts a secret.

House managers meant very little or nothing to him. He was firmly sold on the notion that if he did not keep on their tails they would lay down on the job. He was confident that any head usher could step into the manager's chair and do "just as well."

But he did admit that he was having a tough time getting "good" men. I could have helped him work out that puzzle. Half a dozen within a radius of fifty miles would never work for him unless they were destitute. What some of those showmen thought of this particular supervisor could never find its way into print.

And the biggest laugh was the part of our conversation when he told me about a "lousy yegg" whom he worked for when he managed an independent house some years ago. "Chick."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Editorial Comment Was Given Norman By Local Newspaper

When his house reopened in Clarksdale, Miss., R. E. Norman, manager, turned out a very effective opening campaign in conjunction with the name change from Marion to Paramount. The local newspaper came through with an editorial that did much to establish a good-will foundation for the theatre; and as it proved to be an excellent business builder for Norman we are reprinting it in order that you may see what it was like and judge for yourself the pulling power of the Clarksdale paper; or, for that matter, any small-town paper, since they are all rather formidable factors in the making of a town, good newspapers having made larger towns and so on.

Part of the editorial comment follows:

"Paramount theatre, formerly the Marion, has been greatly improved. Most theatregoers of Clarksdale and surrounding delta, with their mind's eye on pictures, will wonder how that might be possible, for under the present management there have been brought to this city pictures that are to be seen in the largest cities of the United States.

"As a dispenser of entertainment and amusement the Paramount cannot be improved, but, like the manufacturer of the talcum powder who found that since he could not improve his product he would provide a better container, the theatre management, backed by the owners, has improved the interior of the Paramount otherwise known as the Marion.

"Improvements of this kind are certain to be met with a more generous response on the part of delta theatregoers and Paramount deserves it."

With almost every resident of Clarksburg subscribing or reading the paper, it may be easily seen that its value was tremendous.

We would like to hear more from Norman now that his house is open again and we hope he will keep us posted on show happenings at Clarksburg, and when he writes he will also include his photo and a little note about himself.

Luntz Looms Large On Show Horizon Of Long Island, N.Y.

When they start standing up in the back of the Valley Stream Theatre in Valley Stream, Long Island, N. Y., it's a pretty sure thing that Joseph Luntz had a lot to do with it, since he happens to be the manager of the house and one of the most active showmen on his side of the island.

One of his recent activities, a photo of which he forwarded to us, but that we were unable to use due to its blackness, was responsible in no small measure for the successful selling of the Movietone Follies. He constructed a special beaverboard display by cutting up a three-sheet that showed a group of girls in pose. The cut-out was placed in the center of the lobby completely surrounded by palms which Luntz promoted from the local florist. He then made up a bunch of electrically lighted paper flowers, using Christmas tree bulbs to achieve the desired effect. Cut-out letters plugging the title of the picture were then strung across the lobby. The finished effect was one that packed plenty of punch and any one entering the lobby was sure to notice that the new picture was shortly to play the theatre.

This is not the only activity that Luntz has been engaged in since last we heard from him. He also secured permission from the civic authorities to string a banner across the street, on the same block with the theatre, plugging his "Mickey Mouse Club," which, by the way, has swelled to giant proportions, the house seating 1,200, and he has some 13 odd hundred members registered already. After leaving the banner up for a sufficient length of time, he changed the wording to plug the big releases playing at the theatre. We understand that this will be a regular weekly feature with him, and, as plenty of traffic goes right past his theatre, it looks as though he is going to get a very substantial increase in business. And when you have such a drag that you can get a banner right across the street, you must be well liked; and such must be the case with Joe, as the showmanship he is turning out more than proves his worth to the title.

Convict Ballyhoo Was A Feature Of Tom Kane's Selling

Ushering in his campaign for Greater Talkie Season by procuring the Mayor's personal endorsement of the occasion was the first bell ringing act of Tom Kane upon his return from his vacation and the taking up of his duties as manager of the Sequoia Theatre in Redwood City, Calif. The Mayor's proclamation was put on the front page of the local newspaper in full view of the thousands of readers.

With "The Big House" slated as one of the films on the Greater Talkie line-up, Kane constructed a special fitting for the box-office in the form of a prison entrance, suitably inscribed with note enlightening the patrons to the fact that they should carry their cash to the prison entrance. Outside of the beaver board prison, Kane placed two ushers, dressed in convict uniform, manacled together and guarded by a keeper. The prisoners and warden paraded up and down in front of the theatre all during its run, and if you'll look closely at the photo we are showing you can see them. For a gag, Kane chased the ballyhoo over to the courthouse, where, to the surprise of the Judge, who was just emerging, they proceeded to give themselves up. The magistrate was nonplussed for a moment until he perceived that it was another of Kane's gags.

The lobby of the Sequoia featured, cuffs, manacles, rifles, pistols, Oregon boots, shackles, and all of the other prison paraphernalia that Kane was able to promote from the office of the Sheriff; and these tended greatly towards the further selling of the film. The campaign was a knockout and the subsequent business proved of the K.O. variety also. In addition to the photo on "The Big House" ballyhoo we are also showing a photo of the truck, used to plug "Journey's End." This truck was promoted by Louis De Matteis, the acting assistant who is pinch hitting for Clint Eberly, now on vacation, and Kane doesn't know as yet where the truck came from, or the "wrecking crew" with it for that matter.

Plenty of interest was displayed in this stunt. We are informed that the housewives let the biscuits burn while they ran to the window to find the cause of the commotion being made by the "wrecking crew" who were banging away on tin cans and almost anything else that would emit sound. The truck cruised all about the town; and by the time it had finished the whole of Redwood City knew that Journey's End was playing at the local theatre. The photo will show you what it looked like—no beauty, but a beaut of a stunt.

Now that Tom is back from his vacation we look forward to passing along some more of his work; and we have a hunch that his work for "Greater Talkie Season" is going to surpass by far all of his previous efforts, though to do that they will have to be knockouts. Right, Tom?

Ed Lewis to Poughkeepsie!

Being determined to give the upstate natives some showmanship par excellence, Ed Lewis, former manager of the De Witte in Bayonne, N. J., and prior to that connected with other Warner houses, has assumed his duties as supervising manager of the Strand and Rialto Theatres in Poughkeepsie.

A showman of wide and varied experience, Ed is fully qualified to take over a supervisor's reins and we are sure that the work he has been turning out for the past years will be continued in an even greater measure than before.

We want to congratulate him on his new assignment and let him know that we are pulling for him. Keep us in touch with your work, Ed, so that we can pass it along to your fellow members, because we know that they too are interested in looking it over.

This One Is A Bit Late But You Can File It For Future

Another way of publicizing a cooling plant was pressed into service by W. W. Lewis, manager of the Old Mill Theatre in Dallas, Texas, who tied up with a local ice cream company and secured their co-operation on his novel plan.

An icicle ice cream booth was built in the lobby, where slices of brick ice cream were passed out to patrons as they came out of the theatre.

The booth carried copy relating to the new cooling system as well as a credit to the ice cream company, who not only furnished the ice cream gratis, but also a girl to serve it.

A unique display in connection with the ice cream booth was the "dry ice." Very few people had ever seen this new ice composition and were very much interested in learning about it.

Lewis made a photostat copy of one of the newspaper stories relating to the installation of the new cooling system. He then made a lobby placque of this photostat and, as it carried a signature banner of the Times-Herald paper in which the story had appeared, the paper again gave an extra story on the stunt.

He also invited the head of the Weather Bureau to turn on the system—and of course he was photographed in action. The newspapers carried photos and stories on this stunt—in the nature of the weather man predicting fair and cooler weather at the Old Mill.

Listen, Mr. Lewis. Looking through our files, we find we haven't a picture of you, so we hope that you will remedy the matter and shoot one in to us together with a little dope on yourself so that we can let the rest of the Club meet the man who's turning out such great wor kin Dallas. Oke?

Thief? Stole Sand Bags From Front Of Ohio Theatre

The head on a recent story in the Lima Daily News read: "Sand Bags are Stolen from Film Display." The story then went on and spoke about the thirty sandbags that someone had walked off with from the front of the chain's Ohio theatre where they had been in use as a display for "All Quiet On the Western Front." But when Sid Lawrence's name appeared in the story—that was the pay-off. We figured that the Ohio district manager was up to his old tricks; and we didn't deduce wrongly.

The story closed with this paragraph: "Lawrence was inclined to believe that the bags would be returned some time Monday night." And, sez we, we are sure that they will.

The above lead-off was just written in order that you may obtain some idea of the way Sid works. He's a crackerjack at that kind of publicity grabbing. He has grabbed plenty of space in papers throughout the country; and the best part of it all is that he knows how to do it so that the papers won't hold any ill feeling against him. Which is the only way it should be done.

Here's another. When Sid played "Common Clay," he hopped over to the local gun club and secured 1,000 broken clay pigeons. Parts of the clay were wrapped up in pieces of paper, in which a note was placed, "It's just 'Common Clay' (theatre, playdate)." The packages were delivered to all of the offices in the down town section and created quite a furore in the way of laugh-getting; enough, in fact, to bring the recipients to the box-office.

We also note with interest that he has contacted the local Tom Thumb courses, supplying them with score cards imprinted with the attraction of the theatre. Another piece of excellent work were the special lay-outs he designed for his newspaper ads on "All Quiet." They were well made-up with plenty of selling copy and a judicious use of mats. We want to thank him for passing these along to us, and we know that we'll have more in the future. So watch the Club pages, and see what else this showman is doing to bring them in.

Hugh Wallace Is Still Constructing Novel Lobby Sets

As we remarked once before, when Hugh Wallace, manager of the Kitsilano Theatre in Vancouver, B. C., creates special lobby displays they are certain to bring lots of comment. And the one he made up for "Burning Up" did just that.

If you recall we showed you what he did to plug "The Hottentot" when that film played his house, by building a miniature race track and using a compo board cut-out of a horse galloping on it that was very realistic. This time he used the same idea again but on an entirely different picture, as "Burning Up" is a story of an auto race track.

However, Hugh set to work and the result was another eye arresting display made up out of six and three sheets and containing a lot of novel touches in the form of concealed spots and things playing upon it. Though the photo from which the cut was made happened to be a little light for reproduction, we think that you will be able to make out what he did, even though the cut doesn't do it full justice. The proof of the display, we might add, was in the fact that despite hot weather, business was excellent.

Since Hugh tells us that he has something up his sleeve which is going to make interesting reading, we'll have to hold off until we receive it. Keep up your live-wire work Hugh and above all keep us posted on it so that we can let your fellow-managers up in Canada, see what you are doing, as well as the rest of your brother members.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

As Team's Final Effort Weiss And Perlberg Did This

The last contribution from the team of Weiss-Perlberg, Inc. Yep! The rumors are true. The team is no more. As we announced in a recent issue, Al Weiss, manager of the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., has gone and got himself married; and Jonas Perlberg, other half of the team is going on a new assignment for the Publix Circuit.

As the final installment from the two showmen is about to be writ, we think it only fitting that Jonas Perlberg should do it, so here goes—in his own language Jonas tell you what they did; "for our campaign on 'Anybody's War,'" he states, "we got ourselves a hundred or more black balloons, and painted eyes and ears and mouths on them, showing them in various moods and then they placed over-sea caps on them and hung them up about two weeks in advance in every window in the downtown district of Jacksonville.

"We made a tie-up with the American Legion for a Midnite preview and for a week in advance the Legion and their band broadcasted a program over Station W J A X and told all about the coming of the Two Black Crows. On the principal corners the Legion Boys had an advance sale of tickets with box-offices built on gun-carriages and on the night picture opened the Legion Drum and Bugle Corps with 10 squads of Army Boys from the Summer Camp at Camp Foster paraded through the downtown streets with banners flying and lots of red fire. It sure made this "Take in the Street at 9 o'clock Town" look like Broadway at mid-nite.

"During the showing of William Haines in "Way Out West" —Master Philippe deLacy, the little movie star who last played with Ruth Chatterton in Sarah and Son—came in town by motor to visit some relatives on his way to New York from the coast (California) so Weiss and Perlberg prevailed on him to extend his stay and they signed him up for a three day personal appearance—Perlberg got him a big new Chrysler Eight and put him and his mother up at the best hotel in town (gratis). Philippe talked over the radio between shows—and the kids came from far and near and even sat two in a seat at the Junior Matinee which is held every Saturday morning at the Florida. He also made a personal appearance at the leading department store and entertained about 3,000 kiddies and autographed pictures and gave a $5 gold piece to four newsboys on the leading papers who had won these awards in a special circulation contest. Philippe was entertained by the civic clubs and public officials at luncheons (Perlberg ate free) six times a day. He also visited the Moose Home, the various orphanages and other places of interest. He started the Motor Boat Races and the Florida had one of the biggest week-ends in some time. Weiss-Perlberg, Inc., recommend Philippe deLacy as a real box-office draw and he doesn't do a tap dance or sing Sonny Boy.

"For the exploitation of Marx Brothers "Animal Crackers," Weiss-Perlberg staged an Animal Cracker Hunt in one of the big parks—after enlisting the services of the Mayor and the Supt. of the Jacksonville Zoo. They planted 2,000 animal crackers in the park at night in various spots under the palm trees, etc., and then at the crack of the gun the kids started hunting for the animals, and the ones bringing the most crackers or lucky crackers imprinted on back to the Florida box-office received cash and other prizes. This stunt simply went over with a bang. Another outstanding stunt on animal crackers was the placing of animal crackers under the seats before the show and then asking the patrons to look under their seats and if they found an animal cracker they would receive a ticket to see a performance of Marx Brothers—at the Children's Matinee. An animal cracker contest was staged, a bunch of kiddies were allowed to come on the stage and each was given an envelope with six animal crackers in it and at a given signal they tore open the envelopes and started eating and the first one to whistle and say animal crackers received a cash prize, Perlberg was judge, and when they started blowing, he got his, got his eyes full of crumbs. Perlberg says don't stand in front of the blowers.

"Well," Jonas concludes, "that's all." Weiss will continue to work down here in the Land of Sunshine and Perlberg is going up to New York to work. Anyone on his way to Florida to spend the winter can have several palm beach suits for the asking, or will trade for one good fleece-lined overcoat. "And now with the last chapter ended—so long."

That's that. But it doesn't mean that we won't hear any more about what these showmen are doing. We know Weiss will continue his activity; Jonas his, and though they will be in separate parts of the country we may be sure that they will be represented, individually this time. We want to wish the best of luck to them both; and hope to hear from them again real soon. Good Luck Al and Mrs. Al! Good Luck Jonas!

Some interesting "dope" about miniature golf courses and how they can be best tied in with theatre exploitation.

There are any number of courses in every town on the map, it seems; so let's hear what our members and readers have to say on the subject.

Here Is How Two Peoria Showmen Sold Summer Shows

The heat wave which has been sweeping the middle western states has met with all kinds of opposition on the part of showmen, and in Peoria, Illinois, City Manager Leonard Worley and Manager Warner J. Miller helped to offset the effect by several stunts which conveyed the cool idea.

The Palace is refrigerated, and besides having newspaper ads which carried appropriate copy to that effect, also had a "polar" display under the canopy, and a standard cooling campaign. Worley and Miller had cakes of ice out in front of the theatre in which were imbedded sales copy about the current attraction and the cool theatre. These cakes of ice, besides creating a "cool idea" about the theatre attracted a great deal of interest because many people wondered how the sign telling of a current show could have become frozen into the cake of ice.

In addition to these few novel stunts a tie-up was also effected with a local bottling company whereby cool drinks were dispensed to all patrons desiring them, at no cost to the theatre. This idea did a lot to boost up the good-will stock of the theatre and resulted in a lot of favorable comment that reacted toward the box-office.

We are glad to note that these showmen are right on the job, and, despite the heat, endeavoring to keep their houses right up to the mark. And when showmen work like that, it is a pretty sure thing that they are going to turn in a profitable season. We'd like to hear more about what Worley and Miller are doing and we hope that they will favor us with future accounts.

A "Good Deed" a Day Keeps the "Red Ink" Away!

"If Bill was a few years younger, he would make an excellent Boy Scout, doing, as he does, his good turn daily," says the Port Washington News in an article relating to the many novel exploitation stunts William A. ("Bill") Levey, manager of the Beacon Theatre, one of the A. H. Schwartz chain houses located in Port Washington, Long Island, New York, engineers to bring in Mr. and Mrs. Public.

It seems that Bill tied up with the local paper and arranged to have them run a notice to the effect that he would admit the mothers of seven children to the Beacon Theatre to witness the showing of "Courage." The children were also invited.

These "good deeds" are good box-office builders for Levey and we can say with conviction that in the time he has been at the house he has certainly done a lot to obtain and hold the good-will of the residents, merchants and newspapers of Port Washington, cementing it to the state where his personal endorsement of a film has been known to pack the Beacon. It is also interesting to note that the patrons of the theatre have had the circuit trademark before them so often, the name "A Century Circuit Theatre" has become as standardized on Long Island as that of the larger chains throughout the country.

How about you? Are you doing your "good deed," too? It's the little "good deeds" that build up good-will and circuit standardization. Keep it up, Bill, and let's hear from you again.

Newsreel Shot Gave Herman Bamberger A Lead For Stunt

Showmen have often capitalized on many features of local interest which they found in their pictures, such as a star, who was born in or near the home town, or a resident of the town who had become successful in the movies, and things of like nature; but it remained for Herman Bamberger, manager of the Kentucky Theatre in Lexington, Ky., to cash in on all of the newspaper publicity that followed the startling dilemma confronting the Bamberger-Watkins families (no relation to Herman) when their babies were mixed up in the hospital.

When Bamberger received his weekly newsreel and noticed that it contained shots of the families participating in the mix-up he immediately got busy, and dispatched a boy about the streets, wheeling a baby carriage, which carried a card with copy: "You've read about them. Now see and hear them in the Paramount Newsreel—the Watkins-Bamberger Baby Mix-up. The babies and their parents. Can you decide which baby is which?" The stunt caused quite a sensation as it was the first time it had ever been seen in the city. In addition to plugging the newsreel shots, Bamberger also got in a plug for his feature picture.

Here's an angle that you too can make good use of. You know your newsreels and your shorts might often furnish you with leads that will enable you to secure valuable publicity. Keep your eye on them, and whenever you see something of local interest, get busy on it. Don't be afraid to plug it! You'll more than be repaid for your work, by the additional business and publicity that will result.

We want to thank Bamberger for passing this slant along to us; and we are sure that we will have some more of this showman's work to pass along in the very near future. Right, Herman?

"Civic Pride Week" Helped Good-Will Stock Of Orlove

"Civic Pride Week" is the latest one that Louis Orlove, manager of the Uptown Theatre in Milwaukee, is using, and, as usual, it's paying him dividends in good-will.

He tied up with the local merchants and they agreed to donate lawn mower, yard equipment and other useful implements that delight the heart of the gardener and Americ's famous amateur gardener, the commuter. He then ran a special notice in the newspaper to the effect that persons having the best dressed yards during the week would be awarded the gifts.

A committee of judges was selected to go through the various yards, front and rear, in the residential districts. The judges made pencilled notations and upon their return to the theatre handed Orlove about 28 names nightly. Four of these names were read off from the stage. The winners had to be in the house to receive the prize. This stunt was one of the most outstanding of those used during "Civic Pride Week" and it met with the enthusiastic approval of the Chamber of Commerce.

Perhaps you too, have been contemplating something of this sort. Or maybe, the community itself makes a seasonal feature of "Civic Pride Week." Here's an opportunity for you to get in a lot of good-will for your house; and at the same time boost up business.

"Smiling" Bob Has A Band He Drills For His Theatre

Whether the weather is hot or cold, it makes no difference to "Smiling" Bob E. Lewis, manager of the Paradise Theatre in West Allis, Wis., a new Club member, who from the start seems determined to prove himself a very active one by sending us in, as his first contribution, an account of his show-selling activities.

One of his best stunts and business boosters may be seen in the photo we are reproducing a file and drum corps composed of the personnel of the Paradise Theatre. The boys are house ushers and the girl in the center is the relief cashier. The three white batons, in the foreground, are twirled by two ushers and the girl. The doorman is the Major Domo. The band was trained by "Smiling Bob" personally and besides the ushers, numbers recruits from the town to the total of 40 drums.

On Independence Day, Lewis transported his band to the State Fair Park, where the county's mammoth Fourth of July celebration was taking place. He arranged to parade the corps in front of the grandstands which held 18,000 people, and before the governor of the state, who was guest of honor. This was the only band which was allotted this privilege and it resulted in effective publicity for the theatre, as four ushers carried a large banner at the head of the procession, with the following copy: "Fox Paradise Theatre West Allis, For Safe and Sane Entertainment. We Are Here to Serve You. Now Playing (Title)."

The stunt proved a great good-will booster as well. The local American Legion post was sponsoring the Fair and they were very much pleased at the novel parade. We want to welcome "Smiling Bob" to the Club and express the hope that we'll see his smiling face many more times in connection with some high-powered showmanship. And how about a photo of that smile with your next contribution, Bob?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

LOOKING OVER THE FIELD WITH "CHICK"

PETE EGAN was vacationing over Winnipeg way and spending some of his time like most trolley car conductors. Hanging 'round the Capitol Theatre. But he has been promoted to the post of city and district manager and if anyone can think of a better man for the job we wish they would step forward and tell us who. Pete has an enviable background and record in show business and there are mighty few tricks he has ever been accused of missing.

He has constantly stored away a mass of knowledge that has equipped him admirably for looking after a group of houses and unless we miss our guess you'll be hearing about Pete climbing still higher on the theatre ladder of Canada. And is he liked? Well, we must leave that question up to the boys who know Pete a lot better than we do. We spoke to some dozen of them around his vicinity and nary a one had anything but the best to say about him and his methods. Just let him continue that way and it won't be lond before his ability will be needed in wider fields than the prairies of Canada.

But to jump back to Borland, we want you to look forward to a picture of your humble chairman visiting at the training school for the Royal Canadian Northwest Mounted Police, located just outside of Regina and used for the purpose of preparing the famous "Mounties" for their cold and difficult task of enforcing some semblance of law and order in the remote regions of northern Canada. And what a time we had getting a close view of this magnificent training school. Escorted by none other than Col. Wesley, head of the school, and prying into every spot on the place. If you don't think we found it a welcome relief from theatre visiting, you're mistaken. Yes, even I can get tired of riding the trolley cars on my day off. But it was these little sidelights which made the trip so much more enjoyable than it would have been had we confined all our time to theatre and show-business.

IF one must form opinions from what they see, and that's a doggoned good way to arrive at any opinion, then Regina will grow even faster in the future than it has in the past. There ar efew other cities in this part of the Dominion where so many improvements and innovations are in progress or under consideration. As witness their marvelous new airport, located but a few minutes by auto or trolley from the center of the city. And many other features all due to attract a lot of attention to this city on the prairie. And while mentioning the airport we would have you know that they are almost due for a big air pageant during this month and leave it to the snappy showmen of that town to see that they tie right in with it.

Hopping about with Borland, we stopped in to see the cutest little atmospheric house in the country. It's the Broadway Theatre, managed by another old-time showman—Blum—and any one in Regina way can tell you plenty about him. Also had a look-in at their projection room and almost gasped with astonishment. Here was a theatre of about eight hundred seats, I should judge, and their booth was as large as the Warner Hollywood Theatre booth. Everything of the latest and finest in sound and projection equipment, so naturally, the show houses in this town need not hide their heads in shame over anything they offer their patrons.

Despite the crop-failure, which hit this town about as bad as anywhere, they are managing to keep their faces to the front and are optimistic enough to feel that better times are coming pretty soon. It's no cinch to sell shows in a town where money has become so scarce you must be SOME salesman to do it, but Pete, Dave and the rest of the boys are just that, and if the theatre is any sort of a gauge for future prosperity and general conditions, then the managers in this town are sure that better business will arrive with the new fall season.

IN this era of dissatisfaction among many of the chain house managers, it was gratifying to learn how much the boys of the F. P. Canadian outfit like their new chief—Fitzgibbon. They met him just recently at the eastern and western conventions, and he also made a tour of the houses to look things over. "Fitz" has earned a great name for himself down in the States, so he's just duplicating his usual popularity with these boys up here. We doubt whether he will attempt any wholesale changes among the house men, especially in the western part of the Dominion. First, he has a marvelous group of men now, and second, as we have already mentioned, they would have a tough time replacing them with some of those warm-climate babies that we know so well.

THE question of injecting a personal touch to your theatre's advertising has been a subject for much debate and discussion for years. Our attitude has been that, in the right towns and under the proper conditions, a personal touch in a theatre's contact with their patrons will result in much good will and friendship between the patron and the manager. Here in Regina, I noted with much satisfaction, that the boys only inject, themselves into the newspaper ads when the circumstances or type of advertising warrants it. Good judgment. But when they do, it invariably results in added business. I, particularly, liked the way Dave indorsed a picture about to play the Met. Such methods ought to be adopted on a wide scale in many of the towns and cities in the States, instead of discouraging it and raising hell from the home office. It is not personal publicity for the manager. What in hell can be gained from injecting his own name in an ad indorsing a picture? But it does lend that personal touch with the theatre patron of the average town likes so well. It gives them a feeling that they know the manager personally, and many a theatre would profit greatly if they could get just such an impression across to their patrons.

ALTHOUGH we could not possibly take the time to run down to Moose Jaw, we found it was not a bit necessary so far as finding out what was going on down there. Our good friend Fields has spread his showmanship rep. over the whole countryside and, no matter who you talk to, you are bound to hear something about Fields and his activities. However, we are sure grateful that he is a steady contributor to our Club pages, for in that way we always know what he is doing—and he's constantly doing something.

Before saying goodbye to Regina we tried to locate several of the other boys, but just through one of those coincidents, they were almost all over to Winnipeg on business. We'll have to leave a note for them and hope to see them at some future date, and let's hope it won't be too long from now.

ONCE you step off the train at this city, you know that you are getting back to real big-town spots. Winnipeg shows every indication of being a mighty lively city, and from the short and sweet observations we made during the 12 hours we were in the town, we knew we would leave with a feeling of real regret.

And while on the question of vaudeville and "flesh" being in demand, as found in many of the spots already covered since leaving Hollywood, you just need to look in at the Capital. The house was packed from top to bottom, and it was far from being perfect show weather the night we arrived here. The more attention I pay to this angle, the more convinced I am that vaudeville will pull many of the houses out of the red. The novelty of the talkies has not only worn off, even the so-called good ones need help from some other direction to get them by the box office.

I have yet to encounter a combination vaudeville and picture house doing poor business, and if that don't mean anything then I'll eat my next year's good hat—when I can afford to buy one. And I'm not alone in these thoughts, either. Just talk to some of the boys right on the firing line. They ought to know, and they are of the same opinion. They must have vaudeville if they are to return to the prosperous box-office days of before the talkies. I heartily agree with them and I am willing to bet that before the next season is far under way, the man at the say-so desks in the home offices will O. K. the stage shows for the houses now floundering around in the muck of uncertain and poor business.

ALTHOUGH we only had time for a look-in at some half dozen of the other houses, we soon decided that business was not so hot for the moment. Even in one or two spots where they had a fairly good screen attraction, they should have been playing to better business. But they tell me this condition was only recent and that things in general were better than at the moment. I'm hoping it is so for their sakes. Nothing so depressing as consistently plugging a house doing poor business, but it does take guts to plug that kind.

Had to turn down many nice invitations from the boys up here, but I had made up my mind to keep moving as I have already lost almost ten days and it has my schedule knocked into a cocked hat. I'm so confused trying to dope out time, trains and Pullman berths, that half the time I walk around in a trance. The last time the waiter in the hotel asked me what I wanted for dessert I said, "A drawing room and see that it's in the center of the car." Laugh that off. It's not as much of a "pun" as you think.

PULLED out of Winnipeg early in the morning (to the steady growling of Mrs. Chick for making her lose some of her beauty (?) sleep), and after the dirtiest and dustiest train ride of the entire trip, pulled into Duluth (friendly, according to the Chamber of Commerce) and into the arms of Morris and Molly. What? You don't know who Morris and Molly are? Gosh all hemlock, where's your eddykation? Them's the Rosenthal fambily in the flesh and not a talkie (says who?) And if you don't think I was glad to see them you're way off your mark. But Duluth and Superior deserves a special edition all for themselves, so I'm going to sign off for this week and continue in our next (as they said in the old dime novels).

LACK of time compelled us to cut out about ten days from the "tour," therefore, next week's issue will bring this particular series to a close. Duluth and Superior were the last two cities officially covered. We then jumped into Chicago and then into New York.

Following this series we will endeavor to convey some of the more important impressions gained by this trip.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

George Delis Now Handling Two!

Congratulations are in order for George Delis, of the Olympic Theatre in Steubenville, Ohio, who has just been appointed manager of the Capitol Theatre in the same city.

The Capitol and Olympic are recent Warner acquisitions. As most all of our members know, the Capitol was formerly managed by William L. Hendricks, who goes, so we understand, to Parkersburg, W. Va., for the Warner interests.

Delis turned out some excellent work at the Olympic and we are sure that, though he will have his hands full with two houses, he is going to give us still more of it. He arrived in Steubenville six and one-half years ago and started working at the Olympic as reel and errand boy, for his uncle, who formerly owned both of the local houses. He is one of the youngest managers on the Warner circuit. We wish him continued success and look to hearing from him real soon.

Lobby Shadow-Box Created Effective Flash For B. Gary

Here is one that you can credit to Bob Gary of the Paramount Theatre in Des Moines, Iowa, and which should serve as an example of showmanship that will be hard to beat or equal if we were to stack up all of the stuff that comes into CLUB headquarters as a sort of elimination contest.

In the event that you are a little doubtful at what we are driving at or what the reproduction represents, we want you to know that it is a changeable shadow-box of gigantic proportion and was designed by Bob to sell his coming stage and screen entertainment.

The cut-out caricature figures of the musicians are a permanent part of the box, which sort of gives the material back of these cut-outs the appearance of depth and altogether the display is unusually beautiful and effective.

The change is made each week when his poster artist puts in the material for the new attractions on the tilted covered background hung in the box and as a means of lighting it, plenty of plug lighting is utilized and in addition the columns at both ends are illuminated with colored lights shining through transparent silk cloth.

Altogether this strikes us as being a mighty fine piece of work and we are only sorry that the photograph couldn't do it far more justice than it did. However, with a little bit of imagination most any one should be able to create a gag of this type for a spot in their lobby that will be bound to attract attention.

Ewing Used Some Sure-Fire Ones On Recent Campaigns

A good deal of valuable publicity was secured by J. C. Ewing, manager of the Colonial Theatre in Watertown, South Dakota recently.

When he installed a cooling system at his house, he decided that the town had to know about it in a big way. The best medium, he decided, was the local newspaper. Accordingly, he promoted ads from all of the manufacturers whose products went into the building of the system. The result was a three-quarter page co-operative ad with the theatre name being given prominence. This was followed up with another ad in which the cooling plant company itself devoted half of its space to the theatre. The campaign went over very well, and the whole town knew that the local house was sporting a hot weather reliever.

Ewing passes along a little stunt he used for "True to the Navy" in the form of stage money. The dummy currency was imprinted with copy: "You'll certainly get your money's worth when you see Clara Bow in 'True to the Navy" (Theatre, playdates). As this stunt had never been used before, considerable attention was given it; with the theatre profiting both from a monetary as well as publicity standpoint. As you will note, this idea can be adapted to almost any picture or special attraction you play at your house; so if you can't make use of it right away—file it until you can. Thanks "J. C.," for letting us know what you are doing; and we guess it is almost needless for us to say that we are more than interested in learning of your future work. So keep us posted.

Parade Of Horses Was Latest Of McKoy's Pet Feats

J. H. McKoy's penchant for street parades has led him into another. This time it was a stunt whereby a parade of horses would be staged and every one possessing an animal—be it thoroughbred or nag—was invited to enter. The gag was worked in conjunction with the showing of "Way Out West" at the Olympia Theatre in Miami, Fla.

The parade got under way on the evening of the picture's opening day with a large entry of all sorts of horses, and was preceded by the Junior Chamber of Commerce Drum and Bugle Corps. Most of the boys and men mounted on the equines wore Western costumes and as the strange cavalcade wended its way through the main streets of the town persons stopped and gasped in amazement. Not since McKoy's pet parade some time ago had there been anything like it. The streets resound with "neighs, notes, whoas and other et ceteras. Laughs aplenty were occasioned by the frequent kittenishness of some of the venerable nags, who, happy to be free from their truck pulling, endeavored to caper about in time with the music. Small wonder that the town got a big kick out of the stunt. The local ice company's horses were also well represented.

Altogether it was a very effective party and it did a lot to line them up at McKoy's box office all during the playdates. This showman is frequently pulling novel stunts of this sort, and these, coupled with those corking front displays he turns out, have made his work an object of interest on the Club pages. We hope he will continue his active interest and that we will have some more of his showmanlike work to pass along very soon.

R. W. VAN HOOK Says:

"Have looked forward to your section each week and I think it's a great help to the managers of the country and I for one would not be without it. I have gotten quite a number of good tips from reading each and every page and all I can say is ON WITH THE GOOD WORK."

Earl Willey Gives Low-Down On His Art Display Work

This showman, Earl N. Willey, seems to possess a natural knack at turning out campaigns that will click for his house, the Bijou, in Savannah, Ga.

A special display in his lobby was one of the highlights for a recent campaign on the Rudy Valee film, "Vagabond Lover." A "Mike" finished in bronze and standing 7 feet high was constructed. The center of the mike was finished in glass with copy painted on it plugging the film and playdate. The titles of the various song numbers in the film were inserted in the round holes, the three bottom ones being used to let through the music issuing from the combination radio victrola, promoted from the local agency—that was secreted in back. A life-size cut-out of Vallee was placed alongside of the mike. The top of the mike carried the words Station B-I-J-O-U.

The residents of the town had never seen anything like it before and they were astonished aplenty. The local music store dealer sold out all of his records and this pleased him too. Business on the film was capacity and Willey thinks so much of the stunt that he tells us he is going to use it again in the future. He also tells us about the campaign he turned out for "With Byrd at the South Pole." But wait—we'll let him tell you.

"On our campaign," he says:

"We rented two windows next to the theatre and at the top we bordered with crepe paper, red, white stripes with the blue field and stars, Byrd's picture 40x60 in center of window, from corner to corner, draped on each side and on top with alternate sections of red, white and blue. On top of the picture was suspended a beautiful miniature plane about 3 feet long; in each corner stood a 10x40 mat with two stills on each with the title of the picture between; on the floor in front of display was scattered remnants of the red, white and blue crepe paper. A 300-watt globe threw its rays direct on Byrd's picture. In the other window was an exact duplicate in formation except where the Byrd picture stood in the first the second had a pictorial one sheet, showing Byrd's picture and the big plane he flew across the pole with.

"On the two windows of our lobby we suspended a beautiful gold-framed picture of Byrd surrounded by actual stills of the expedition. These held the interest of everyone that passed by. We also had two One Sheet mats with stills in our lobby and on the sidewalk was a large gold-framed frame filled on each side with four 11x14, and in the middle another one sheet. Suspended over the sidewalk was a large electric sign on each side of which was a picture of Byrd cut out of the two 24s. All around the pictures was painted spotted black, inside the sign was ten 100-watt globes, and it is a fact that the picture of Byrd could be seen for blocks on each side. On the front of the theatre, high, we erected a 24-sheet. We used 3,000 heralds, placarded the city with window cards, 1, 3 and 6 sheets, also placed framed pictures of Byrd in different merchants' windows without passes, ran teaser ads one week in advance, and in all ads we kept hitting at the women folks and children, did everything in our power to show them they should not miss this picture. The picture did a marvelous business the week of July 14, in spite of the terrific hot weather and rain storms. Our campaign proved itself by an extremely large attendance of ladies during the entire week. We found that the thing to do is to keep Byrd in the front on everything and keep away from the Antarctics as much as you can.

"We had as our guests during the week all of the different orphanages and old folks home. I persuaded the Yellow Cab Co. to furnish big buses to carry the old folks to and from the theatre, all being my guests. This brought us untold publicity in the featured parts of our local newspapers. In sending these in I hope that some brother manager will derive some benefit or suggestion from them as I have from the many ideas so kindly printed in the Managers' Round Table."

Thanks, Earl, for those kind sentiments at the close of your because we are sure that your fellow members are as interested as we in learning how you bring them up to the box-office. Let's have some more.

LANDY'S SMASH ADV'T!

One familiar with the advertising out on the Coast need only to pick up a paper from any part of it and he is certain to find some outstanding advertising in it. The lay-outs are bound to be of the type that will attract the eye the moment the page is reached. An angle that the showmen who create the ads haven't overlooked is the fact that localized copy, having a personal appeal, is one of the most valuable and effective mediums that can be used, and they hasten to make the most of it.

The ads are noted for their variety. The endorsements of local celebrities, the scare head catch line, a few lines of type and a picture, are some of the mediums used. In the past we have presented many samples of newspaper advertising from all over the world, and, it is interesting to note, as we go back over the files, that in all of the lay-outs the West Coast advertising was represented. The ad that we are showing in conjunction with this little story was turned out by George Landy, who, as you all know, is director of advertising and publicity for RKO on the Pacific Coast.

This "Dawn Patrol" ad created quite a stir when it appeared in the paper. Its novelty of make-up made it one of the most outstanding of the lay-outs presented on the newspaper pages that day. Study it carefully and no doubt you will pick out one or two angles that you can reserve for future use to serve as an advertising aid in your own lay-outs. You will notice the local touch that Landy injected in the notice that the evening show is dedicated to the "Quiet Birdmen," an organization, as the ad explains, of America's leading aviation aces. You will also notice that he has added more life to the lay-outs by inserting thumb nail photos of the leading aces.

There are a number of striking features in the lay-out of this ad and we think that if you'll allow some time in perusing them it will be well spent.

BRYAN, REGIONAL CHAIRMAN, NOW IN JERSEY

Here's the new Regional Chairman for New Jersey. Meet Bunny Bryan, who has just been transferred from New England to New Jersey by the Publix circuit.

Bryan has assumed his position as publicity director of the state, with headquarters at the Parmount in Asbury Park. When we heard that he was moving, he was immediately delegated for the Regional Chairmanship, as we know he is fully capable of seeing that his state is represented a-plenty on our pages.

Most of our members are acquainted with the work that this live-wire turned out in New England; and those of you who haven't met Bryan or are unaware of what he is capable of doing need only consult past issues of the Round Table pages and the matter will be cleared up. Notable among Bryan's achievements to date with the Publix circuit are his ace opening of the Paramount in Providence, R. I., and his stunt of selling the picture via a personal speed.

As we are in constant touch with the showmen on the other side of the river, we know what goes on over there in show business; and we think that when Bryan gets started, things are certainly going to hum under his direction. We want to congratulate him on his new position and let him know that we are sure he will more than continue the showmanship that characterized his work in New England.

Estes' Bank Tie-Up Proved Profitable Venture for Both

A form of commercial tie-up which a great many showmen have been quick to take advantage of is that of contacting their local banks. Through just such a tie-up Joe Estes, Director of Publicity for the Saenger Theatre in New Orleans was enabled to profit to the tune of plenty of newspaper space.

The nature of the tie-up was that the Savings Bank was to distribute $2 checks to patrons of the theatre—attending the theatre during the week of August 15th. However, the checks were void unless the person deposited them with $10 in cash in the Savings Bank. The conditions also provided that the depositor would have to let the $12 investment remain in the bank for at least a year or the $2 check would be void.

The theatre permitted the bank to distribute the checks to the theatre patrons free of charge. The cost of printing these checks was borne by the bank, and the person or persons selected to deliver these checks to the patrons were also paid by the bank. In return the bank agreed to pay to the theatre the sum of $375 which was to be used in payment of newspaper bills accruing from the insertion of eight quarter-page ads run in the four papers of New Orleans. The copy for these ads was prepared by the theatre and gave preference to the attractions playing the week of August 15th. The ads also carried copy relative to the distribution of the $2 checks, name of bank, etc.

A showman must have a lot of pull in his city to engineer stunts like this, and it leads us to believe that Estes must be pretty popular. If that's the case, Joe, how about giving us the low-down on your methods; and, at the same time, include your photo so that we can let the rest of the Club meet you.

Sonosky Tied-Up Local Aero Corps To Good Results

When a showman knows that he can get co-operation from local organizations it's a cinch that he is going to do it the first chance he gets. And that's just what was done by A. J. Sonosky, manager of the Riviera Theatre in St. Paul, Minn., when he set out to merchandise "Young Eagles."

He tied up with an organization known as the 109th Aero Squadron (a group of boys studying aeronautics) and arranged with them to help plug his picture.

The Aero Squadron marched to the theatre in a body and then posed in front of the theatre while the news photographers 'shot' them. The sight of all these boys in uniform attracted lots of attention. The boys later entered the theatre to see the picture.

Sonosky also managed to get the loan of a huge searchlight from an aviation field. Although it was impractical to hook the light up due to lack of enough juice to carry the load, it did, however, prove effective in attracting attention as hundreds of people stopped daily to examine its mechanism.

This is Mr. Sonosky's first contribution to these pages and we are sure that now he has gotten off to a "flying start" he will keep up the good work and also keep us posted on his future stunts. And by the way "A. J." We'd like a photo of yourself and a little dope about your career in show business so that we can introduce you to the rest of the crowd.

Dick Gaston Used Wrecked Automobile To Great Results

A novel street stunt was the one executed by Dick Gaston, manager of the Granada Theatre in Norfolk, Nebraska, to bring home to the natives the fact that he had an attraction at his house called "Manslaughter." Read on and see for yourself.

He secured a wrecked automobile and piled it in a vacant lot that was situated right on the main road leading into the center of the town. Above the pile of junk he erected, as the photo shows, a banner which carried copy directing motorists to the fact that "Manslaughter" might be the charge if they didn't drive carefully, besides reminding passersby that the film would be shown at the local playhouse.

As this stunt had never before been used in the town, it attracted a great deal of attention and comment with the result that wide-spread publicity was secured by Gaston. There was very little possibility of any motorist missing the display and the subsequent good business at the house proved that it was a very valuable angle to be used. This stunt, as you know, can be used on a number of pictures; so if you think that conditions will permit your use of it in the near future, file the stunt away and you'll have it ready when you want it.

Heinie Johnson Adds More Poster Art To His Contributions

As we have stated once before, it makes no difference to Heinie Johnson whether he is located at the Ritz Theatre in Big Spring, Texas, or the biggest deluxer in the country, he still turns out display work that sells; and to back up our assertion we are going to once more present some of his work.

By studying the photos carefully you will note the special effects he achieves by the judicious use of copy and facial expressions. As nearly as possible he attempts to inject originality in his work and does not depend to any great extent on the various posters sent him by the exchanges—his method being to secure an idea of the film story and then picturize it in the best way possible.

In the display piece for "The Girl Said No" you will notice that he has used a cut-out head of William Haines and at the same time manages to give more life to the piece by painting in a comic situation on the bottom of the board. In this piece, we understand, Heinie, who knows his public, was aware that Haines is one of the biggest drawing cards at the house, so he felt that all necessary would be a head with something added to attract the eye.

The other piece of art work was used on "True to the Navy" and Heinie has followed out the same principle in regard to it. A great deal of comment is occasioned by his work and it has been found that the natives are often sold by it. Heinie tells us that he actually "thirsts" for photos and he is more than glad to take advantage of the many helpful suggestions that his fellow members pass along on the Club pages, when they send us in samples of their display work. So when so much interest is paid, not only by Heinie, but by a good many other artist showmen, we believe that you will all want to send us in a couple of more. What do you say, Heinie?

35,000 People Saw Ballyhoo Stunt At Railroad Picnic

Just before "The Unholy Three" was to play at the Rialto Theatre, Joliet, Ill., the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern railroad employees were having a picnic which was attended by some 35,000 people. Such a large gathering offered City Manager M. E. Berman and Manager George Mahoney a splendid opportunity for getting a message across about a Rialto performance, so they decided to use a character ballyhoo for "The Unholy Three."

An employee from one of the other theatres in the city was drafted into service to portray the role of "the old lady." He was outfitted in the garments which Chaney wears in his screen portrayal, and sent to the picnic grounds. When he made his appearance there his unusual dress attracted plenty of attention—more being given to him than any other entertainment feature of the picnic.

A card on the man's back carried the announcement of playdates and title. This stunt, done at a minimum cost, was one of the most effective methods for securing a personal contact.

Schools and the Kiddies!

Here we are back again to good old school days and wherever you find live-wire managers you will generally find them engineering all sorts of co-operative tie-ups with the schools.

Such tie-ups don't necessarily mean selling them tickets or plugging pictures, they also refer to special performances, usually in the mornings, and running educational pictures such as are now available to schools all over the country, and in many cities and states, are part of the regular system of education; but, many of the schools lack the necessary equipment or seating capacity. That's where you can gain a strong toe-hold with the faculty and Boards of Education by helping them out.

If you've ever worked anything along those lines then you already know that it gains more good-will than you could ever hope to promote through any other medium.

Besides, it leads to all sorts of ideas to increase the kiddie interest and trade. That angle alone should be sufficient to start you thinking how you can negotiate such co-operation with your schools, and then you ought to get busy.

NOW'S THE TIME.

Stage Coach of By-Gone-Days Attracted Lots of Attention

Grabbing one of the real old-time stage coaches to plug "The Arizona Kid," enabled L. P. Weaver, manager of the Rialto Theatre in Phoenix, Arizona, to feature a fine street ballyhoo for the picture.

The stage coach was drawn by two horses and was filled with cowboys. Cowboys also headed and followed it on horses. The coach carried signs on rear and sides advertising the picture, theatre and play dates as well as the special midnight show. The cowboys, and wagon, traversed not only the business district, but the residential sections as well.

On opening night, it was parked in front of theatre. And about an hour before the midnight show started, the cowboys who were working in the prologue, mounted the stage coach and played and sang cowboy ditties. This attracted considerable attention.

The lobby display consisted of saddles, spurs, etc., as well as a rare collection of old pistols and guns which were displayed in a show case. The art centerpiece was a large cut-out of cactus spotted with stills from the picture and pictures of the cowboys working in the prologue.

All of these stunts tended to increase business for Weaver and we have a hunch that he put them away in his file for future use, too, since all of the live-wire showmen know that no stunt is ready for the discard after it has been used once. Let's hear some more from you, "L. E.," so that we can report what you are doing out there in Phoenix.

"Journey's End" Front Was Biggest Flash Theatre Had

One of the finest fronts that the theatre had ever displayed was seen at the Iowa in Waterloo, Iowa, for the showing of "Journey's End."

Through his tie-ups with the local reserve corps, the manager of the house, secured a display of war trophies, which included among them machine guns, rifles, types of bayonettes, pistols, shells, helmets, cartridges, grenades, bombs, etc., all of which were placed in the inner lobby and on the side-walk. Flanking the display of machine guns on the streets, were a number of sandbags, procured from painting supply houses and filled with sand from around the town.

A special cut-out, painted by hand, graced the center portion of the display and was largely instrumental in getting a flash across that was very valuable, due perhaps to its novel make-up which, as you may see in the cut we are reproducing featured nothing but head outlines and a scene from the film. Atop the marquee, the wide-awake showman erected an electric sign of beaverboard letters, that provided an evening flash that caught the eye of every motorist and pedestrian in the vicinity of the house. Flags of different nations, as well as army battalion colors were strung about the marquee, the war tone being observed throughout.

As a ballyhoo stunt, the entire local National Guard manned a couple of the large army transport trucks and cruised to the theatre. The regimental band, during the course of the ride, played suitable war tunes. Banners, strung alongside of the trucks informed the residents of Waterloo that "Journey's End" was at the local playhouse. Arriving at the theatre, the soldiers stood at attention while the band plade a number of military selections, at the conclusion of which the entire force witnessed the film as the guests of the management.

These few stunts proved to be the necessary punch to get across the fact that the Iowa was featuring a production out of the ordinary.

Teddy Is Now In Hollywood; Drop Him A Line Or So

It was with a great deal of pleasure that we heard of the promotion of Teddy McDonald, former publicity director of the Rivoli Theatre in West Haven, Conn., to the staff of publicists comprising the Pacific Coast studios of Universal Pictures.

McDonald, who as you all know was very active in his old position, his many efforts appearing on our pages every now and then, is attached to the office of John Leroy Johnson. whom we happen to know.

"Teddy"

Just before leaving the Rivoli Theatre McDonald turned out another of his "laugh heralds" on "The Big Pond" and we are reprinting it here so that you can get a look at it. It was made up in black on good stock yellow cardboard. As in this case it is unnecessary, we have omitted the name of the picture and theatre. Look over the copy and remember that it can be used on any number of pictures.

HEALTH NOTICE

NOW IS THE TIME TO TAKE YOUR LAUGH MEDICINE

The new germ (Blomi Probiscus) isolated by that eminent physician, Ivor Nastikoff, is said to be pale blue in color; hence the term "feeling blue." It is the deadly enemy of the Red Germ which permeates the blood of healthy persons. Whether your Red Germs can repulse the Blue or Flue Germs depends on the condition of the blood which in turn depends on the action of the heart. Any doctor will tell you that the action of laughter expels from your lungs every particle of stale air. That is why people say it leaves them breathless. The reaction causes you to take deep draughts of fresh air. Ask your medical adviser what deep breathing will do for you. Deep breathing stimulates the action of the heart, sending the blood (and the red germs) coursing more quickly through your veins and giving your body a rise in temperature which enables it to resist cold. Many people today spend dollars in vibratory treatment, but the cheapest form of vibration (and most pleasant to take) is to shake with laughter, which you most certainly will do when you see—

McDonald is the youngest publicity man in any studio in Hollywood. He promises to keep us posted on the work he is doing out there and to let us see any other work that is turned out. We want to congratulate him on his new position and we are sure that if he displays the same kind of work he did while in West Haven, he will more than make good.

And, incidentally, Teddy tells us that if any of you men want to secure some dope on what Universal is doing with their new product, drop him a line and he'll be more than glad to give you all of the information he can. Address him in care of the Universal Studios and see how quick he is to reply.

S. Farrar Flooded Fair With Heralds Plugging His Show

With a county fair as competition for him it was only fair that Steve Farrar, Managing Director of the Orpheum and Casino Theatres in Harrisburg and Eldorado, Ill., grab some publicity for his houses.

In order to do this he made up some novelty pluggers in the form of cards measuring 3½ by 2¾ inches, printed on colored stocks. One side of the card was devoted to a sales talk on the theatre's policy with the other side containing a gag in the form of bold type copy samples of which were "Partners Wanted," Do You Love Me?" "Choose Me" and things of like nature.

A boy, covered with the cards, gave away thousands of them at the fair to anyone requesting them. Pins were also supplied and it was very amusing to see children and adults walking about the fair grounds with the various pert cracks pinned onto their clothing. But it saved the day for Farrar as a good many people visited the theatres at the matinee and the last evening show.

Another stunt he is using, and it is an angle you should note, is that of supplying school children with blotters as an institutional plug for his theatre. In this manner he anticipates keeping the house before the kids all during the school term. Here's something that you too will no doubt take advantage of, and in case you add a couple of novel touches we hope that you will pass them along to your fellow members. We are glad to note that Steve is right there, as wide-awake as ever, and we know he will continue his activity.

Rhodes Featured Cooking Show On Stage For Ladies

Realizing the tremendous importance attached to showmanship many commercial enterprises have gladly consented to co-operate with showmen on plans that would be of mutual benefit. Accordingly, the showmen have tried to lay out their campaigns in such a manner so as to work in some form of merchandise other than amusement.

When B. J. Rhodes, manager of the Majestic in Gettysburg, Pa., played the "New Movietone Follies" he decided to boost up his matinee business. To do this he tied up with the local Edison Company and they arranged to conduct a demonstration of cooking on the stage of the theatre using an electric range and a nationally known oven. In order to advertise the display he imprinted the backs of his heralds with the notice and it is interesting to note that a great many women were present on the appointed day.

The stunt went over in fine style and at the close of the matinee, the dinner was given to the person holding the ticket stub number that corresponded with the one called from the stage. A cake and a delicious pie, baked on the stage, were also donated in like manner. The Edison Company were more than pleased at the number of requests received regarding information on their product and it is easy to see that Rhodes was also elated, since he had managed to boost up business and secure publicity and good-will at the same time.

We are very glad to pass along this example of what Rhodes is doing to keep them coming to his house and we know that if any of our members can use a stunt of this sort they will more than take advantage of it.

Allen Stepping Along!

Just a few weeks in New York and already making them sit up and take notice! That's the record that Wally Allen, former publicity chief for the Publix Southern Florida division is hanging up.

Wally is now attached to the office of Oscar Doob, head of the Loew Theatre exploitation force with headquarters in New York City. His duties take him over to New Jersey and up to Yonkers in addition to the city houses. The latest work that we have on hand regarding Wally's activity is a photo of a giant invitation he had delivered, via an Austin car, to all of the Borough Presidents in Greater New York, the stunt rating plenty of newspaper publicity and word-of-mouth comment.

Starting off auspiciously with his school tie-ups in an attempt to inform the teachers and students that all through the new term they will find plenty of entertainment in the Loew houses, Wally is going to follow through with a bunch of new ones in an attempt to break the knockout record he created while he was connected with the Publix organization. Good luck, Wally.

"Border Legion" Front Display Was Fine Showmanship

So many requests have been received at Club headquarters requesting the publication of more pictures of theatre fronts, that we are glad to be able to pass along any meritorious efforts that are submitted to us. And now here's one from H. C. Winham, manager of the Rapides Theatres, Alexandria, Texas, and we are sure, if you will look it over carefully, you will find a few angles that may fit in with something you are planning.

The marquee at this theatre is unusually long—perhaps more than twice the length of the average theatre's marquee. Extending the full length of the marquee Winham had constructed a log cabin effect. The effect was built against the front of the theatre and did not extend to the curb of the sidewalk as has been done in some instances.

About the main entrance way was a sign giving names of cast, while on the left over a small entrance and exit door appeared, "Zane Grey's stirring romance" and on the other side over another small entrance-exit, appeared the title of picture. Two large heads from the 24-sheets, one of Jack Holt and one of Richard Arlen, were used on either side of the cabin. The theatre front had a lot to do with publicizing the picture as was evidenced from the number of favorable comments heard.

The front was one of the highlights of the picture's campaign. Thanks, "H. C.," for letting us see this one, particularly since a number of our members down around your territory have requested something like it.

THEATRES AND TEACHERS!

Here's a corking good gag which originated in Oscar Doob's office up at Loew's Inc. A little attention to the make-up and text will reveal its outstanding appeal in a stunt of this kind. The original was printed on good stock measuring about eight by ten inches. Read it over, boys, and see if the idea holds any value for you and your theatre.

Bryan And Puckett Are Doing Publicity Over In New Jersey

Bunny Bryan has been transferred from New England to New Jersey, as publicity director of that state for Paramount Publix with headquarters at the Paramount on the Boardwalk, Asbury Park. Ray Pucket went along from New England with Bryan and is now functioning as district publicity director for Publix in Perth Amboy, Plainfield and Red Bank, with headquarters at Perth Amboy.

Bryan has brought along some of his New England efficiency to New Jersey, judging from the following activities. In conjunction with Manager R. K. Stonebrook of the Asbury Park Paramount, Bryan promoted 30,000 animal crackers from the local National Biscuit Co. headquarters. Two crackers were placed in an envelope with suitable sales copy on the envelope, and handed to patrons as they were leaving the theatre. Twenty downtown stores were tied up with full window displays in connection with the Asbury Park local showing of "Animal Crackers."

At the Paramount Publix Mayfair, Asbury Park, Manager Bob Jonnasson and Bunny contracted the editor of the Asbury Park Press, the very conservative local newspaper, and the following afternoon the paper broke with a front page box on Jonnasson's Mayfair Third Anniversary. Story was built around a search for babies born on Aug. 3, 4 or 5. Lucky babies would each be given a five dollar deposit in a local bank's savings department, deposit promoted by the showmen. A. Goldsmith, manager of the Paramount Publix Savoy, the only house in Asbury Park playing legitimate stage shows, took advantage of the action taken by Cardinal Hayes against profane shows, obtained an interview with William Brady, producer of the Savoy's current show, and the interview crashed the front page of both the Asbury Park and Long Branch dailies with cuts of Brady and one column stories.

Puckett obtained some real action in Perth Amboy by cooperating with Manager Zanzaleri of the Paramount Publix Strand in arranging for a parade in connection with the Perth Amboy showing of "All Quiet on the Western Front." The parade along with an unusual war relic lobby display and front is believed responsible for the phenomenal business shown by "All Quiet."

Puckett and Bryan are now engaged in working on the opening campaign for the Plainfield Paramount, a beautiful house soon to be opened in Plainfield, N. J.

These few activities are typical of the work now being shown in these houses since their acquisition by Publix. We want to thank Bunny for letting us see this initial work and we know that he is going to follow it right up with some more that will give you new slants on show selling, as it is done in New Jersey.

Miniature Track In Lobby Helped Sell Rice's Show

One way to insure attracting attention to your coming attractions is to feature a display that will express motion; and when H. W. Rice, manager of the Saenger Temple Theatre in Meridian, Miss., constructed his novel display for "Burning Up," it attracted plenty of attention.

The lobby display consisted of a miniature race track and grandstand with a background framed with color and flitter together with stills placed all around.

Two small cars were borrowed from a store and these were placed on a belt that was pulled by a motor. The cars were so placed that it gave the impression they were racing each other. The mechanical display was used for four days in advance and throughout showing a picture.

A tie-up with the DeSota agency resulted in their having a DeSota Straight Eight with radio attachment bannered and on streets for two days in advance. Signs on the car also stated that a guessing contest would be held on how far the car would run on five gallons of gasoline.

The DeSota was placed in front of the theatre and fenced off to keep people away from it. As the motor purred along at a certain speed, one of the ushers nearby told the many onlookers about the contest and handed out the estimate blanks.

Both the mechanical lobby display and the DeSota tie-up helped immeasurably in making the picture a most popular attraction. This angle has long been proven a very helpful one. A good many showmen throughout the country use it every once in a while as it is always good for attracting interest and comment, as well as securing the good-will of the dealer with whom the tie-up is made.

Thanks "H. W." for passing this along to us. And by the way, you know we're still waiting for that photograph of yourself so that we can give you a regular introduction. How about including it in your next contribution?

HARRY M. ECCLES says:

"This is Monday and I am looking forward to the arrival of the NEWS tomorrow. It certainly is like seeing an old friend to be able to keep in touch with all the boys I have known in the old and better days."

Did These Go Over? Read This and See How Hewitt Did It

A stunt that more than woke them up in Robinson, Ill., was pulled recently by Joe Hewitt, manager of the Lincoln Theatre in Robinson, Ill., and, as a matter of fact, they are still talking about it.

Two weeks ahead of the showing of "Common Clay" Hewitt placed 30 boxes of various sizes in front of stores and on street corners. The boxes had formerly served as fruit crates but a little paint and a couple of extra slats transformed them into something that would catch the eye. The boxes were painted green and filled with common clay. A small sign, stuck in a split stick of orange hue, was placed in the center. The sign carried nothing but the title "Common Clay." In addition to this, paper plates, filled with clay and carrying the same sign, were placed on counters and in store windows about the town.

The comment caused by this teaser enticed more curiosity than anything that the theatre had pulled for years. Everyone was asking the other the meaning; and storekeepers were kept busy answering inquiries. Some wag started the report that it was a sample of money that was going to be adopted by farmers and this spread all over town causing widespread comment. The stunt was further carried out on the highways leading into the town. Mud letters sprayed with whiting were moulded along the road and motorists were bound to see the title "Common Clay." In the photo we are showing you may see the way Hewitt lettered the doors of the theatre and enhanced the effect by placing clay all over them. Children were barred from attending the show unless accompanied by their parents and this too helped business.

A few days before the opening the newspaper ads broke with the announcement, with heralds being distributed right after it. The success of the campaign was seen in the record-breaking business that the theatre enjoyed. We want to thank Hewitt for passing this along to us as we are sure that it will be met with open arms by his fellow showmen who may have this picture booked in; and even if they are not going to play it we know that they will hang onto the stunt until such time as they can use it. Keep up the good work, Joe, and let's hear from you again; and listen, when you send in your next contribution include your photo and a little dope about yourself so that we can give you an introduction.

J. Nelson Bryant Is Now Handling The Tivoli Theatre

His many friends will doubtless be glad to know that J. Nelson Bryant has been placed at the head of the Fox Tivoli Theatre in Jersey City, New Jersey.

The Tivoli is one of the best of the first runs in Jersey City and with so capable a man as Bryant handling it we know that it is going to be heard from even more than it is. Bryant has been stepping right along since leaving the Cameo to go with Fox when that organization took over the State as assistant to Jack Keale, who incidentally is now the city manager of the district. When the State Theatre closed he went to the Capitol to assist his old friend Mike Neary where he stayed until his present promotion.

He is well liked by his fellow managers in the division and as we happen to know that he is a hustler we are pretty sure we are going to hear some more about him in the very near future. We would like to know what he is doing along the lines of selling his shows and we hope that he will favor us with an account of the ways and means. What do you say, Nelson?

Milkman Delivered Ken Hoel's Heralds All Along Route

Through a tie-up with his local milk company, Ken Hoel, manager of the Harris Theatre in Findlay, Ohio, was enabled to successfully distribute a number of heralds plugging "The Dawn Patrol."

The milk company's dawn aviators—the milkmen—placed a herald on every bottle of milk they delivered, attaching it to the bottle by means of a rubber band. The heralds carried copy stating "The Milkman is your 'Dawn Patrol,' Every day through all kinds of weather. 'The Dawn Patrol' of milk wagons bring you, etc." The heralds then went on to plug the quality of the milk and the quality of the film.

In addition to this stunt on the picture's selling campaign, Hoel also managed to promote a full page co-operative ad from the local dealers in which the name of the picture and the theatre were prominently displayed in every ad. This angle helped him to boost up business a number of dollars extra and at the same time enabled him to secure the good-will of the local merchants.

We are glad to note that Ken is still displaying his well known brand of showmanship out there in Findlay.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

HERE'S THE REAL SCHOOL OF SHOWMANSHIP!

And These Men Agree With Us!

GEORGE N. THOMPSON is the manager of the North Park Theatre in San Diego, Calif. While we met Mr. Thompson personally when we were on our recent tour, we did not have time to get a look at his house and his show-selling methods, but we know he is going to remedy this by keeping us supplied with accounts of what he does to keep the box-office humming.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

E. B. HANDS, JR., manages the Saenger Theatre in Texarkana, Texas, for the Publix circuit. Hands' work is well known by the managers around his district and with competition between them strong, to determine who is turning out the best of stunts, he has to do some tall stepping to keep in the front. How he is accomplishing this may be seen from time to time on our pages, as we are sure "E. B." is going to be an active member and contributor.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

HARRY MULLER manages the State Theatre in Anderson, Ill. His town is not unknown to us, as we recall passing through it some years ago while we were looking over some western cities. We want to welcome him into the Club and hope to hear from him soon regarding his work, and we'd also like his photo so that we can give him a regular introduction.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

J. G. HRUBY is the manager of the Harvey Theatre in Harvey, Ill. Since he has been located at the Harvey Mr. Hruby has been displaying some excellent showmanship that has resulted in box-office increase. He is well liked by the various merchants in the town and this angle tends to permit his use of some good stunts. Let's hear from you, "J. G.," regarding some of your activities so that we can pass them along.

FLOYD G. FITZSIMMONS is an advertising-publicity man working out of the Paramount-Publix home office. Mr. Fitzsimmons has some notable pieces of showmanship to his credit and it is interesting to note that he is heartily endorsed for Club membership by W. H. Bergman of the Empress Theatre in Fremont, Neb., who is no slouch himself when it comes to turning out corking showmanship. We want to welcome Mr. Fitzsimmons into the Club and we hope he will keep us supplied with accounts of what he is doing.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ELLIOTT JOHNSON is the manager of the Saenger and Grand Theatres in Hope, Ark. With two houses on his hands, Mr. Johnson is no doubt very busy, but we hope he will find time to sit down and let us know what he is doing to bring them in to the box-office. And when he sends us in his next contribution we would like to find his photo enclosed with it. How about it, Elliott?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

PHILLIP D. BLOOMBURG manages the Paramount Theatre in Salem, Mass. Mr. Bloomburg has been turning out some good work in his section of the country, and we would like to see some of it, particularly since the New England showmen have proven themselves to be very active. Let's have a look at it Phil, and at the same time shoot us in a photo of yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

EDWARD J. KANE is the assistant manager of the Strand Theatre in Oswego, New York, for the Fox outfit. This up-state division of showmen have been making quite a rep for themselves over the circuit and we think Mr. Kane is fortunate to be working with them because he is sure to pick up plenty of knowledge regarding the why and wherefores of the selling end of the show business. Welcome into the Club, Edward, and keep in touch with us.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

VICTOR FRANK is the assistant manager of the State Theatre in Syracuse, New York. We are well acquainted with the Syracuse State and we also know that Mr. Saxton, the manager, is a showman of wide experience, having been in the game for a number of years. We think that Frank is going to profit by his association with him and we hope soon to announce his promotion to a house of his own.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ROBERT T. ENOCH assists Bill Levey in the running of the Beacon Theatre, Port Washington, Long Island. That alone should be enough for us to say, since Bill's work does all his talking. We feel that this young man will secure a wonderful training course in showmanship working with Levey, and, as we happen to know that he is willing to learn, having had the experience of working in a house at Parkersburg, W. Va., and now looking for still more training, we think he will be running his own house one of these days. Keep it up, Bob, and keep us posted on what you are doing to help Bill keep the Beacon up among the best run houses on Long Island.

DON PHILLIPS is the manager of the Lyric in Colby, Kansas. Mr. Phillips has followed the activities of the showmen who make up the Round Table Club for so long that he has decided it is about time for him to jump in line, so he forwards his application. We are glad to welcome him into the Club and we hope that he will keep us in touch with his work in order that his fellow members may get a line on his showmanship.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

M. L. SEVY is the assistant manager of the Lyric Theatre in Charleston, W. Va. With the recommendation from his manager, T. A. Boradaile of "A very efficient employee," he must be working pretty hard to help Mr. Boradaile put his shows across. Let's hear from you again, "M. L.," and give us some dope on what you are doing to help your manager keep his house going along with a profit.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WILFRED BURNS is the manager of the Princess Theatre in Joliet, Ill. Our rolls number a great many active showmen from his state and we are sure that Mr. Burns is hustling right along with them. In order that we may know more about your work and your town, Wilfred, why not drop us a couple of lines setting forth your methods so that we can pass them along?

COMPLETE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut toward such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features which are finished or are in work, but to which release dates have not been assigned, are listed in "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the distributor. Where they vary in different cities or towns, the change is probably due to state or local censorship deletions.
